First put the milk on to scald. Measure the ½ cup lukewarm water. To it add the 1 teaspoon or cube of sugar. Sprinkle the yeast on top and let soak for 10 minutes or until it rises to top of cup. Measure the brown sugar, shortening and salt into your clean dishpan. (If you do not have a dishpan use your preserving kettle for mixing a large amount of dough.) As soon as the milk begins to bubble at the edges remove it from the heat and pour it over the sugar and shortening and salt. Add the lukewarm water. As soon as this liquid feels lukewarm to your hand add the yeast liquid and the wheat germ, and 7 cups of the whole wheat flour. Add the 4 cups of the white flour and mix in with your clean hands as well as you can. Sprinkle your kneading counter with remaining 1 cup whole wheat flour and knead dough out onto it and knead 200 times. Return to dishpan. Butter or grease or oil top; cover with 2 towels and let rise until more than doubled and light - about 2½ hours at 70 deg. Fahr. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead 200 times. Cut into 4 even pieces. Shape into loaves. Put in 4 greased or buttered standard loaf pans and let rise until at least 1" above rims of pans. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 50 minutes or until rich gold and loaves sound hollow when tapped. Cool on racks.

WE GET LETTERS . . .

Dear Pegg Rogers:

I would be very grateful if you could give me some hints on make-up and what clothes suit me best. When I shop for clothes, I really don't know what to buy. I am five feet, four inches tall, weigh one hundred and twenty-pounds, have brown hair, green eyes and a fair skin. I am twenty-two years old. I love blue, but my friends say I shou' not wear it, as my eyes are green. I also like red, but I wonder if this color is not too loud for a married woman? What color lipstick is best for me? At present, I wear a dark red. How much jewelry should I wear with a sweater? Do sweaters go with suits? I haven't a blouse to wear with mine. I like sweaters better than blouses anyway. — Signed Mrs. F. O.

COMPLEMENTARY BLOUSES

Dear Mrs. F. O.

I see no reason why you should not wear blue with mauve that color. There are so many lovely shades of blue, which will complement your green eyes. Try to find a blue with strong green tones, such as a near aqua or turquoise shade. The lighter, truer blues might tend to make you a little pale. (These, perhaps, are the blues that your friends say you should avoid.) Certain shades of red also be flattering — those with a blue undertone, especially. Because the eyes, sleazy, sharp rods are startling and strong in tone, one tires of them easily. A married woman in twenty-two does not have to confine herself to dark colors! (How would that make your husband feel?)

You say that you wear a dark, red lipstick. This may be the reason why some blues are not becoming. Lipsticks and rouges in heavy, dark tones are also too theatrical and aging. With your clear, pale skin tones and your green eyes, light shades of pink, peach and red will suit you best.

METAL CHAIN ROPES

A sweater, if it is the pull-over type, looks well with ropes of metal chains or beaded ropes. There are some lovely ones around this season, in beautiful colors. The plastic look is

U.C.W. Plans Coming Events

SHANNONVILLE — Shannonville United Church Women held their regular monthly meeting in the evening in the church hall.

Mrs. Asa Cook, president, welcomed the ladies and opened the meeting.

Mrs. Malcolm Little was in charge of the devotional, the theme being "Growing Magnanimity."

Mrs. James Kirk read the Scripture passages which were taken from Isaiah, and Mrs. A. Robertson gave the meditation. The Scripture passages had been selected as evidence of the Spirit of Magnanimity which gradually appeared in the later writings of Israel's prophets and writers.

They refer to attributes and functions of individuals, the first being the Messiah and the second the "Suffering Servant."

Many scholars think that these characters may be personified and God would work out His righteous purposes through these passages.

But they were men to whom revelations about the true nature of God had come and as they proclaimed the truth they turn proclaimed the new meaning for man and his society.

Mrs. A. Robertson filled in for the secretary, who was unable to attend.

The business was conducted by the president, Mrs. Cook.

Thanks were expressed by Mrs. Westcott for cards of sympathy sent to her during her sad bereavement; also Mrs. Ross expressed thanks for the cards sent to her while ill.

THANKS FOR FAVORS

Letters of thanks are to be sent to the male choir from Kingston who entertained at the recent "pie social", also to Mr. Kuntze for the use of the Kiwanis Centre for the rummage sale.

A note was also received from Bellaway Street Church, thanking the ladies for the invitation to the Spring Tea and saying they would try to attend.

It was decided to purchase a refrigerator for the kitchen. A new steam cupboard has recently been installed and was much admired by the ladies.

Mrs. Cook thanked everyone who had helped make the recent activities a success.

Plans were finalized for the "Spring Tea." It was decided to hold the Strawberry Social in June.

Articles for the bale are to be brought in to the June meeting.

Mrs. Little thanked her group for help on the program and lunch.

There is to be a potluck dinner and quilting later on in May, and the next meeting will be in the afternoon in June.

After Mrs. Cook closed the meeting lunch was served by Mrs. Little and her group.

Women's Activities

FRANKFORD U.C.W.

FRANKFORD — Frankford United Church Women, unit one, met last Thursday afternoon in Ross Lowery Hall, with 20 members and three visitors present.

The president, Mrs. S. Lewis opened the meeting in the usual manner. Mrs. George Montgomery was in charge of the program based on "Mother's Day" with Mrs. Ed McGeeachy and Mrs. N. Woodcox assisting. A vocal solo "Mother's Day is Here" was rendered by Mrs. C. Judd. Mrs. Raymond Rowe gave a narration on the film "The Future is in Their Hands" from the Study Book, "The Rim of Asia". Mrs. Charlie Bennett read two poems in connection with Mother's Day.

Business portion of the meeting followed during which time it was noted that the June committees will be Mrs. J. Beach, Mrs. W. Scott and Mrs. L. Badgley.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

Question: Could you please say something in your column soon about the discourtesy of men who walk through a door and never think to hold it for a person who might be just behind them. Maybe they think they don't have to hold it for a mere male, but I've been slapped in the face so many times by doors left swinging by thoughtless females that I thought it was about time I took a stand on the issue — and I hope you will too. — A.T., Philadelphia, Pa.

Answer: This is a slight courtesy that takes only a second, but so many women can't seem to take time out for it. Many will hold a door for another woman but think a man doesn't deserve it — or expect it. This small consideration. A woman should always check to see if anyone is behind her before she lets a door close. If a person is far enough away that she might have to hold the door for more than a second or so, then she may go through and let it close gently — or not. But if someone is treading on her heels, she should hold it long enough to get a hand. Hold to keep it open before it slams in his face. A woman always expects this courtesy but should remember that turnabout is fair play — and good manners.

Question: My son will be six next month and I'm planning to give a birthday party for him. It will be his first really big one and he wants to invite many of his classmates from kindergarten. Both girls and boys will be included. Since I've never sent invitations to young children before, how should they be addressed on the envelopes? Is a boy addressed "Master" and a girl as "Miss" or "Mistress"? How far in advance should the invitation be sent? We moved to this area only recently and, since I don't know most of the parents, I want the invitations to create a good impression for my son.—Mrs. V. deS., East Orange, N.J.

Answer: Until his 13th birthday a boy is addressed as "Master" on all correspondence. A girl, regardless of her age, is always addressed as "Miss." "Mistress" is never used, even for a junior miss. Invitations should be sent at least a week in advance. It's wise to include your phone number along with R.S.V.P. so mothers can reply promptly and make arrangements directly if there are any transportation problems to be ironed out.

RAWDON — Sixteen ladies and two children attended the May meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon U.C.W., at the church hall, on Thursday after noon.

Vice-president Mrs. Harry McAdam opened the meeting, and Mrs. Garth Joslin officiated at the piano. The usual reports were presented and correspondence included an invitation to Hoard's. The supply secretary would like to have the donations in by May 29th, in order to get the bale.

Mrs. Robert H. Hoard presided over the program, based on "The Christian Family" and the Scripture was centred on this theme. Mrs. James Hoard sang "Bless This House." Mrs. Burton Sharpe read an article re "Changing Homes." The convener read a story entitled "Carry a Little Honey" and thus sweeten the lives of others. Mrs. Thomas Sarfe read a poem, entitled "Mother."

STUDY CHAPTER

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a summary of the study chapter dealing with Okinawa and she displayed pictures of that island fortress. She said that it is close to the tropics with numerous open plains and is 60 miles long, and ranges from two to 12 miles wide. This island is the largest and most important of the various islands of the Ryukyus, which stretch from Alaska across the Aleutians to Taiwan, a distance of 775 miles.

Since June of 1945, over 60,000 Americans have brought economic prosperity to the island. The officers, enlisted men and their chaplains have contributed a large amount of money to build churches, provide literature and send students to Japan for further study. The first Protestant missionary came in 1846. Today they have 23 organized congregations, 30 preaching places and more than 1,400 Protestant members.

Three boards in the United States have formed "The Church of Christ" in Okinawa. The church operates two small hospitals, a dispensary, a leper, two nurseries for children of working mothers, a modern orphanage and a rural Christian centre.

MANY WORKERS

Many doctors, nurses, welfare workers, agriculturists, educators, and preachers are active in the ministry of the United Church in the Ryukyu Chain of Islands. The Women's Societies of the United Church have 600 active members. The government has established the first university in the Islands' and many of the teachers are both Christian and outstanding scholars.

The Okinawans are a pleasant, peaceful, tolerant group, they love dancing and singing lullabies, working and fishing songs. Fifty thousand people work for the American military authorities and still there is unemployment. There are many local problems and much yet to be accomplished.

INTERVIEW ON INDIA

Mrs. Herbert Smith gave a summary of Nepal, one of the most unknown and mysterious countries in the world. She displayed a map and told of the two missionaries, Dr. Helen Hutton and Miss Edna Clysdale, who have been there since 1954. The church has just opened a sanctuary in Katmandu where 85 people worship regularly. The mission is not allowed to teach religion but may provide medical, agricultural and educational work in the name of Jesus Christ. This is a co-operative enterprise which started in 1954, when the Rev. Floyd Honey of the Board of World Missions visited Dr. Huston in Nepal. India he had an interview which was recently published in "The Observer". This was read by two ladies as a question and answer story.

Declaring Bankruptcy Perfectly Legal Action

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Several years ago my husband and I got so deeply in debt we didn't know what to do. My husband went to see a friend about borrowing some money. The friend advised him to file a petition in bankruptcy. My husband took his advice because it seemed to be the only way out.

I haven't had a good night's sleep since. I keep going over the list of people we owe money to and it's driving me crazy. My husband says I am nuts — that a lot of decent people go through bankruptcy and it's a perfectly honest and legal way to get out from under.

All his talking doesn't help. I still feel guilty. We owe a few small bills now but if I went back to work I would be able to clear them up and start to repay the people who lost on us. Am I nuts as my husband says, or should I go ahead and do it? — CONSCIENCE.

DEAR CONSCIENCE — Go ahead and do it. You'll never have peace of mind until you do.

First pay your current obligations. Then write or phone the people who lost money on you and tell them you will begin to repay them soon. You'll feel better immediately.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A very handsome guy named Harry asked me to go steady with him last winter. I was thrilled and accepted. After a few weeks I noticed that my whole life was regulated by basketball. If Harry played a good game everything was peaches and cream. If his game was off he'd get surly and pick a fight over nothing.

The night Harry's team lost the city championship he was in such a foul mood he called me a few names you wouldn't print and broke our date for the next evening, which was a big school dance. It was then that I decided to call off our steady engagement.

Now that basketball season is over he's begging me to go steady again. He says basketball was to blame for all our problems and now we will get along like two little love birds. Shall I take a chance? I like him a lot. — KITTEN.

DEAR KITTEN — If it's not basketball it will be something else. Like a great many other people, Harry takes out his frustration and anger on the handiest object. This is called "displacement."

Dat Harry occasionally but don't go steady with him — or with anyone else.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please stop telling people it's all right to put the dog's dish in the dishwater with the family plates. Hot water and soap do not kill every kind of germ. If this were true hospitals would not need sterilizers. Even boiling water does not kill all bacteria, especially spores of fungi.

A dog should have his own dish and it should not be washed with those used by human beings. The notion that a dog's mouth is cleaner than a human's mouth is folklore — notwithstanding the phrase "as clean as a hound's tooth."

We know very little about some diseases and how they are transmitted. Since animals do transmit some diseases to man it is wise to observe sanitary precautions. — T.B.M.—EMERITUS MAYO CLINIC.

DEAR T.B.M. — My authorities tell me that you are indeed correct — hot water and soap do not kill all germs. Most animals, however, (like most humans), are not infected and therefore routine precautions are sufficient. When handling sick animals — as when dealing with sick humans — stringent sterilizing procedures are essential.

The person who wishes to take no chances would wash the dog's dishes separately.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper.

OMA Approves Proposed Plan On Medicare

TORONTO (CP)—The council of the Ontario Medical Association has approved proposed Ontario legislation on medical insurance.

The council is the ruling body of the 7,000-member association.

Retiring president Dr. R. Bruce Lockhart of Sudbury said the medical care bill protects the principle of freedom for both doctor and patient as defined in the association's brief to the royal commission on health services last year.

The council said, however, some important issues remain to be solved before the legislation is passed. It said it has instructed its officers to continue discussions with proper authorities on details not included in the bill.

INSTRUCT BOARD

The council also instructed its board of directors to present a brief to the public committee which will examine the legislation later this year to ensure that the principles of individual freedom and personal responsibility contained in the draft bill will be preserved in the final bill.

Premier Robarts introduced legislation April 22 outlining the proposed system. It will be considered by the committee and brought before the House next session.

The draft bill provided that every "service plan, licensed insurer or other provider of medical services insurance must make available a standard medical services contract as defined in the bill, to every resident of Ontario who wishes to purchase it, regardless of age, physical condition or financial circumstances."

The trouble, in the eyes of Canadian experts, is that Canada no longer has any "horses" to trade. So it wants a new set of ground rules that after he barter system now practiced.

The concept of air principles governing the bilateral was first advocated by Canada about two years ago.

At that time, the Americans were reported to view the idea coldly. However, there is some hope here now that the new spirit of accord stemming from the Kennedy-Pearson meeting may make the Americans more amenable to the Canadian viewpoint.

Among the amateur space fans perhaps none is so rabid in its enthusiasm as the group of science - minded youngsters from junior and senior high schools in the Cape Canaveral area who set up an elaborate tracking station on a motel roof.

The motel is one in which several of the astronauts have a financial interest. Most of the tracking equipment, including a huge radar scanner and a closed circuit television loop, was scrounged from industrial and government supply sources.

As always on shot day, the motel signs on Cocoa Beach, the nearest community to the cape, have blossomed with messages of good luck and bon voyage.

"Our prayers and hopes go with Gordon Cooper," says a typical marquee.

The motel bar that used to give free drinks while an astronaut was aloft has decided to forego that bit of festivity in the interests of solvency, since the flight will last so long.

fiscal year. This had been prepared, but not yet printed in both English and French versions.

It's understood that the new Liberal government, early in the new Parliament opening Thursday, will introduce this spending budget as it was written, reserving the right to make amendments later.

BUSINESS HANGING

The new parliament also faces some unfinished business in the form of last year's spending program.

The last Parliament didn't get around to voting approval of any of last year's spending estimates. The government operated on temporary votes of money supply until Parliament dissolved. Since then it has paid its bills through special Governor-General's warrants—a total $1,256,702,633 for the four months February-May.

Mr. Pearson has indicated that the new session will take a summer adjournment about two months after it opens, and meet again in September to finish its work.

With that schedule, there would be time enough for approval of the budget before the summer recess but not enough time for passage of the new spending program. It's likely the government will ask for interim spending authority to tide it over until fall when the expenditures will come up for approval item by item.

Balky Gantry

trenched on the couches of their space capsules.

Alan Shepard, Scott Carpenter and Walter Schirra also went through postponements, but all occurred before they entered the capsule.

The postponement today was the fourth in four months for Coopr's mission.

A large recovery fleet of 28 ships, 125 planes and 19,000 people on a string out around the world to recover the astronaut no matter where he landed. It will remain on station until the launching is rescheduled.

Before the crucial radar trouble at Bermuda threw a monkey wrench into today's plans, officials had been confident. They announced that they were changing the latest possible launch time from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m., giving scientists an extra 90 minutes to get the rocket off the ground.

The launching had been scheduled for 8 a.m. EDT at the earliest and the countdown had proceeded smoothly to within 40 minutes of that goal. But at 8 a.m. the National Atronautics and Space Administration announced a hold in the countdown because the giant service tower could not be moved in time.

An official said technicians were having difficulty starting a diesel engine which operates the tower. At the same time Mercury Control Centre reported that a power cord—called an umbilical cord—accidentally became disconnected from the spacecraft.

This problem was corrected in about 15 minutes but at 9:30 a.m. the service tower problem had not been solved.

The umbilical line feeds electrical power to the capsule until just before lift-off. When it fell away Cooper's Faith 7 capsule was essentially in a flight configuration. He no longer could use the telephone which connected him to the control centre and the blockhouse and he had to shift to his UHF radio to maintain contact.

For the 15-minute period, the capsule systems ran on batteries instead of the external power provided by the umbilical.

The service tower is 125 feet tall and weighs 450 tons. The diesel engine moves it on railroad tracks at a maximum speed of five miles an hour. Before launching, it is transported to a point about 500 feet from the rocket and locked in place on the tracks.

Once the gantry is moved away, the Atlas still must go through its most critical countdown checklist, including the loading of the volatile liquid oxygen which serves as an oxidizer for the missile fuel once the Atlas rises above the oxygen-free atmosphere.

EAGER AND READY

The astronaut was eager to fly as he slipped into his capsule couch.

Cooper was awakened at 2:30 a.m. EDT. He showered, shaved and ate the traditional flight-day breakfast of the astronauts: Orange juice, scrambled eggs, a small steak and toast. His breakfast companions were astronauts Walter Schirra and Donald K. (Deke) Slayton, Walter Williams, project Mercury flight director, and Robert R. Gilruth, director of manned space flight.

Says Sex Not a Joke to Girls At Universities

KINGSTON (CP)—Sex is the foremost thought in the minds of female students at the University of British Columbia, says Professor Helen McCrae, dean of women at the university.

Prof. McCrae, speaking Sunday to a conference at Queen's University on student mental health, said sex is not a joke to girls at UBC. The professor has conducted weekly discussion groups during which the girls talk over their problems.

"Sex is very much on the minds of girls I talk to," she said. "Careers and sex, but sex first."

Dr. Graham B. Blaine Jr., a psychiatrist with the Harvard University health service, said promiscuity among females and impotence among males, are the dominant problems which most often send students to seek the advice of the psychiatric service.

Dr. Blaine said female promiscuity results from the girls' "own loneliness and need for love and affection. . . . It is not sex they need, but love."

The conference was sponsored jointly by the Canadian Mental Health Association, the National Federation of Canadian University Students the World University Service of Canada.

He said impotence among males is a temporary situation resulting mainly from the pressure of college customs that push them toward experiences for which they are not prepared.

The consensus among speakers was that university health services are winning the trust of students and that more students are coming forward with their problems.

FINDS OPTIMISM

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal university professor who made a European economic study on a Canada Council grant says he found "more optimism about the future of Canada in Europe than there is in Canada." Arthur Lermer, chairman of the economics department of Sir George Williams University, said at a press conference Friday: "Almost every (European) economist I met spoke of the great future for Canada and the potential of this country."

Belgian King Gets Bussed By the Queen

LONDON (AP)—King Baudouin of the Belgians was warmly welcomed to Britain today by a kiss from Queen Elizabeth.

Baudouin's wife, Fabiola, 34, and Elizabeth's husband Philip looked on approvingly.

It was a kiss on the cheek planted before hundreds of onlookers on a chilly railway platform at London's Victoria Station.

Shivering slightly in the cold wind, Queen Elizabeth walked out on the long red welcoming carpet just as the royal train from Gatwick Airport chugged into view.

The royal kiss seemed to set just the right tone for this first state visit to Britain by a Belgian monarch since 1937. It ended long persisting rumors of coolness between the British and Belgian royal families.

Racial Strife

Birmingham bi-racial committee who worked out an agreement to end mass demonstrations by Negroes "deserve to see it implemented in an atmosphere of law and order." The Negroes are demonstrating to enforce their demands for integration and equality with whites.

Jackie Robinson and Floyd Patterson spoke to Negroes at a mass meeting Monday night and said Negroes here are fighting to end segregation everywhere.

A Negro reserve police captain said that state troopers prevented him from using 62 uniformed Negro reserves to help quell the rioting that followed Saturday night's bombings.

Police said no arrests have been made in their investigation of the bombings. The FBI is working on the case, too, but has made no report.

Successful Living

'A Miracle Happened'

DEAR DORIS — Perhaps this letter will help "Lost." My life, too, has been miserable because of a drinking husband. We have three small children. They and our friends saw arguments, embarrassing scenes and heard foul language. However, he never left for weekends, etc., never bothered with other women, and did pay for groceries and make the monthly payments. But the drinking was getting worse.

Then a miracle happened. The children and I had been attending church regularly for about four months. One night my husband came home more drunk than usual. This time I something I had told him a long time ago. Since then, he hasn't had another drink and our home life has been wonderful.

DORIS CLARK

I suggest that "Lost" contact her local A.A. (the number's in the phone booth), and ask for the pamphlet "The Alcoholic husband." The suggestions in there are very helpful. Also, it would help her to attend A.A. or Al-Anon meetings.

If she can't attend meetings, then a member of A.A. will give her some reading material that will prove helpful. For myself, I find this A.A. prayer helpful: "God grant me serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference." — A WIFE GRATEFUL TO A.A.

DEAR GRATEFUL — And so am I grateful. Let's hope "Lost" reads this and finds help.

DEAR DORIS — We are two girls with lots of camp experience. We are 14½. We have gone on about eight camping trips and have learned many handicrafts. We would like to be Junior Counsellors this summer and would like to know if any organization would give us a job for the summer. No pay, of course. — TWO EXPERIENCED CAMPERS.

DEAR CAMPERS — Go to your local Y.W.C.A. and ask your question. 14½ is young for counselling, but there might be spots where you could make yourselves useful.

DEAR DORIS — I have a double chin, and my face is fat. I am forty. My figure is thin but my face and chin spoil it all. Are there any exercises to get rid of a double chin? — DESPAIRING.

DEAR DESPAIRING — Try this for a sample.

Lower your head almost to your chest, then limply in rag-doll fashion, roll your head around with a slow, heavy, relaxed motion in a complete circle — first to the right and then to the left. Do this five times each way.

There's more (including singing while you wash the dishes) but no room for it here. Send me a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope if you want the full treatment.

No Deal Made By Socreds Says Thompson

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Monday it was "a fabrication of somebody's imagination" to say Deputy Leader Real Caouette did last weekend—that Social Credit members gried to negotiate a deal to keep the Diefenbaker government in office after the April 8 general election.

At the same time, Mr. Thompson said in an interview that six Social Credit MPs who gave, and later repudiated, a promise of support for a Liberal government had broken an agreement not to participate in any deals as a result of the indecisive outcome of the election.

Mr. Caouette has said the six acted to forestall a keep-Diefenbaker-in-power move in which he implicated Gerp Marcoux, the party's parliamentary whip. Dr. Marcoux resigned his post as membership Saturday and announced he will sit as an Independent-Social Credit member in the parliamentary session which opens Thursday.

Mr. Thompson said Mr. Marcoux will be invited to attend the caucus of Social Credit MPs Wednesday, adding that he hopes it will be possible to bring the MP for Quebec Montmorency back into close strategy sessions on a regular basis afterwards.

Meanwhile, New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said Mr. Caouette "is suffering from hallucinations" in saying New Democrats had considered an alliance with Social Credit to keep the Conservatives in power.

In the election, the Liberals won 129 seats, the Conservatives 95, Social Credit 24 and New Democrats 17 in the 265-seat House. Mr. Diefenbaker, who had governed with a minority since the June 18 election of 1962, resigned and Liberal Leader Pearson took office, also with a minority.

Mr. Robert Joy Has Completed 4-Week Course

Mr. Robert Joy, presiding minister of the Belleville congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, has recently returned home from a special one-month training course at the organization's headquarters for Canada in Toronto.

This special four-week course, known as the Kingdom Ministry School, was very practical and helpful, Mr. Joy reported. "In fact," he said, "my attendance was one of the outstanding experiences of my entire life." This special training will be made available to the presiding ministers of each one of the 271 congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in Canada as well as the approximately 260 special representatives of the organization serving in special assignments. Mr. Joy reported that 500 have completed the course so far in Canada, and the school is being carried on in all the major countries of the earth.

The students, 25 in all, came from places as widely separated as Vancouver, B.C., and Shelburne, N.S. The oldest was 64 years of age and the youngest 21. There were four women in the class that Mr. Joy attended. Many of them had to make certain sacrifices in order to attend, but all spoke highly of the practical instruction and helpful Biblical counsel received.

Good Progress Being Made on Technical Wing

PICTON — Good progress is being made on the construction of the technical wing at Prince Edward Collegiate. It is about sixty per cent complete. While work of cement, block laying and various installations, was carried on, the roofing contractors were held up by the rains last week.

The Foundation Co. of Canada has the general contract, with building to cost $307,960, and equipment $174,000.

The new wing will have two classrooms, a drafting room, an auto shop, a machine shop, two occupational training shops, one for boys and one for girls. There will be a gymnasium, an extension to the cafeteria, boiler room, and administration offices, the addition being tied in with the original building.

Pan American and TWA In Breach of British Law Says Aviation Minister

LONDON (CP)—Aviation Minister Julian Amery accused the United States Monday of trying to ditch single-handedly an international agreement on Atlantic air fares.

As a result, he told Parliament, both Pan American and Trans World Airlines are in breach of British law by bringing passengers to Britain at less than agreed prices.

He indicated, however, that he hopes to get a negotiated settlement soon without taking drastic action against the airlines.

The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board has barred the two airlines from increasing Atlantic tourist-class fares by five per cent—an increase ordered by the 80-member International Air Transport Association last October.

The British and other European operators complain that this means unfair competition.

Meanwhile, the Canadian government ordered that international carriers operating into Canada not raise their fares.

Trans-Canada Air Lines was operating under old fares in line with the Canadian government's order, which has brought about an unusual situation with European air lines.

HAVE TWO FARES

At least two major carriers, Lufthansa German Airlines and British Overseas Airways, are charging the new higher fares between the U.S. and Europe but have retained the old fare structure between Canada and Europe.

A Lufthansa spokesman in New York said the West German government has ordered the agreed-upon higher fares to be imposed by carriers operating into that country and Lufthansa had complied insofar as U.S.-Germany flights are concerned.

But Lufthansa also was obeying the Canadian order not to increase fares into and out of Canada until some settlement is reached in the dispute.

U.S. Press Welcomes All Decisions Made by Leaders

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson's meeting with President Kennedy at Hyannis Port, Mass., and the decisions they reached have been welcomed warmly by U.S. newspapers.

The Washington Star says in an editorial that looking at the Cape Cod weekend meeting "from any angle the results are "encouragingly productive."

"And why not? After all, our two countries are identical twins, so to speak—geographically, politically, culturally, temperamentally and in terms of the military imperatives that bind us together for better or worse, inevitably."

"Certainly anything that would estrange or divide us would be a sort of sin against nature."

Both The Star and the Baltimore Sun criticize former Prime Minister Diefenbaker for failing to accept nuclear warheads for Canadian defence weapons.

The Sun says Diefenbaker's "hedging" on the defence issue "probably did more than any one shot him the prime minister's post.

"That relations between the U.S. and Canada are once more operating smoothly, with allowance for the inevitable ups, is not a triumph for diplomacy. It is merely a return to the normalcy that we all want and expect."

Differences remain, says The Herald Tribune, but these now can be approached in a neighborly spirit in contrast to the recent "narrow nationalism in Canada and plain stupidity in much of the south." It welcomed the Hyannis Port pledge for more frequent Canada-U.S. consultations.

Would Compel Alcoholics To Be Treated

TORONTO (CP)—An expert on alcoholism suggests that alcoholics should be required by law to undergo treatment.

William McClure, supervisor of education at the Ottawa branch of the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Foundation said Monday "unless there is compulsion" most alcoholics in Ontario will not use the facilities available to help them.

Mr. McClure was taking part in a discussion attended by about 50 social workers during the annual conference of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies.

He said there were about 92,000 alcoholics in Ontario with some as young as 15.

"Compulsory treatment is a hot issue involving the Bill of Rights", he said.

"You can't help an alcoholic unless he wants it. But you have to help people who want help."

Robinson Tells Why He Came To Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Jackie Robinson says Birmingham's image is being reflected throughout the world as one of brutality—as "one of a dog snapping at the guts of a Negro."

The former baseball star said his decision to come to Birmingham was made after he saw a picture of a dog tearing at a Negro man's shirt.

"When I saw that picture, I decided what I had to do," he said. "I had to come down here and express my appreciation to the Negroes here for what they are doing for Negroes everywhere."

He was speaking of a photograph taken during mass demonstrations by Negroes here. Police said the trained German shepherd dogs were used in Birmingham "because the officers had to get in close" to contain or disperse the swelling crowds of Negroes.

Robinson and Floyd Patterson, former heavyweight boxing champion, arrived Monday night and appeared at a mass rally. They said they wanted to express appreciation for "your courage in this fight for the rights of Negroes everywhere."

SEVEN KILLED

ISTANBUL (AP) — Lightning and floods killed seven persons in central and south Turkey Monday, press reports said today. The floods also caused extensive damage to property and crops and thousands of sheep cattle and poultry perished, the reports added.

Arson May Be Involved in Kingston Fire

KINGSTON (CP)—A three-storey building containing three businesses was destroyed Monday night in a fire which caused damage estimated at about $200,000.

A fire department official said arson may be involved.

Nobody was injured. Police had to hold back Herb Coven, owner of the furniture store, who tried to get into the burning building to save his coin collection.

Families were evacuated from six adjacent homes. The fire also destroyed an office cleaning company and a soft drink distributing company.

Value of the frame building on the city's outskirts was estimated by the owner at $90,000. Contents of the building were valued at $70,000, with antiques among the furniture store contributing to the sum. There was also smoke and water and slight fire damage to adjoining buildings.

THESE HIGH LIFT PUMPS at the Belleville filter station and pumphouse are pumping water directly to city taps now, without benefit of the storage tank to even the flow. The tank has been drained for an inspection, prepara- tory to painting. James Scriven, filter station superintendent, has to keep hopping to keep the right number of pumps working, and to balance the pressure in the mains. In the picture, he is adjusting a pump.

Troops Take Up Positions Near Prison

MONTREAL (CP)—A 150-man detachment of infantrymen took up positions Monday heads for Canadian defence weapons.

The Sun says Diefenbaker's "hedging" on the defence issue probably did more than any other cost him the prime minister's post.

"That relations between the U.S. and Canada are once more operating smoothly, with allowance for the inevitable ups, is not a triumph for diplomacy. It is merely a return to the normalcy that we all want and expect."

Differences remain, says The Herald Tribune, but these now can be approached in a neighborly spirit in contrast to the recent "narrow nationalism in Canada and plain stupidity in much of the south." It welcomed the Hyannis Port pledge for more frequent Canada-U.S. consultations.

City Water Supply Can Work Without Tank Reservoir

"It's the same as if the tank were full, except there's no reserve," according to James Scriven, superintendent at the Belleville Utilities Commission pumping and filter plant. The commission's 750,000 gallon water tank was drained yesterday, for an inspection preparatory to repainting within the next few weeks, but the city water supply ran on work without the tank almost as easily as it can with it.

Many systems will not work without a tank. Piston, or positive-displacement type pumps need a tank to store water being pumped when none is being used. Without it, such pumps are centrifugal type — they produce a set amount of pressure, (enough to push the water to the top of the tank, 225 feet above the pumphouse), and if the water won't move at that pressure, there's no harm done. The pressure is maintained until the water moves, or the pump is shut off.

PROVIDES RESERVE

The only reason for the tank in the Belleville system, Mr. Scriven is to provide a reserve. Normally, one of the four main high lift pumps operates all day, and the water level in the tank flutuates as the city's water demand varies. Normally, this means the tank is filled during the night and slowly emptied during the morning, and it holds almost steady during the afternoon.

Without the tank, two pumps must be used together during the morning, one pump during the afternoon and one pump running at partial capacity during the night. The city ran this way for several weeks, while the present tank was being built.

There is one hazard to operating without the tank though. If all the pumps in the pumphouse stopped at once, the pressure would drop to zero in the mains, in the higher areas of the city. If this happened, water heaters in those areas might collapse if anyone turned on a tap downtown. To avoid this danger, one of the city's three diesel powered emergency pumps will be kept going during thunder-storms and when ever a power failure threatens.

USE DIRECT PRESSURE

Another possible danger is that if several pumps are left operating when there is no demand for water in the city, one or more of the older water mains in the city might burst. Normally, one hundred pounds per square inch is considered the maximum permissible for Belleville water mains, but the pumps could produce more, with the water pressure being held about 80 pounds per square inch, (about the same as when the tank is in use), there is enough leeway that it might take several hours for a serious situation to develop, however.

Present plans call for a refilling of the tank within the next two or three days and the water-works will be back to normal until the painting begins, possibly in a few weeks. While the tank is being painted, the city will be on direct pressure again, for an unspecified length of time.

Assault Charge Laid Against Cookie Gilchrist

BUFFALO (AP) — Chester (Cookie) Gilchrist, the American Football League's most valuable player of the year in 1962, was arrested on charges of second-degree assault and resisting arrest.

Police said Gilchrist, 243-pound fullback of the Buffalo Bills, was stopped by patrolmen after his automobile failed to halt for a stop sign.

Gilchrist, 27, could not produce registration or driver's licence, police said, and was taken to his home. When he was still unable to produce the documents, police said, he was taken to police headquarters.

Lieut. Joseph O'Mara said Gilchrist became abusive and struck one of the patrolmen. It took four officers to subdue him O'Mara said.

Gilchrist, former Canadian Football League star, also was charged with running a stop sign, failing to produce a registration, driving without a licence and disorderly conduct.

SWORN IN

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson was sworn in Monday as a member of the 26th Parliament, his seventh as a Liberal MP. He walked to the office of Commons clerk Leon Raymond in the Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings to have the oath administered and sign the members' roll.

Drama Festival Is Opened In Kitchener

By PATRICIA RUSAK

KITCHENER (CP) — The week-long Dominion Drama Festival opened Monday night with the London Little Theatres presentation of One Way Pendulum by N. F. Simpson.

The performance of this absurd comedy which centres on the life of a Cockney family, the Groomkirbys, in suburban London "set a very good standard by which to judge a theatrical enterprise," the festival adjudicator, Pierre Lefevre, said.

"I enjoyed myself enormously," the actor - director said, explaining that when he judges a play he tries to put himself in the position of a member of the audience rather than a director.

Mr. Lefevre, who also adjudicated the DDF in Victoria 16 years ago, praised the London company for its coherence which he described as "a spirit did example of teamwork—a rare quality in professional or amateur life."

TREATMENT EFFECTIVE

He said the company's "cool, quiet, simple" treatment of the farcical British comedy was "most effective." The cast was well-balanced and the play well staged.

Mr. Lefevre criticized the color of the walls which were dominated by blazing pink and royal blue striped wallpaper, but added that this was a matter of taste."

Most roles were portrayed "true to character," he said mentioning in particular that of the mother Mrs. Groomkirby played by Mrs. Lucille Walker of London, Ont.

There was only about 200 empty seats in the 1,400-seat Lyric Theatre in downtown Kitchener.

Tonight, the Sudbury Little Theatre Guild will present its interpretation of Mr. Rumbelow Nash's three-act romantic comedy, The Rainmakers.

This is the second time the Sudbury amateur company formed only two years ago, has reached the DDF finals.

Tourist Trade To Barbados Is Increasing

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Errol Barrow of Barbados said Monday diversion of Canadian sugar purchases from Barbados to Cuba is part of a short-sighted Canadian policy of dealing with Communist countries at the expense of friends elsewhere.

Mr. Barrow, here as head of a five-man tourist and industrial development mission, said in an interview Canadian purchases from his country have declined steadily in the last 15 years, to about $500,000 from $50,000,000 a year.

Mr. Barrow said diversion of sugar purchases is partly to blame for the trade decline, adding that rising Canadian trade with Communist China was part of the same pattern.

He said Canadian distillers were distilling rum from molasses when they could continue to import molasses duty-free from The West Indies at little additional cost.

Mr. Barrow said, however, Canada was giving excellent support to a five-year development program under the new government. Canadian tourist trade, he said, had increased 50 per cent to 8,100 visitors in 1962.

Stabbed 5 Times

MONTREAL (CP) — Leon Bird, 36, was found dead on the north slope of Mount Royal Monday with five stab wounds in the body.

Police said a passerby discovered the body in a wooded area and called police.

TO BE DEPORTED

WINNIPEG (CP)—John Schaller, 23, serving three years in penitentiary for the 1961 arson murder of his landlord's roommate, will be paroled and deported to his native Germany, it was disclosed Monday. Schaller, originally charged with murder, was convicted on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the death of Karoly Binder, 36, a Hungarian immigrant. Binder's body was found in a buried trunk near Beaconia, north of Winnipeg, July 28, 1961.

Head of Centennial Says Canada Expending Energy Without Co-ordination

WINNIPEG (CP) — John Fisher of Ottawa, commissioner of Canada's national centennial administration, Monday said one of Canada's great problems is that too much energy is being expended without co-ordination.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Canadian council on 4-H clubs, Mr. Fisher said there is a feeling of confusion in Canada, "a slightly bewildered feeling perhaps caused by too much energy running off in too many directions."

But, he said, the signs of this energy need not necessarily be viewed with alarm.

He said that regarding the certain uncertainty evident in Canada, the doubters and distractors should be listened to as "only as we listen can we work out our own ideas and feelings."

Mr. Fisher said, "we have a responsibility to ourself, have being accepted into our country the cultures of many lands, to show that from these various streams a new vibrant nation has emerged."

SAYS SHOULD SHARE

He suggested Canada should share with other, needy, nations her great wealth and commended the 4-H organization for its participation in the world freedom from hunger campaign.

He also suggested other organizations should — without government help or insistance—dedicate some of their centennial effort to those in need of help.

But, he said, one of the greatest needs and aims of the centennial administration is helping Canadians know Canada better.

"The real role of the centennial is to strengthen the unity of the country," he said.

In an earlier speech, to the Canadian Club, Mr. Fisher emphasized that only limited funds would be available through his organization for aiding in development of centennial projects "of lasting social and historical value" and that most of the activities would be unsubsidized and local.

He said the main purpose of his organization would be in co-ordinating the activities throughout the country in an effort to see to it that, as possible, efforts were not overlapping or competitive.

Hate Is Likely to Breed More Violence in South

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Riots in Birmingham have forced President Kennedy to dispatch federal troops to the vicinity of the troubled Alabama industrial city, but the hope in Washington is that the troops may never have to be sent into the city itself.

The federal soldiers are to serve as a warning against violence by white segregationists, lest further bombings or brutal repression of Negroes will put the troops on city streets, with the possible consequence that white man may fight white man over the Negro—just as they did more than a century ago.

Birmingham is by no means the last frontier of the segregationist, the White Supremacy Council, the Ku Klux Klan. Other cities in the south are known to be marked for Negro passive demonstrations — in Albany and Atlanta, Ga.; Nashville, Tenn.; New Orleans, La., and Jackson, Miss.

WORST CITY

But a federal civil rights commission official says Birmingham is the worst city in the U.S. A modest integration program — mainly to allow the Negro to sit at the white lunch counter and use his bathroom in downtown stores — was hooligly condemned by Birmingham Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor.

Newspapers in many northern states have expressed anger at this man, chiefly because white anti-Negro attitude has done nothing but encourage the hooded white-sheeted Klan recruiter and the night-riding arsonist.

The American Negro has travelled a long way in his fight for full recognition in the U.S. Complete integration is a myth. As is the case in Washington, the Negro moves to the suburbs when the Negro invades the city. But the Negro has full use of public facilities and there are no whispering sneers of "nigger" when the Negro sits beside the white man at the downtown lunch counter.

Birmingham represents the other end of the line. It is a measure of the Negro's strength that he dares challenge Bull Connor and others of that city.

GATHERS STRENGTH

But the Negro has shown he no longer will be a second class citizen of the past. When the home of a Negro leader and a Negro motel were bombed, Negroes unleashed a night of fury against white policemen.

While Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. preaches passive demonstrations, Malcolm X of the Black Muslims preaches death to the white man. King undoubtedly is aware if his philosophy does not succeed, more restless and impatient Negroes may turn to Malcolm X. The bloodshed that could follow might read like another passage from the tragic U.S. Civil War.

New System Of Taxing Is Proposed

TORONTO (CP)—A new system of taxing the building business, based on the pay-as-you-earn idea, was proposed to the royal commission on taxation today by the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

The existing arrangement for a contractor is to pay his taxes when the final certificate for any project has been issued by the architect or consulting engineer.

What the association suggested in a brief to the commission is a scheme whereby tax is payable on the percentage of a contract completed and paid for in any year. This would spread the tax evenly over the period in which money was received by the contractor.

At the same time it was suggested that when a contractor sells property on a mortgage, the installment method of taxing also be allowed, rather than paying tax on the entire amount before the building has been sold or the existing practice places a "very heavy burden" on the taxpayer.

Hospital Staff Votes to Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Non-professional employees of Toronto General Hospital Monday night voted overwhelmingly to strike if necessary to enforce union security and pay demands. No strike date was set.

A. G. Hearn, Canadian vice-president of the Building Service Employees International Union (CLC), said the union security issue must be settled this year.

The union represents 980 employees at the hospital, Toronto's largest, including maids orderlies and maintenance staff. The meeting voted 399 to 26 in favor of the strike.

The union asks maintenance men and sitting clerks checkoff to present employees and compulsory checkoff for new ones. The hospital has opposed the compulsory checkoff.

The union has also asked for a seven per cent increase in wages in the first year and four per cent in the second year of a two-year contract.

The hospital has offered 8? a month each year of a two-year agreement, about half of the union's demands.

Mr. Hearn said after the meeting the average wage at the hospital is $220 a month, with a low of $203 for maids and general female help after one year of service. The union seeks $225 for this group.

Survey of Major Shipping Centres Indicates That '63 May Be Better Year

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The annual springtime game of "Cargo, Cargo, Who's Got the Cargo?" is on again.

Rules of the game, played by desk-top sailors in hundreds of shipping offices in Canada's ports, are simple—fill the holds of as many ships as possible with as much stuff as possible.

There are plenty of hazards: The state of the Canadian economy, the whims of people's tastes, the state of foreign economies, the ups and downs of international exchange, the Cold War.

For the winners, there's the promise of a promotion, or at least a bonus. For the losers, there can be ulcers or the sack.

On the basis of how well the players succeed in filling their holds hangs the outcome of Canada's 1963 shipping season.

Forecasts from the players themselves depend on whether they're optimists or pessimists. The optimists hope this season will be better than last; the pessimists, that it will be no worse.

Last year Canada's ports handled almost 89,000,000 tons of cargo in more than 42,500 ships.

AUTO IMPORTS BOOSTED

A survey by The Canadian Press of major shipping centres indicates that 1963 should be at least as good and possibly better.

Montreal, Canada's busiest harbor in cargo tonnage last year with a total handle of more than 21,300,000 tons, should have as good a year as 1963, says one shipping official.

The devalued dollar has offered hopes of higher exports, without any foreseeable serious effect on imports. Bringing in of foreign-made cars, a big cargo item for years, received a shot in the arm when the federal government withdrew a 10-per-cent surcharge on them.

Movement of grain from Montreal, the ports major cargo, is expected to increase following a ruling by the wheat board that an additional 2,000,000 bushels of U.S. grain may be stored in the elevators. Last year the port was allowed to handle a maximum of 1,500,000 bushels of U.S. grain at one time.

Montreal also expects to retain its business in shipping newsprint, one of Canada's biggest exports by ship last year with more than 4,000,000 tons.

Shipments of coal and oil, however, are expected to fall off.

SHIP SULPHUR

Vancouver, Canada's second largest port with 14,500,000 tons in 1962, also is feeling the effects of Canada's devalued dollar. Importers report they have been adversely affected by the devaluation, but export prospects appear bright.

Recent installations of bulk-loaders have facilitated the movement of cargoes such as iron ore, copper concentrates and coal.

Japanese purchases of coal through Vancouver have been cut to 300,000 tons this year from 400,000 in 1962, but exports of potash are expected to make up the difference.

Prospects for the mainstays of Vancouver's shipments, lumber sales to the U.S. and wheat exports to Communist China, are holding up well, shipping officials say.

Halifax handled 8,400,000 tons of cargo in 1962 and port manager Jack Mitchell says there is no reason why traffic should increase or decrease this summer.

The last three years had been "reasonably good."

'EVERY EVEN KEEL'

Ray March of the Halifax port commission agrees that Halifax "keeps on a very even keel tonnagewise," although he sees the possibility of increased traffic in gypsum and oil.

D. M. Vye, port manager of Saint John, N.B., says officials are "more optimistic" than a year ago. He and H. Herbert Smith, port and industrial commissioner, say there is no reason to expect 1963 to be a worse year than last year, when a total of 5,192,000 tons of cargo was handled.

Canada's most northerly major port, Churchill, Man., is hampered by a short season—100 days—and its prospects have been clouded by a postponement in an executive meeting of the Hudson Bay Route Association.

A group that is seeking more business for Churchill, the association wants a highway built from The Pas to Churchill, a longer shipping season, competitive freight rates and greater use of the Churchill route by the federal and provincial governments.

Last year Churchill shipped 21,525,000 bushels of wheat in 49 ships. Total cargo handled was almost 750,000 tons.

The port now has almost 5,000,000 bushels of wheat in storage, awaiting ships.

Churchill has one big advantage over other Canadian ports, says J. R. de Meulles of the National Harbors Board.

"Sub - zero temperatures do not harm wheat, but help to preserve it," he says.

"Heat and moisture, insects and rodents are the enemies to be fought in grain storage and we have no bother with this kind of thing."

Trouter's Special Not to Run But Anglers Will Be on Hand

By JACK PICKETTS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Again it's time for Newfoundland's annual outdoors extravaganza—the day of fun and communing with nature for which many Newfoundlanders wait all year.

It's May 24, the day everybody in Newfoundland goes fishing. Although the rest of Canada celebrates the Victoria Day holiday on May 20 this year—by statute, the Monday immediately preceding May 25—in Newfoundland the holiday is still observed on the actual date, May 24.

Most of the celebrants, however, will travel by road this year to their favorite fishing spots. The Trouters' Special, a train that spilled out anglers along 86 miles of track, has passed its hey-day.

The Trouters' Special—a tradition that pulled out of St. John's every May 23 for 50 years, won't be running this year. "It's definitely finished," regretted Tommie Dalton, the CNR sales director for the area, after a meeting of officials decided to discontinue it.

The Trouters' Special has lost out to Newfoundland's new highways. Today the angler can drive to his favorite fishing spot in the same area of the Avalon Peninsula that was covered by the train. It takes less time, and he can return when he chooses.

But it's more likely that he wants to roam farther afield, perhaps off the Avalon into the main land mass of Newfoundland where the fishing is considered better.

Before the roads, the Trouters' Special was jammed every year with up to 800 hopeful anglers. The evening of May 23 it would crawl from St. John's along 86 miles of track to Argentia, diagonally across the Avalon.

It would halt at every likely-looking brook or pond and several trouters would spill out. They would fumble together a camp in the darkness, and as May 24 dawned, start out after the trout. As the day waned, they would scramble back to the railway to be picked up by the returning train.

TOO FEW CUSTOMERS

"We hate to break the tradition," says Mr. Dalton, "but it just isn't worth it anymore." Last year, 65 paying fishermen showed up for the trip.

So instead of the special train, this year the CNR will add one or two cars to the regular train over the line and delay its departure until night-fall.

It will still stop for any fishermen wanting to get off, and another regular train returning next day will pick them up again.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Frost are returning to Marmora to reside in their home on Burnell St.

Mr. Albert Burridge, who has been hospitalized for the past couple of months, has suffered further amputation of his leg on Tuesday, in a Peterborough hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, Peterborough, visited Mr. and Mrs. George Empey, on Sunday.

Mr. Carl McCoy has returned home after completing a 10-week course at Provincial Automotive and Allied Trades, Toronto.

Miss Carol Wilson of Peterborough, and Mr. Wayne Wilson of Marmora, attended the Capping Ceremony and luncheon at the Department of Health Centre, in Toronto, on Tuesday evening, for the students, who have been attending the Registered Nurses' Assistant classes since September, 1962. Mrs. Wilson was among those who received their caps. Mrs. Wilson spent a few days at her home here.

The Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Melkiejohn and daughter, of Forest, Ontario, recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Granville Melkiejohn, of Marmora.

For Forestry Minister It's Third Career at 62

BY RUSSELL ELMAN

OTTAWA (CP)—At 62, an age when most men begin contemplating retirement, Jack Nicholson is embarking on his third major career—as federal minister of forestry.

The lawyer-businessman from British Columbia ran for public office the first time in June, 1962, and was elected Liberal MP for Vancouver Centre.

He was re-elected last April 8 and then was appointed to the cabinet formed by Prime Minister Pearson, whom he has known for 20 years. Now he looks forward to more years of useful service in his new calling.

To his new post, he brings a profound belief that men in executive positions must have the ability to concentrate on a particular problem and follow it up with a decision.

"I'm not a technical expert, but I hope I can always be reasonably well-informed in whatever endeavor I undertake," he said in an interview.

WORK TO SUCCEED

"Nowhere in the world are there greater opportunities for people who want to make something out of life than in Canada, provided one is prepared to settle down and work for it."

This philosophy of a man who says "my only hobby is work" characterized his previous careers as a trial lawyer and then as a top-ranking industrial executive.

A native of Newcastle, N.B., and graduate of Dalhousie University, he originally set out to go into commerce but ended up practising law in Vancouver from 1926 to 1941.

His entry into the business world came about during the Second World War. In 1941 he was appointed deputy controller of supplies for the federal munitions and supply department and shortly after Pearl Harbor was asked to set up Canada's synthetic rubber program. The giant Crown - owned petroleum chemical complex of Polymer Corporation Limited at Sarnia, Ont.

Mr. Nicholson held top executive posts with Polymer for almost 10 years. In 1952 he moved to Rio de Janeiro, where he managed the operating subsidiaries of the Canadian-controlled Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company Limited until 1956.

FORESTRY BIG TASK

In recent years he has been closely associated with the British Columbia forest industry. As president of the Council of Forest Industries, he directed a project which for the first time sought to frame common goals for all aspects of the province's industry.

The grandson of a New Brunswick logger, he says he expects to derive "great personal satisfaction" from his forestry portfolio.

"This department is still in its infancy. It has tremendous possibilities and can mean so much to our economy as a whole."

The department was set up in 1962 by the former Progressive Conservative government. Its first minister was Hugh John Flemming, a lumberman and former premier of New Brunswick.

It will be a prime aim of his department, says Mr. Nicholson, to stimulate forest product research in the broadest sense, including the development of species of trees which could be used commercially. Other fields in which he plans to place emphasis are forest protection, market surveys and utilization of by-products of the forest.

SPURRED BY HOWE

Mr. Nicholson's entry into the political arena may have originated from an informal suggestion made a few years ago by his former boss, the late C. D. Howe, Liberal wartime minister of munitions and supply.

He recalls mentioning in a private conversation with Mr. Howe his dissatisfaction with the direction in which the Canadian economy seemed headed at the time.

"What right have you got to complain?" Mr. Howe retorted. "What are you doing about it? You ought to be in politics yourself."

He took the plunge in the 1962 election.

WORKER FOR YOUTH

Throughout his life he has had a close interest in youth work. He attributes this partially to an inherited trait from his father, who was a doctor specializing in pediatrics. He and his wife, Jean, have one son, John, also a pediatrician.

For some years Mr. Nicholson was honorary solicitor of the Children's Aid Society in Vancouver. A Boy Scout in his youth, he has kept a continuing association with the movement and in Brazil was awarded that country's scouting Medal of Honor.

He usually gets up around 8 a.m. and tries to be in his office by 9. He's inclined to work late—"I'm no clock watcher"—and generally retires by midnight.

For relaxation, he likes to ride horses and go fishing. He calls himself a "good judge of food and wine," and says he can appreciate a good painting when he sees one. His most constant use of leisure time is reading—mainly detective stories.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

They set out to prove that the poor fish is a sucker for any kind of bait regardless of the tackle at the other end of the line.

They stowed their expensive rods, reels and other piscatorial gimmicks and took along the Huck Finn-Tom Sawyer old reliables of bamboo poles, short lines and floats. They used live minnows as the main dish.

The two-day haul was 19 lake trout weighing 1½ and three pounds, one Kamloops trout and two bags of red-fin suckers.

The "suckers" were a sideliner. They "ran into them accidentally" and as a result the deepfreeze of a native northwoods man is loaded to the gunnels with the fish.

They're a pair of well-known city anglers who discovered the "Unknown Lake" and, like their identities, want to keep it secret. But this is the yarn they told me.

Of course the story lost nothing in the telling from the nine bamboo poles and floats to "a horde of suckers charging downstream so thick you could cross on them."

The lake, they told me, is situated "some 35 miles north of the upper Mazinaw." You get to it by boat and a portage of a few miles. On arrival one decided to go back the length of the lake for the "northwoods relative."

On the way back the motor conked and he had to paddle the rest of the way while his partner coaxed his heels for a few hours regretting the fact he had failed to notify his next of kin.

That night in a drizzle of rain they set out their bamboo poles. They opened the nine "rods a few feet apart with short lines, about six feet under the water with floats.

The poles were braced with rocks and for an hour or so nothing happened. The rain came heavier as darkness fell and two heroes absorbed a shoreline ducking, eyes glued on the floats with the help of a large bonfire and an emergency flashlight.

Then it happened. "There must have been a school of the small lakers," one said, "because first one float, then another started to bob. We landed in three or four good trout, then two lines started to duck and wobble, then two more.

"We looked like those stage characters who spin plates on top of sticks," he said. "We were running from one pole to another until disaster struck.

"We had three fish on four lines at one time and he first thing we knew the lines became entangled. While we were getting this mess straightened out a big one took the bait of the end pole, yanked it out of its setting and started to haul it out into the water."

"My partner grabbed the flashlight and went into the water after the pole and line. He slipped, lost the flashlight, but grabbed the pole and came ashore with a near-three-pounder in tow."

On the way home the two heroes being told of a creek where the suckers abound decided to pay it a visit. One of them had a spear-head in his pack. This was brought out and a long branch of a tree inserted as a handle. The first harpoon throw was successful but the handles came out of the spear and a big sucker threshed downstream with a three-pronged souvenir in the back of its neck.

"They came so thickly," the spokesman said, "that you could almost walk across the creek on them. It was a cinch to knock them out with a club—and by the time we had had over a bagful of the fish. We ate some but gave the remainder to our northwoods friend who will summer them in his deep freeze."

That's the story the man told me, swelp me.

Top Attendance In Majors

Mets Show Fan Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—The enthusiasm of New York Mets and Kansas City supporters plus fan apathy in Houston and Detroit are reflected in an Associated Press survey of major league baseball attendance figures.

The Mets show the largest gate increase in the big leagues. They are 55,236 ahead of 1962, their first year of operation in the National League. The Mets' attendance is 286,694 for 16 home dates compared to 211,448 a year ago.

Meanwhile, Houston, which also came into the National League last season, has the biggest deficit. The Colts' turnstile count is 153,822 for 16 home dates in 1962 their total for the same number of home dates was 286,471. The drop is 132,649.

Kansas City, showing marked improvement on the field with a second-place standing in the American League, shows the largest attendance gain in its circuit. With a 194,903 count for 18 home days, the Athletics are 63,156 ahead of last year.

Detroit, struggling in eighth place, have played before 184,004 fans at home. This represents a decrease of 77,294—the largest in the American League.

Los Angles Dodgers of the National League top both leagues in home attendance with 446,227. However, the Dodgers are 62,665 behind a year ago.

Los Angeles Angels, who lead the American League in home attendance with 302,227, are 59,371 ahead of their 1962 figures.

Boston Gains In Battle Of The Sox

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

So, Boston Red Sox are in second place in the American League. So, what's so funny about that?

Aren't Chicago White Sox, like Boston a prime pre-season choice for the second division, running in front? And Kansas City Athletics, another pick for the loser echelon, a close third?

And aren't New York's mighty Yankees struggling along in fourth with the other contenders stringing behind?

It's just a crazy, mixed-up race, that's all.

The Red Sox downed Washington Senators 8-5 Monday night and Los Angeles Angels 7-3 in the only games on the AL schedule.

The results eased Boston into the runner-up spot, one game back of Chicago and 10 percentage points ahead of the As, and put the Angels into a fifth place tie with Cleveland at the .500 level.

CLIMB OUT OF CELLAR

In the only National League game, Houston Colts climbed out of the cellar with their fifth straight victory, outlasting New York Mets 4-2. Houston now shares ninth place with Milwaukee.

The Red Sox belied seven extra-base-hitting their 11 hits, including a three-run homer by Bob Tillman in the sixth inning that stood up as the clincher. Frank Malzone and Dick Stuart also homered for Boston, Chuck Schilling rapped a pair of doubles, and Carl Yastrzemski and Lu Clinton tripled.

Washington starter Don Rudolph was routed in the first when Schilling doubled, Yastrzemski tripled, Malzone scored and Clinton singled—and the Senators never caught up. Stuart connected off Jim Duckworth in the fourth, and the Red Sox pounded Jim Duckworth for four more runs in the sixth.

Gene Conley was credited with the pitching victory, his second in-a-row and first since a strong help from Dick Radatz. The fireballing reliever came one in the seventh, after Jim King's two-run homer, and limited Washington to one hit the rest of the way.

The Angels also went on a hitting binge but fell short after a Chicago for the second time in a row, while the White Sox had frustrating evening on the bases.

HITS SEVENTH HOMER

Steve Wagner smacked his seventh homer and two singles for Los Angeles, Ed Sadowski homered and singled, George Thomas hit a double and Joe Fregosi cracked a triple and two-run double.

The Angels went ahead 4-1 with three runs in the fourth, when Fregosi scored after a single by Wagner and a walk, and Sadowski's single delivered Wagner. They got their final run-scratch in the seventh, when Sadowski homered and Wagner singled in the run.

The White Sox blew several chances but the big one was in the first inning—when they managed just one run on four singles and two Angel error. One runner was nailed attempting to score on a grounder, another was run down between third and home after a missed bunt, and Wagner's perfect throw nailed Jeff Heid got Al Martin trying to come in from second on a single by losing pitcher Eddie Fisher.

Don Lee, Dean Chance and Julio Navarro pitched three innings each for the Angels with the victory going to Chance, now 3-3.

TURNS BACK METS

Houston right - hander Bob Bruce turned back the Mets on just two hits and struck out 11 through eight innings but lost his shutout and complete game bid with two outs in the ninth.

Bruce, whose only other victory this season was a one-hit 2-0 decision over Cincinnati, walked lead - off man Duke Snider in the ninth, got the next two batters but then hit pinch hitter Choo Choo Coleman with a pitch and walked Charlie Neal.

After yielding a pinch two-run single to Chris Cannizzaro, Bruce was relieved by Don McMahon, who struck out Cliff Cook.

Roger Craig allowed eight Colt hits and the Mets committed four errors, with mishaps by Craig and Tim Harkness leading to two unearned runs. Rookie Rusty Staub singled in two runs in the fifth, making it 3-0, after Houston had filled the bases on Johnny Temple's single, Craig's error and an interference call against Met catcher Norm Sherry.

American TV Possible Not Probable

C.F.L. Seeks Southern Exposure

By STEPHEN SCOTT

VANCOUVER (CP) — American television is interested in Canadian football, but the interest probably is not enough to see anything more than the Grey Cup on a United States network this year.

That is the crux of a report to be delivered to general managers of the nine Canadian Football League clubs here today.

In an interview Monday night, Jake Gaudaur of Hamilton Tiger-Cats said CFL games on American TV are "possible, but not probable. Nothing is imminent."

He said he had just returned from talks with major networks and organizations which would be involved.

There was "slight interest" in the Grey Cup game, well received last year despite fog that forced the last nine minutes to be played the next day. The telecast was carried by ABC.

He said CFL clubs seek "positive exposure" through American television, initially this would aid recruiting of players, considerably more difficult since establishment of the American Football League. Gaudaur said eventually it could mean more revenue for the league.

IT'S MORE EXCITING

"We have a more exciting game than theirs . . . it must sell itself. Nearly every person we talked to who saw the Grey Cup game liked what they saw."

Asked what the next step would be, he said: "We must play it by ear."

The general managers are meeting here for two days of closed-door sessions. They spent much of their time Monday on precautions against gambling scandals such as the one that recently hit the National Football League in the United States.

As a result of the talks, CFL Commissioner Sydney Halter will visit each team—likely during pre-season games—to stress regulations.

"I will point out how extremely careful players have to be in the light of what has happened across the line," Halter said.

League regulations and player contracts forbid betting on the outcome of a game involving a player's team, fraternizing with members of an opposing club during the season or fraternizing with known gamblers.

The contract can be cancelled if a player agrees to throw a game, does not report an attempt to bribe or throw a game, or is guilty of any conduct detrimental to the welfare of the league and football.

Orioles' Castoff Flies High

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles gave up on Dave Nicholson, but the young outfielder is one of the major reasons Chicago White Sox are flying high in the American League pennant race.

Nicholson, who received a bonus of almost $100,000 to sign with Baltimore, is batting only .248 for the league-leading White Sox. However, he is tied for the top spot in home runs and runs batted in.

Nicholson drove in seven runs in last week's games to tie teammate Floyd Robinson for the league lead with 24 each.

Nicholson's seven homers put him in a first place tie with Chuck Hinton of Washington and Tom Tresh of New York Yankees. The White Sox got Nicholson in a six-player trade last winter.

Wayne Causey of Kansas City continues to pace the American League batting competition despite a 34-point drop to .332 in last week's action. The Kansas City infielder collected only five hits in 24 attempts.

Chicago's Robinson and New York's Clelis Boyer are tied for second at .346. Robinson beat two points with eight hits in 24 times at bat while Boyer moved up 29 points with a 12-for-29 performance.

WAGNER SLIPS

Leon Wagner of Los Angeles Angels fell one notch to fourth at .329 while Chuck Schilling of Boston advanced from sixth to fifth with a .327 average. Schilling gained eight points with nine safeties in 32 trips.

Wes Covington of Philadelphia remained in first place in the National League although he dropped 16 points to .367. The veteran outfielder had six hits in 19 attempts last week.

Felipe Alou of San Francisco is the runner-up position at .355 followed by Ron Fairly, Los Angeles, .349 and Dick Groat, St. Louis and Johnny Edwards, Cincinnati, both at .336.

Fairly had a productive week, collecting 14 hits in 30 at bats for a 45-point increase. He also drove in nine runs to take over the RBI lead with 27, one more than Covington. The figures include Sunday's games.

Hank Aaron of Milwaukee walloped a pair of home runs and continues to set the pace in this department with 11.

Eskimos To Expand Coaching

VANCOUVER (CP)—Edmonton Eskimos, rebuilding job this year will be so vast the club has had to double its coaching staff for the summer.

Edmonton general manager Joe Ryan said in an interview here Monday that Eskimos will take 26 new imports to training camp in July, far more new players than ever have brought in since Eagle Keys took over as head coach five years ago.

Ryan, here for the Canadian Football League general managers' meeting Monday and today, said: "We've got a will-to-wall rebuilding job. It's been coming for years and now it's here."

He said offensive coach Jack Jacobs' biggest job will be in developing a quarterback.

"We'll be depending a lot on James Earl Wright. Don Getty could be our man and we still have Jim Walden on our roster. And we'll bring in two more quarterbacks."

Tired Palmer Leaves Tourney Trail

Has Cyst On Back

LATROBE, Pa. (AP)—Arnold Palmer, dog tired and bothered by a painful cyst on his back, came home Monday to rest up and find out what's wrong with his sagging golf game.

"I think what I need most of all is to get away from it for a while," the game's all-time leading money winner said.

"For the next week, I won't do anything. I won't touch a club. I'll just piddle around the house. Then next week I'll start practising a bit.

"I won't play any more tournaments until just before the open (the National Open at Brookline, Mass., June 20-22). I may play in the Buick Open (June 6-9 at Flint, Mich.) but I'm not sure. I'll definitely play in the Thunderbird."

Palmer obviously was distressed over his poor showing in the Colonial Invitational in Fort Worth, Tex., last weekend. He shot 299, and finished 20 strokes back of the winner, Julius Boros, at 279.

Later it was disclosed that Palmer played the tournament despite the nagging pain of a cyst on his back.

CAUSED TROUBLE?

"It's true I have a cyst and it gave me some trouble," Palmer said when pressed on the matter. "I saw a doctor before but there was no operation. I thought about pulling out, but decided against it."

Palmer said he would have the cyst looked at by his family doctor and would abide by the doctor's decision.

An operation, if necessary, would be a minor one and apparently would not interfere measurably with Palmer's golf plans.

"Mainly, I just felt lousy," Palmer said. "I have been in the habit of taking time off from golf during the fall—from September until late December. But I haven't done this for the last four or five years. I've been too busy.

"The reason is I've picked up some bad golfing habits. I'm not hitting the ball well at all. There are some bugs in my game I must get rid of."

The Canadian girl arrived here Saturday and plans to play in four tournaments before competing in this summer's Wimbledon junior championships. She may also be a member of the Canadian team to meet Britain in the first round of the Federation Cup, a new 16-nation women's competition to be played in London May 17-20.

Czech Vet Still Plays

By DOMENICO GIORDANO

ROME (AP)—With a stout heart and a shrewd mind, Jaroslav Drobny is still playing winning tennis.

He sees no reason why he shouldn't.

After all, he says, the amateurs of his better days "were far better than the present ones."

What he spots to the present amateurs in age, he gets back in court cunning and uncanny accuracy.

But age has taken its toll. His strong legs, which once made him a great hockey player, can not stand up to the pace.

PLAYED CAREFULLY

Drobny played his matches carefully, never wasting a motion. He aimed his volleys and drives carefully, trying to make his opponents run from one side of the court to another. He rushed the net only for a sure kill.

"I cannot compete with the youngsters physically," he said in an interview.

"But I can teach them a few tricks."

Since then, he says, the quality of the amateur tennis field has dropped considerably.

HAVE NO BRAIN

"But there is a valid reason for this," he said. "All the best amateurs have turned professional before players were really ready to replace them in the amateur field. A tennis player needs five to eight years to reach his peak."

Drobny said Australia's Rod Emerson and Spain's Manuel Santana are the best amateurs today.

"But they cannot be compared to professionals like Pancho Gonzales, Lew Hoad, Ken Rosewall or Rod Laver."

He said he didn't turn professional because "Professional tennis was just starting when I was at my peak, and it didn't pay. Secondly, most professional play is on indoor courts, and I have trouble playing indoors under lights because of my eyes."

Yankees Start Long Home Stand

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's proud Yankees open their first extended home stand of the 1963 baseball season against Minnesota Twins tonight, hoping the familiar ground of Yankee Stadium will help them out of the unfamiliar wilderness of fourth place in the American League.

"We'll make some kind of move on this stay," manager Ralph Houk said before his defending champions opened a 12-game home stand.

The Yanks, who have won the American League pennant 12 times in the last 14 years, have played 18 road games this season, winning only 10. They're 4-4 at home.

"We need this home stand to get squared away," Houk said. "Not that I don't think we played well on this last trip. The record doesn't look so good, but I thought we were all right.

"Our pitching was fine and the infield—from Clete Boyer around to Joe Pepitone—was terrific.

"We didn't get as much hitting and scoring as we needed. As a result, we lost a few well-pitched games, two of them by Ralph Terry. Being back at the stadium should bring back the hitting."

Racer Unhurt When Car Hits Wall

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Don Branson of Champaign, Ill., driving the same car in which Rodger Ward won the 1962 500-mile race, went into a 774-foot slide Monday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

It was the ninth accident in two weeks.

The rear of the racer slapped the wall after the 40-year-old driver lost control coming out of a turn. Branson escaped injury, as did drivers in the previous crashes.

Branson had been clocked at 149.1 miles an hour in his Leader Special. The time was the fastest top in trial runs before the 1963 race May 30.

Roy Emerson Loses in Italy

ROME (AP)—Roy Emerson, ranked the world's No. 1 amateur and top-seeded in the Italian tennis tournament, was upset 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 Monday in the semi-finals by Boro Jovanovic of Yugoslavia. Unseeded Martin Mulligan of Australia advanced to the final with a 1-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Nicola Pilic of Yugoslavia, in the other semi-final match. The women's final became an all-Australian affair when defending champion Margaret Smith beat another Australian, Jan Lehane, 6-4, 6-3. and Lesley Turner defeated Ann Haydon Jones of Britain, 6-1, 6-0.

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—You don't have to be nuts to be a New York Mets baseball fan, but it helps. This is a scientific fact—straight from the psychiatrist's couch.

Intrigued by repeated suggestions that the new breed now whooping it up for Casey Stengel's ragamuffin Polo Grounders consists of a weird mixture of completes and suppressed desires, we decided to find out for ourselves.

We called the American Mental Health Foundation, Incorporated.

The foundation referred us to Wladimir G. Eliasberg, M.D., Ph.D., psychiatrist, psychoanalyst, psychologist, in New York.

Certainly, said the doctor, a graying, bespectacled man with a reserved, scholarly manner. There is some basis for calling the Mets fans complex-ridden.

WRITES 17 BOOKS

The doctor's credentials for matters of the mind are impressive, born in Wiesbaden Germany; holder of degrees from universities of Berlin, Heidelberg and Munich; author of 17 books, among them Paichotherapy and Society and more than 300 articles in medical and scientific journals, and past president of the American Society of Psychoanalytical Physicians.

Is it abnormal, the doctor was asked, for people suddenly to go wild over an inept, chronically-losing baseball team which is struggling to stay out of the cellar?

What makes meek, little grandmothers desert their knitting and become raving maniacs behind third base? What makes grown men spend hours printing funny signs which say: "Mets — you're loveable" and "Youngsters play hookey from school just to get an autograph of greying, old Duke Snider or belly - sliding Choo - Choo Coleman?

PASSIONS MULTIPLIED

"It is mass suggestion," said Dr. Eliasberg, leaning back in the swivel-chair of his elegantly upholstered and carpeted office. "It's a 'mathematical' situation with passions multiplied by the en-masse factor.

"It is contagious as a disease. When a group stands up and yells wildly—as the Mets fans do—others are moved to follow suit. Failure to do so would be embarrassing."

Why the Mets? Why don't these people unleash their impressed emotions on some other team?

"It is characteristic that people relate to a cause that apparently is destined for defeat," the psychiatrist explained, "when there is no such thing as frustration. They like to grab a lowly cause and carry it to victory."

Did the moving of the Giants and Dodgers to the Pacific coast have anything to do with the growth of this violent new baseball spirit?

FELT LIKE ORPHANS

"Assuredly," the doctor said. "This is the mechanism of rejection. When the Giants and Dodgers left, their fans felt like orphaned children. There also was some bitterness comparable to that generated by the absence of a younger sibling."

How do the Mets satisfy this need?

Since Mets provide a new, shiny toy. The deserted fans can fondle it and stick out their tongues in vengeance with the spiteful rejoinder: "We'll show you."

And crusty, 73-year-old Casey Stengel—does he provide the have-nothing Mets fans with the ideal father?

"It's very important," Dr. Eliasberg said. "Just as in polities, this venerable figure offers the added comfort of a father-in-law under whose wings can do all."

Why don't they cheer for the Yankees?

FIGHT SET

Lopez Blames Umpires

"The Spitter Is Back"

CHICAGO (AP) — After watching Dean Chance throw what he called one of the best spitballs he has ever seen, manager Al Lopez of Chicago White Sox says the pitch should either be legalized or policed properly.

Making no excuse for a 7-3 defeat in which Chance spun a league-leading White Sox by Los Angeles Angels Monday night, Lopez said the laxity of umpires has caused an increase of 30 per cent in throwing the pitch today than five years ago."

"Chance threw one of the greatest spitballs I've ever seen," Lopez said after the game. "It reminded me of Burleigh Grimes and caught Nellie Fox flat-footed."

Fox, who seldom strikes out, was called out on the pitch thrown by Chance in the fifth inning of the game after Jim Landis had clouted a home run.

Lopez says he isn't sure but believes the league instructions are that the plate umpire must watch for the illegal pitch.

"The guy behind the plate has to call balls and strikes, watch out for balks and run the game. He's never burdened. I think the umpires at first and third should keep an eye on the pitcher and determine if he's throwing a spitter.

"Let the umpire at first keep an eye on left-banders and the guy on third on right-handers. Then, they can stand there with their arms crossed waiting for a play at their base.

"There's supposed to be a warning if a pitcher is throwing spitters and if he keeps it up he's supposed to be fined and suspended. When was the last time you saw that, that a pitcher was fined and suspended for throwing spitters?"

Lopez should be an expert on the spitter. He was a major league catcher for 19 seasons and had to call enough many of the old-time spitball pitchers.

Big Jinx, Sharp Turns

'Chateauguy's Handicap

BALTIMORE (AP)—A sizable jinx and Pimlico's sharp turns face Chateauguy when he races for $150,000-plus in the Preakness Stakes Saturday.

If John W. Galbreath's colt grabs the second leg of the triple crown, he'll be only the fifth Kentucky Derby winner in 19 years to win the Pimlico classic, and the 14th since 1873.

Odds seem to favor second-place finishers in the Derby or winners of the Preakness Prep.

Runners-up at Churchill Downs have come nearly twice as well in the Preakness as Derby winners, which should be heartening news to Never Bend's owners.

Those looking for a winner could do worse than take Country Squire, winner of this year's Prep.

LIKES BIG TURNS

Nor will Chateauguy have those sweeping Churchill Downs curves which enabled him to close from seventh to thunder past Never Bend and favored Candy Spots on the stretch turn in the Derby.

Pimlico's fast, tight turns and Pimlico's short stretch run excuse for a Derby winner's poor showing in the Preakness.

But Jim Conway, Chateauguy's trainer, doesn't seem worried. His colt worked a mile Monday at Pimlico, covering a blistering 1:37 3-5, equalling a track record set 29 years ago.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Pain

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids, and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reports "real shrinkage of inflammation." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that complete relief was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H relieves pain and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with Pilo-Rectal applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

No Chinese Ever Wins

Chinese Open Golf Tourney

DES MOINES, Iowa (CP) For the 10th year a Chinese has failed to win the Chinese Open Golf Tournament.

Hastening to avoid any international incident, host professional Frank Donovan quickly admitted Monday a Chinese golfer has never even entered the annual affair played on the Clover Hills course in West Des Moines.

"There just doesn't seem to be any Chinese golfer around," lamented Donovan, who goes all out to provide what he calls "Chinese atmosphere."

Donovan conceded that Monday's festivities were a bit subdued compared with previous years. There were no stuffed dragons or Indian dancers. Indian dancers?

"Well, why not, they dance that for cattle," Donovan said. "But we haven't had 'em back because all they did was sit around and eat hot dogs."

HE'S AMAZED

However, there were enough unnatural hazards to amaze Dick Hart, Chicago professional who said: "I've never seen anything like it. They won't believe me back home when I tell them about the crazy things I played through."

Hart told of the nine-piece brass band blaring out 10 feet behind the first tee. There were fireworks exploding on the greens, a 60-piece marching band parading around the course and smoke bombs which obscured vision on many shots.

Donovan, who operates the public course, started the tournament in 1947 "because the old joke in golf used to be that when somebody asked if you had ever won a tournament you told 'em, 'Sure, the Chinese Open.'

"So I started a real Chinese Open for somebody to win."

P.S.: Three golfers tied for the win with 65s for the par 70 course.

Very Few Viewers Watch Program Entirely Through

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — When those vital Nielsen ratings, listing television's top 10 programs, come out every two weeks, one is likely to look at the estimates of astronomical numbers of persons in the audience and imagine millions of people glued rapturously to their chairs by the antics of, say, The Beverly Hillbillies.

The other night, I paid some attention to the four persons in my living room, all watching—if that's the word—a popular variety show. The star came on and sang an opening song, but about half way through one member of the audience said, loudly: "I understand he's very happily married . . ."

This failed to elicit much of a conversation. As the next number—a stand-up comedy routine-started, another viewer gave a sharp exclamation, jumped up and disappeared into another room. She returned in the middle of a joke with a stamped, addressed envelope and a long explanation about how important it was to get it mailed. We all missed the tag line. We just about finished the talk about the letter when it was time for the commercial.

HUNT THE BOTTLE

At this point the fourth member of the viewing team, departed for the kitchen to get a glass of iced coffee which resulted in a three-party search for the missing saccharine bottle.

And so it went for a solid hour. The telephone was answered twice (one wrong number), one entire production number was overlooked during a discussion about the unfortunate choice of a formal ball gown by a guest star. All told, I don't believe there was 10 consecutive minutes of quiet, uninterrupted viewing during the 60 minutes.

Okay, so five people were watching a program. That's the Nielsen statistic. But what we saw was quite another thing.

Sport Snapshots

By WALTER HAYES

HALIFAX (CP) — The entry figures prove that the Marblehead-Halifax Ocean Yacht Race has become a firmly established competition after uncertain beginnings more than a quarter of a century ago.

The race between New England and Nova Scotia dates back to 1925 when yachtsmen decided it would be a good idea to have a competition in years when the Newport-to-Bermuda race wasn't being run.

Since the Bermuda race traditionally is held in the even-numbered years, the new competition got the odd-numbered ones.

The first race was from Gloucester, Mc. Only seven yachts took part, and the event lapsed. There was a revival of interest in 1939 but war intervened.

It wasn't until 1947 that the race was held again and it has been growing in popularity ever since.

This is the organizing club —the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron and the Boston Yacht Club — have raised the entry limit to 90 yachts, more than 1961 when actual entry was 53 yachts.

Indications are that, as in 1961, eight Canadian yachts, most of them from Nova Scotia will enter this year's race, starting July 16 at noon and expected to take about three days to complete.

NO CANADIAN WINNER

The race has never been "on" by a Canadian yacht, in contrast, to the 1920s when the Americans never had pressed to find a suitable adversary in the racing-fishing schooner Bluenose and her gritty skipper, Capt. Angus Walters of Lunenburg, N.S.

The course is 360 nautical miles following the rhumb line—the shortest distance between Marblehead, Mass., and Halifax. There are two possible routes—the outside or inside courses, and weather conditions are usually the deciding factor on which one a skipper chooses.

As the yachts near the Nova Scotia coast, those following the inside courses have to contend with the rocky coastline and numerous shoals. Those on the outside have the open Atlantic but the winds are sometimes unfavorable. In some cases the yachts may be halted in dead calm or thick fog.

Each yacht is given a handicap time at the start based on size Although the larger yachts carrying the most sail usually cross the finish line many hours ahead of the smaller ones, they aren't necessarily the winners.

Victor two years ago was the Robin Too II, a yawl owned by Fred Hood of Marblehead. The schooner Lord Jim was first across the finish line on that occasion and the Robin Too II was among the last, but it won on its corrected time.

A distinctive feature of the affair comes several days after the race when most of the competing yachts team up with dozens more from the two countries for a cruise along the Nova Scotia coast and into Lac Bras D'Or Lakes in Cape Breton.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—The 3-year-old filly Alibhai Flower and the accomplished apprentice, Ron Turcotte, won Monday's Greenwood feature, the Kohinoor Purse, before a chilled gathering of 8,068.

Turcotte, the youngster from Grand Falls, N.B., made Alibhai Flower his fourth victory of the afternoon and 17th of the meeting which opened a week ago.

Mendel, owned by Hugh Grant of Bradford, Pa., was second and Balakisir, owned by Mike Long of Toronto, third. Alibhai Flower, at 5-to-2, returned $7.50.

SIGN 34

NEW YORK (AP)—Fred Corcoran, tournament director of the International Golf Association, said Monday that 34 countries have been signed for the annual Canada Cup and International Trophy matches in Paris Oct. 24-27. "Everything is well organized," Corcoran said. "The host country will pick the U.S. players from a list which we shall submit to them. Needless to say, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus are in the forefront, at the moment."

James Franciscus Captures One of Prize Roles of Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Just as James Franciscus had grown accustomed to being an also-ran, he turned up a winner.

"I figured it would take me another six-seven years to get up to playing leads in pictures," says Jim, already a star of television. "Then suddenly it happened all at once."

The lean blond actor captured one of the prize roles of the season as Herman Wouk's hero in Youngblood Hawke. For at least part of his break he can thank the recalcitrance of Warren Beatty, who was set for the role but dropped out of the picture just before shooting started. The story is that Warner Brothers balked at his terms, though maybe it was vice versa.

Anyway, it was lucky for Jim Franciscus, whose golden future also includes a promising television series and his second child, due in a few months. He is married to Kitty Wellman, daughter of veteran director William Wellman.

He still finds it hard to believe that he is playing Hawke. OPPOSITE A LOSER

"I'm usually the loser," he commented. "I lost out to Tab Hunter for Damn Yankees at Warner Brothers, to Richard Beymer for Adventures of a Young Man. I've lost out a lot myself, after coming close: The studio always decided on an actor more established."

"I also missed out on PT 109, though it was partly my doing: I found Walsh, who was then the director, wanted me to do an imitation of President Kennedy. I didn't want to, so I turned out. Cliff Robertson played the role but didn't imitate him."

Franciscus, 26, was a Clayton, Mo., boy who moved to New York when he was 11.

"I had a pretty normal boyhood," he remarked. "When I was small I lived a Tom Sawyer-like life on the Mississippi, trapping muskrat and everything. Then I went east and got the advantage of a good education (Yale). Lucky I did. Otherwise I might still be on the Mississippi, trapping muskrat."

Hooks 15-lb. Grey Trout, Line Attached

ENDERBY, B.C. (CP)—Dave Carson, 17, pulled in a deep - lying grey trout from Mabel Lake Sunday.

And eyeing the ninepounder, Dave's father, Ben, bet his son $25 he could not hook another.

So Dave went trolling, and snagged into a piece of wire. Hand over hand he pulled in 200 feet of it—and a fighting, 15-pound grey was on the end.

The trout had a rusted hook in its mouth and Dave figured the fish had been swimming around in a 200-foot circle for about a month.

Bisons Whip Crackers, Wings Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching his first victory since being shipped to the International League by Philadelphia Phillies, scrubby Marcelino Lopez went beyond the call of duty and scored what proved to be the winning run as Arkansas Travelers defeated Columbus Jets 3-2.

Travelers' victory Monday night put them one game behind the southern division leader, Atlanta Crackers who fell to Buffalo Bisons 10-4.

Indianapolis Indians whipped Jacksonville Suns 9-2 and Rochester Red Wings outlasted Syracuse Chiefs 10-9. The Toronto at Richmond game was postponed because of cold weather.

Lopez tripled with two out in the fifth and scored the third Arkansas run on Johnny Upham's single.

Travelers had jumped ahead in the second inning on Lee Ella's single that drove home two runs.

Atlanta right-hander Bob Sadowski had a five-game winning streak shattered by the tough Bisons — Mainly on a grand slam homer by Joe Christopher and another two-run belt by Sammy Taylor.

Christopher's blast broke a 4-4 tie in the fourth and Taylor's wrapped it up later in the same inning.

Harmon Killebrew slapped a two-run homer in the sixth that broke a 2-2 tie and put Indianapolis ahead of Jacksonville to stay.

Fred Valentine hit a grand slam homer and batted in six runs to pace Red Wings past Syracuse.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

FOR MAY 15

Aries (March 21 to Apr. 19): Make concessions in certain areas, not necessarily including financial ones. Be firm where securities are concerned. Draw line. Don't permit others to "call the tune."

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Prestige, dignity, accomplishment spotlighted. Permit Taurus strength, determination to come to fore. Say what you think. Stand up for the right. Be stubborn if necessary.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Good moon aspect today means you must concentrate on self-improvement. Highlight facts, leave rumors, gossip to others. Adhere to principles. Stay close to home.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Read Aries message. No time to give in merely for sake of convenience. Many in authority keep eye on your activities. Be fair, but firm. Reassure one who "panics" easily.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Today look beyond immediate indications. Permit imagination, creative powers to flow freely. Have confidence. Be direct, dynamic. Accept challenge, added responsibility.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Finish what you start. Remember promises you made regarding budget. Avoid emotional as well as material extravagance. Don't take on added burdens today. Stress practicality.

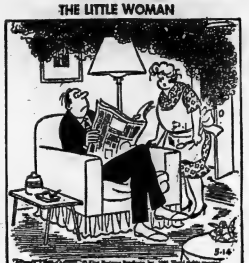
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Be sure of actions, plans. Day not so good for speculation. Better to follow outline, blueprints. Set example, especially if younger persons are involved.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Intuitive qualities active. You are able to perceive events. You can size up situations with accuracy. Trust yourself. Others will follow suit. Important that you earn respect.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Avoid scattering forces. Don't attempt to run in all directions at once. Be specific, direct. Explain yourself. Don't leave too much to others. Speak plainly.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Follow through on suggestions, plans independently. Check details personally. Others are apt to do wrong thing, but motive may count little in long run. Easier if you can be there in person.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Communication of utmost importance. Not enough to merely "wish." Get thoughts in order. Then put them across. Excellent day for creative activity, including writing.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Family, home, domestic problems require attention. Be with one who means much to you. Explain position. Share thoughts, knowledge, ideas. Approval of loved ones important.

If Today Is Your Birthday . . . you have wonderful sense of humor. You are loyal, independent. Year features opportunity for expansion.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

Well, well, well, the big day has come and for all their prideful boasting, the 48th O.C.A. have returned to their native haunts a sadder but wiser bunch of big city slickers who failed in their attempt to overawe their country cousins. "Yes Sir," they said, "we will leave their shelves bare of trophies after the din of battle is over." But alas and alack they went home in the same shape that the little dog found Mother Hubbard's cupboard. - Absolutely bare. For once, the gallant Belleville boys, headed by that bonnie laddie, our sports chairman, George Christopher and the ladies' sports chairman, Bessie Buckley, made a clean sweep of all the trophies. It certainly was a grand day for the village rs on the Moira.

After the sports were over a lovely dinner was served, with 1st vice-president Stan Mcbourne in the chair. He asked Comrade Hobbs to say grace and the comrade complied with an appropriate saying of Robbie Burns, "Some ha've meat they canna eat, and some ha've nane that want it, but we ha'e meat and we can eat and so the Lord be thankit." After the meal was over came the presentation of trophies. Sports Chairman George Christopher congratulated the winners and consoled the losers, wishing them better luck in our return match in the fall.

Unit 201 better watch out then as the 48th O.C.A. have really got blood in their eyes and are determined to avenge their inglorious defeat. Comrade George thanked his committee and all who assisted in making it a standout event. Capt. Al Lepper of the 48th darts team, presented Capt. C. Feather-stone of Unit 201 Darts with the Jimmy Doig Trophy. Capt. George Hickey, 48th, presented the Dilsar Trophy to Capt. Ted Mowers for cribbage. Capt. Jim Brennan presented the Fashner Trophy to Capt. P.B. Kelly, 201, winners in the rifle competition, a tough one, demanding a recount but the local boys won by a mere 6 points, which saw some above average shooting.

GOT CUP

Capt. Babe Nicholson, 48th, presented captain June Walker with the championship cup for cribbage and captain Flo O'Neil, 48th, (no relation to Peggy) presented the Mabel Trophy to captain Bessie Buckley for darts. Cdr Wimela Fuzzen was presented with the Agnes Hurst Trophy by Cde. W. Hurst for high three darts in the ladies' competition. The Fitzgerald Trophy emblematic of the overall championship was presented to Comrade George Christopher, sports chairman Unit 201 by the 48th O.C.A. sports chairman Alex Buchanan. This closed out the sports festivities and a very enjoyable evening of dancing and entertainment under Comrade Don Stevens, commenced. 48th O.C.A. president M. Tracey congratulated the ANAF Unit 201 on their clean sweep of all the trophies, but, with a sob in his voice vowed that it will never happen again, as long as he is president. Well it may be so but time will tell. The president gave hearty invitation to all the members and their friends to come to Toronto on 1st June at the Trooping of the Colors to the 48th Highlanders of Canada.

The entertainment chairman has another big dance coming up on Friday so come on down for a grand time with your pals but be sure and reserve enough energy to attend the big Stag party on 1st June. Comrade Don says it will be something to write home about. He is also expecting to arrange a dance for Friday that May. So you can give your wives and girl friends a break before the Stag.

The sick chairman reports that all ailing comrades are being looked after but that several of the comrades are not improving as fast as was hoped. The members are all hoping that there will soon be a change for the better for these comrades and that they will soon be with us again. -

On the 25th May two big events. Provincial Command of the Ladies' Auxiliary are having a meeting here in Belleville and the entertainment chairman has arranged a dance in their honor for Friday, May 24th. The Unit 201 Pipe Band are chartering a bus to go to Cape Vincent at the invitation of the R.C. Legion of Brockville to attend the big parade commemorating Canadian-American Friendship Week. See Comrade Roy Ridley if you want to go. If you are lucky he might have a seat left.

Interesting item for Hasty Pee veteran: There will be a dedication of the Padre Goforth Memorial Window at the Protestant Chapel in Camp Borden Sunday, June 2nd. Fall in at the nearest parade ground to the Chapel at 10.30 a.m. The O.C. School of Infantry has invited all members attending to dine at the school dining room where we can all eat together. Lists have been placed in the Royal Canadian Legion and the ANAF Unit 201 clubrooms for anyone wishing to go by bus. If you wish to do this please get your name down as soon as possible so it can be determined how many buses are needed. Further information can be obtained from Sgt. H. M.M. Angus B. has indicated he will be on the Belleville bus and although we realize the seriousness of the occasion it could be as good as a regular reunion. So until next week, the best of luck to you all.

ASTRONAUT COOPER SOARS INTO ORBIT

Two Arrested In Violent Start To Steel Strike

Pickets Tried to Stop Trucks Entering Plant

HAMILTON (CP)—To avoid further violence at the strike-bound plant of Kent Steel Products Limited, company officials today ordered back two trucks when strikers stood ready to stop the vehicles.

The company decision was made pending an application for an interim court injunction which could prevent picketing or limit the number of pickets at the plant.

Ernest Fish, international vice-president of the International Molders and Allied Workers' Union (CLC), was still trying to arrange a meeting with company officials. He met briefly Tuesday with Kent President Stanley Sobol outside the plant after a melee between police and picketers.

The impromptu conference came after police had arrested two strikers following violence in which pickets tried to interfere with trucks leaving and entering the plant.

Mr. Sobol said he wanted to meet with Mr. Fish but not with E. C. Witthane, the union's Ontario representative, with whom the company has been bargaining.

Earlier, Mr. Sobol said the company would seek an injunction to prevent picketing at the plant.

Forty - five employees struck Monday night after rejecting a company offer to increase wages by an 11-cent-an-hour package deal in a two-year contract which would be the union's first at the plant.

MISSILES RAIN DOWN

Violence flared when 15 policemen arrived and were met by a hail of stones, pop bottles and fists. No one was injured.

Amilo Marconato, 20, was charged with wilful damage and obstructing police. Italo Zanin, 22, was charged with obstructing police.

A striker pulled a car across the plant entrance and broke the key in the ignition lock to prevent another attempting to enter.

A fist fight broke out between the striker and police when a tow truck arrived to pull the car away. Another striker tried to punch the driver.

City police officers led by Inspector Ernest Bromley engaged in a 10-minute shoving match with the 45 strikers before a second truck got through the picket line.

At one point Mr. Sobol emerged from the crowd and walked over to the idling truck. "Take it in, run over them," he yelled.

ARREST STRIKER

A third striker was taken into custody after keys were taken from a truck parked in the company compound.

As the striker was placed in a patrol wagon, Mr. Sobol walked up to the demanding officers and said if the men allowed his trucks through he would not press charges against this man. The pickets held a brief conference, then announced the trucks could leave.

Three trucks left and three more went in.

A union spokesman said current wages now are $1.95 an hour. The company package offer was based on a seven-cent raise in the first year and four cents in the second year.

Mr. Sobol said everything would be fine if the union would accept a report handed down by a conciliation board last month which called for 17 cents over three years.

JOBLESS FIGURE FOR MID-APRIL DOWN 87,000

Decline Greater Than Usual Rate

OTTAWA (CP)—With job opportunities rising in industry and on the farm, Canada's unemployment total dropped last month to 462,000, the bureau of statistics and the federal labor department reported today in a joint statement.

The mid-April jobless total was 87,000 lower than the total for March and 23,000 lower than the total for April last year.

It represented seven per cent of the labor force, compared to unemployment rates of 7.5 per cent in April, 1962, and 9.7 per cent in April, 1961. It was also a sharp drop from the 8.4-per-cent rate of March of this year.

The statement said employment increased and unemployment declined more than usual for this time of year. Total employment jumped by 134,000 to 6,097,000 during the month.

The job picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Mid-April 1963	Mid-April 1962
Labor force	6,559	6,512
Employed	6,097	5,963
Unemployed	462	549

The monthly report is based on a survey of 35,000 households across Canada during the week ended April 20.

BETTER THAN AVERAGE

The 87,000 drop in unemployment between March and April was "somewhat larger than average" for this time of year.

Farming activity showed its normal increase, with agricul-

CANADA IS LAST VOICE AGAINST FARE INCREASE

Country Making Money on Rates

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada, at least for the time being, is the cheapest place in North America from which to catch a scheduled flight across the Atlantic.

The United States government beat a strategic retreat Tuesday from its position as one of two staunch opponents to a higher transatlantic air fare, leaving Canada as the last holdout.

All other countries involved had previously approved the suggestion by the International Air Transport Association that the discount on return tickets be cut to five per cent from 10. The higher rate was to have gone into effect April 1, but instead a battle between the British ministry of aviation and the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board developed.

Until Tuesday, the CAB ordered the two U.S. transatlantic carriers, Pan-American and Trans-World, to keep flying at the old low rate. The British ministry told them that if they did, they would be subject to having their planes detained in the U.K.

Canada's Air Transport Board rejected the new fares also, but Canada is protected by its bilateral agreements with European carriers which provide that where fares are in dispute, the old rates automatically stay in force until the dispute is regulated.

HAS NO AGREEMENTS

The U.S. has no such agreements, and the CAB actually has no authority to regulate intra-Canada air fares as Canada's ATB has.

Legislation to give the CAB this power is being prepared.

Italian Nuclear Scientist Spy for USSR Says Britain

SOUTHEND, England (AP)—Giuseppe Martelli, an Italian nuclear scientist, was accused in court today of being a spy for the Soviet Union.

Martelli, 39, was employed by the European Atomic Energy Community (Euratom) and had been working since last November in Britain's Culham Research Laboratory in Oxfordshire.

He was arrested April 28 upon his return from a trip to Brussels and accused of committing "an act preparatory to the commission of an offence" against the British Official Secrets Act.

At a preliminary hearing, the prosecutor conceded that Martelli was engaged in research at Culham that was not subject to security restrictions.

But he declared:

"The case for the Crown here is that this defendant is a spy working for the Russian intelligence service and that he was passed the two U.S. transatlantic carriers, Pan-American and Trans-World, to keep flying at the old low rate. The British ministry told them that if they did, they would be subject to having their planes detained in the U.K.

Canada's Air Transport Board rejected the new fares also, but Canada is protected by its bilateral agreements with European carriers which provide that where fares are in dispute, the old rates automatically stay in force until the dispute is regulated.

HAS NO AGREEMENTS

The U.S. has no such agreements, and the CAB actually has no authority to regulate intra-Canada air fares as Canada's ATB has.

Legislation to give the CAB this power is being prepared.

of Martelli's home at Abingdon and his office at the Culham Laboratory turned up a packet of cigarettes in which seven had been hollowed out. Inside each were two small slips of paper bearing a series of numbers which a detective concluded were for use in coding messages.

Another find, the prosecutor said, was a diary containing the London address of Nicolai Karpekov, a Soviet intelligence officer.

He said the diary also contained a password system to be used in meeting with a Soviet intelligence operative.

A pair of Martelli's shoes, the prosecutor continued, had hollowed-out heels.

Martelli, six feet, one inch tall and darkly handsome, was born in Pisa and studied for his doctorate in physics at the University of Naples. From 1946 to 1949 he was engaged in research at the University of Rome. He became a professor there in 1950 and held the post until 1956, when he became a research physicist at the University of Birmingham, England.

Liberal Policies on Trade Not Likely to Be Opposed

OTTAWA (CP)—The new Liberal government's policies on trade and foreign investment aren't likely to run into any serious opposition attack in the new Parliament.

In fact, the government might even find itself being prodded from some opposition sectors to get moving faster toward its declared goals of free trade and greater domestic control of the nation's economy.

Thursday's opening of the new Parliament coincides with the opening of international trade talks at Geneva. Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp, attending there, has declared Canada's support of the United States initiative to achieve international tariff cuts of 50 per cent.

A similar blessing of this goal had been bestowed by the former Conservative government.

CONTRIBUTORY PENSION PLAN TO BE FEATURE

Legislation Ready For New Session

OTTAWA (CP)—Proposals for a national contributory pension plan, incentives to stimulate industry and a massive program of university scholarships are expected to feature the government's outline of legislation for the first session of the 26th Parliament.

The Pearson government's legislative program will be unveiled shortly after 3 p.m. EDT Thursday when Chief Justice Robert Taschereau reads the speech from the throne to the opening session.

Contents of the speech, written by the cabinet as a forecast of the measures it will present to Parliament, still are a closely - guarded secret known only to the 26 cabinet members and a handful of high civil servants.

But much of it can be guessed at on the basis of the promises stressed by Prime Minister Pearson and his chief lieutenants during the campaign for the April 8 federal election.

HAVE PRIORITY

In addition to contributory measures, industrial incentives and scholarships, these measures also had priority in the Liberal election platform:

1. A new department of industry to promote production.

2. Legislation enabling appointment of an associate minister of agriculture to concentrate on eastern farm problems.

3. Declaration of a 12-mile fishing zone to bar foreign fleets from the rich offshore fisheries and protect Canadian fishermen.

4. National study on biculturalism and bilingualism.

5. Creation of a municipal development fund to lend money

Celestial Ride 'Quite A Thrill' Says Spaceman

Has Been Given 'Go' For at Least 7 Orbits

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper set sail on longest-planned U.S. space flight today, described his celestial ride as "quite a thrill" and early in the mission was given a go-ahead for at least seven of his planned 22 orbits.

During the first orbit he gave his spacecraft systems a thorough wringing out and pronounced them all in excellent shape. Mercury Control Centre at Cape Canaveral then relayed the word that he was "go" for at least six more orbits.

Even then after entering orbit, Cooper reported that everything was "mighty good."

Astronaut Walter Schirra, in communication with Cooper at Cape Canaveral, said: "Great sport, isn't it?"

"It sure is," Cooper replied as he whizzed along on the first of a planned 22 circuits of the globe.

That was the first of three critical "go" or "no-go" decisions scheduled for the 34-hour flight. The other two were set for orbits seven and 17.

READY FOR EMERGENCY

Principal landing areas in the Atlantic and Pacific were at the end of each of these passes. However, alternative landing areas were located around the world in case of an emergency.

The decision was passed on to Cooper by Capt. Jerauld R. Gentry, capsule communicator at the Guaymas, Mexico, Station.

"You're go for seven," Grissom—who made a sub-orbital flight two years ago—reported.

"Roger," replied an enthusiastic Cooper.

Cooper, 36-year-old air force major, rocketed into space aboard a powerful Atlas booster which blasted away from Cape Canaveral at 9:04 a.m. EDT with a roar and a crash of flames.

GOES INTO ORBIT

Five minutes later, the 15-ton space craft settled into its planned orbital path more than 100 miles above the earth. This was announced by Mercury Control Centre.

Cooper took the control stick to rotate his capsule 180 degrees on its yaw axis so that he was riding upright and backward, with the craft's blunt heat shield pushing a path through space.

As he turned the capsule around, Cooper told Schirra he could see his speed "building" following close behind him in another orbit.

Cooper replied that it was "silver."

At the same time the astronaut reported that all of his supplies, electrical and other capsule systems were in excellent condition.

Cooper, the 10th man and sixth American to rocket into space, was aiming for the longest U.S. manned flight yet.

The flight plan called for him to circle the globe 22 times, travelling nearly 600,000 miles on a lonely voyage lasting 34 hours, 19 minutes. He is due, right, his Faith 7 craft will parachute to a landing in the Pacific southeast of Midway Island about 7:23 p.m. EDT Thursday.

DOESN'T MATCH RUSSIANS

The scheduled mission is nearly four times longer than Schirra's six-orbit trip last Oct. 3. But it falls far short of the tandem flights made last August by Russians Andrian Nikolayev and Pavel Popovich, who remained aloft for 64 and 48 orbits respectively.

Cooper's Atlas lifted off only two minutes behind the earliest possible launching schedule. The short delay was caused by a 10-minute hold at the ground control guidance system for the Atlas.

The shot had been postponed Tuesday because of trouble with a tracking radar on Bermuda.

NEGRO LEADERS WANT STATE TROOPS OUT

Say Governor Fighting Agreement

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—A Negro leader says Governor George C. Wallace is trying to undermine a biracial agreement on Birmingham racial problems by keeping state troopers in the city.

And while Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth was calling on Wallace Tuesday night to remove the highway patrolmen, Wallace again was calling on President Kennedy to withdraw federal troops he sent into Alabama.

Wallace replied to Shuttlesworth, one of the leaders in the desegregation campaign, that the state troopers would remain in Birmingham as long as he thinks they are needed to help maintain law and order.

About 3,000 soldiers have been sent to military posts in Alabama, but they are not in Birmingham.

The president had lunch Tuesday with 25 Alabama publishers and editors and the main topic of discussion was the state's racial problems.

NEED TO TALK

Kennedy urged co-operation between local Negro and white leaders to help keep the Negro trend toward extremism would best be offset by conference between moderates on both sides. The luncheon had been scheduled for some time.

Mushrooming developments relating to Alabama's racial problems included:

President Kennedy delayed decision on asking Congress for broader authority in civil rights cases pending results of efforts to end racial disturbances in the South.

About 300 Negroes met in Selma, Ala., 100 miles to the south, to plan a mass demonstration drive. The sheriff and about 400 deputies stood guard, spurring away carloads of white persons. No trouble was reported.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., southeastern desegregation leader, said in Cleveland, Ohio, that racial discrimination "must be uprooted from every society." He said desegregation in Birmingham would send repercussions throughout the southern states.

A Negro newspaper man, Ben Holman of the Cabanss Broadcasting System, was taken to hospital with face cuts and a possible broken nose after a man jumped him in New York's Harlem Negro district Tuesday night.

Holman, 32, wrote a series on the militant Black Muslims when he was a reporter for the Chicago Daily News. He said he recognized several of his assailants during a review of the black supremacy sect that urges separation of the races.

Ramblings of Revolt

Tariff Accord Called Rich Man's Club

LONDON (CP)—Rumblings of revolt against GATT as a "rich man's club" reverberated today as the scene of world trade discussions shifted from London to Geneva.

GATT is the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. A conference under its auspices opens in Geneva Thursday with up to 50 countries including Canada gathered to consider the proposed 50-per-cent cut in world tariffs envisaged under the so-called "Kennedy round."

Britain's Labor party "shadow" Sharp, head of the Canadian delegation, left here for Geneva today after attending a preliminary two-day round of Commonwealth trade talks. In a final press conference, Sharp denied he had ever supported the idea of a 50-per-cent linear cut in Canadian tariffs.

Sharp said he was "astounded" that the Daily Express had claimed "Canada bombshell" Monday when other newspapers carried his "moderate" remarks "without headlines."

"In this world it is in the interests of the Commonwealth countries to expand world trade," he added.

The minister said he is pleased his Commonwealth colleagues, including Britain's Frederick Erroll, agreed that GATT negotiations should cover agriculture. He was particularly concerned with access to the European Common Market countries which he hoped would be an "expanding" market for Canadian farm products.

The communiques at the end of the conference here formally recognized the need for an expansion of world trade gener-

Hasty Pees Receive Painting Commemorating Cassino

The glorious part which the Canadian Army played in the Battle of Monte Cassino in Italy during World War II has been commemorated in an original painting which will hang in the Sergeant's Mess of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the Belleville Armories.

The painting presented to the Sergeants' Mess of the second A. Mitrey C.D. (retired) shows the Monastery Hill with the famed Monte Cassino Monastery on the summit. The Cassino battle was one of the most unpleasant experiences of the Hasty Pees during the war.

The autory of the Monte Cassino Monastery goes back to the seventh century when the original hospice was founded by St. Benedict and grew into the first monastery of the Benedictine Order.

Incorrectly suspected of being occupied and used as an observation post by the Germans, the Monastery was destroyed by air attack on orders of General Mark Clark of the Fifth Army. It has since been restored to something of its former majestic appearance, but most of the art and historical treasures accumulated over the centuries are irreplacable.

Also added to the wall decoration of the local Sergeants' Mess is a painting of the "Kent Gate" at Quebec City. Less familiar than the often-pictured St. Louis Gate, the chateau style of the Kent Gate has a somewhat greater dignity of architecture than its better known companion. This picture also was presented by C/Sgt. Milroy.

Many Dogs Still Tagless

Dog days are here again—which also mean tag days for the dog owners.

Why it is no one has satisfactorily explained, but dogs seem inane obvious in fine weather than in bad. Dogs running at large that is. If they're caught in the act—of running at large—it means a recovery fine. And if they're caught without tags it means an extra levy, warns Belleville dog catcher Charles Thorn.

So far, Mr. Thorn reports his department has netted dues on 1,400 city canines. However, he says obvious there are up to 900 somewhere in Belleville without city tags. The cost of a tag ranges from $2 to $4, according to sex, while the charge for being caught tagless ranges up to $6.

Incidentally, dogs aren't the only pets coming to Mr. Thorn's attention these days. He's also receiving complaints about cats in the East Hill area. Chief among the depredations listed against the straying felines is damage of budding spring flower beds.

Optical Firm, City, Cleaning Up Property

The wooded south end of the American Optical property on Wellington Street, north of Albert College, is taking on a park-like appearance these days as city works employees trim out the undergrowth and do in general spring clean-up job.

The property is the one-time site of the Belleville fairgrounds prior to its being moved to the present site during the 1920's. Over the years the area has become grown up with underbrush.

At the same time the woods area along the roadway has been used as a miniature garbage dump, resulting in an untidy and unsightly appearance.

Finally complaints to city hall prompted action and with the co-operation of American Optical a general clean-up of the road right-of-way and adjoining private property has resulted.

This was the price before May 1 when tickets were increased to six for $1.00.

Commissioners decided Tuesday that there would be a reduction, Earlier, TTC Chairman Ralph Day said the fares would be decreased and would not be altered again this year—despite the threat of legal action by Toronto York council to block a $2,500,000 subsidy from the Metropolitan Toronto council.

Kiwanians Hear Of Trip Through Canal System

The Trent Canal System and points of interest this route were set the scene for Kiwanian Don Hickson's talk to the Kiwanians at the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday.

Mr. Hickson described his adventurous trip on the canal system and showed slides of his journey, in a cabin cruiser he built by himself, powered by two 30 horse power motors.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Hickson said he got the idea of no other place other than the Bay of Quinte that was as well equipped for boating facilities. He said the Bay of Quinte offered a shelter for small water craft as well as providing facilities for larger boats.

He went on to tell how he started with a homemade boat of one inch chestnut boards from a lumber pile on his father's farm when he was about 14 years of age.

"Then" he said, "we built a duck hunting boat equipped with an inner tube under the bottom and a 5 horse motor with a 35 engine, which handled very nicely."

The biggest challenge was when I decided to build a cabin cruiser." He said he started the boat in October in his garage and the following May the boat was launched and ready to go.

SLIDES SHOWN

Mr. Hickson said he first had 35 horse power motors on the boat, which was not quite enough for the size of the boat. He said it had to be run at full throttle to plane it at all nicely.

The speaker said he then equipped the boat with two 50 horse power motors and at full throttle is capable of 32 knots and at full throttle will reach 32 knots or close to 40 miles an hour.

Following his address, Mr. Hickson showed the members present colored slides, showing the Trent Canal system and his experience at going through the different locks. He explained it was the first time he had driven a boat through a lock and it was quite a new experience for him. He was accompanied on the trip by his family.

Scouting activities

15th LADIES' AUXILIARY

The April meeting of the 15th Ladies' Auxiliary took place at Sir Winston Churchill School. The treasurer's report was given by Thompson.

The Cub camp is to take place some time in June, and the mothers were asked for assistance. It was suggested that the mothers might like to go out and camp overnight with the boys, and join in the activities.

A resolution was passed whereby a form letter should be sent to all mothers of new boys inviting them to come to the regular meetings.

A "make-believe" tea was discussed as a means of raising funds, instead of having a bake sale.

Nominations for a new slate of officers for the coming year were discussed.

The meeting closed with the Scout Minute, and refreshments were served by Mrs. L. Wilson.

18th BOY SCOUT AUXILIARY (Park Dale)

The April meeting of the 18th Belleville Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Lajoie, Sidney St.

Following the business meeting, president Mrs. A. Hyatt welcomed two guests, Sea Rover Frank McKenna and Brian Allen, who came as representatives of the newly formed Rover Crew. Although the Rovers have been active since the beginning of the year, they have only recently become an official crew, consisting of their skipper John Foster, and five young men between the ages of 16 and 17 years.

Rover McKenna assisted by Rover Allen gave an informative talk on the activities of a Rover Crew.

With the formation of this new group, the 'Family of Scouting' in the Park Dale area is complete.

The next Auxiliary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Moon, 545 Sidney Street, on May 30th.

LADIES' AUXILIARY DISTRICT COMMITTEE

The Ladies' Auxiliary District Committee held their annual pot-luck supper on Monday, May 6th, at Bridge Street United Church with 11th Belleville Auxiliary as hostesses for the occasion.

The meeting opened with a welcome from Mrs. R. Berry, president of the 11th Belleville Auxiliary. Rev. Davis said grace.

The head table guests were introduced by Mrs. A. Fort, president of the District Committee which included, Mrs. R. Berry; D. C. M. Maw; Mrs. J. Barton, secretary of the District Committee; Mr. P. Pickering, president of District Council; A.D.C. S. Sharman; Rev. and Mrs. H. Davis; and M. B. Chaplin, chairman of 11th Group Committee. Greetings were expressed by Messrs. Maw, Pickering and Chaplin. A.D.C. Sharman led in a rollicking singsong.

The Cubs and Scouts of 11th put on two amusing skits which they produced and staged themselves. A film 'Jamboree Diary 1961,' was shown by Mr. G. Shaver. Many thanks go to 6th Belleville Auxiliary for providing the attractive (Scout Hat) place cards.

Mrs.L. Reynolds gave a report on uniform changes and stated that Thomasburg have a Scout troop and are in need of uniforms.

One point that emerged from the Commonwealth discussions, observers agreed, was the dissatisfaction felt by African and West Indian members of the Commonwealth with the way GATT is working so far. There appeared to be a feeling that the multi-nation organization set up after the Second World War tends to operate in favor of the more highly developed industrial countries.

May Seek Pool at School Since RCAF May Be Forced To Close Its Pool to Town

TRENTON — The possibility that the RCAF may be forced to restrict the use of the South Station swimming pool to personnel and dependents may prove to be a deciding factor in whether the Trenton Board of Education will go ahead in an effort to provide a swimming pool at the high school.

Board member Louis Knack told the board last night that there is a very real possibility that the RCAF may have to deny use of the pool to the town's children because of a breakdown in the pool's filter system.

Mr. Knack pointed out that 4,330 Trenton children had been taught to swim in the Air Force pool over the past 11 years.

Meantime, the Trenton Lions Club has said that it will donate $25,000 towards the cost of a pool in the high school. The general feeling of the board is that other service clubs or individuals might come forward with donations in order to see the town's water safety program go on. The architects responsible for the design of the new vocational wing have offered to prepare sketches of the proposed pool, and submit estimates of construction and maintenance costs, free of charge to the board.

Following a suggestion made by board chairman T. S. Ketcheson, a committee of Mayor E. D. Topping will set up a date (preferably a Sunday) in late September or early October for the official opening of the new vocational wing at the high school. Former provincial Minister of Education, Premier John P. Roberts, federal and area dignitaries will be invited. It was felt that the Ontario government representatives should be asked early to the event as an October Ontario election might find them out on the hustings.

A Department of Education ruling that it would not be feasible for Separate school students to attend technical courses at the high school, while still attending their own school, will be queried. The Department says now that it can't be done—it doesn't say why. Since both the Trenton Board of Education and the Trenton Separate School Board think it's a good idea, the Department will be asked to elaborate on its ruling.

The board voted last night to pay its share of the cost of a bus which will take high school students who miss one or two subjects in their finals to summer school in Kingston. The board pays the government grant of 90 cents per student per day. Cost per student is $1.25. Net cost to the board will be 35 cents per student, per day.

Sale of Set Unfolded in Police Court

TRENTON — The story of a television set, stolen from a Queen Street Trenton resident on May 23, 1955 and the negotiations surrounding the sale of the set, were unfolded in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday.

Joseph Moran, 38, was remanded for one week for sentencing after his convictions by Magistrate T. Y. Wills. Moran pleaded not guilty to the charge of theft and was represented in court by Trenton solicitor Frederick Campbell.

Mrs. Elmo Jones of 40 Queen St. told the court that 2 men had roomed with her "for about a month," in 1955. She said that she and her husband had gone away for the weekend in May of that year and when they returned, their tenants had left, and so had their $350 television set.

"I haven't seen him since 1955 until today," said Mrs. Jones, pointing like a nice, quiet man."

Ivan Stewart of Trenton told the court that he had told Bert Libling, the proprietor of The Theatre Bar that he had a television set. When Mr. Libling called him and said that Moran had a set for sale, Mr. Stewart said that he had met Moran in the coffee shop and then went with him to the Queen Street house.

"He tried to sell me the Westerfield," said Mr. Stewart, "but I couldn't see how it would fit into my home. We'd earmarked the TV set out to my car in full view of the next-door neighbors. Then we went back to the Theatre Bar where I got Bert to cash a cheque for $50 which was given to Mr. Moran. On my way home I stopped to show the set to Constable Bradshaw (Trenton Police Department). I thought I had a good buy. That is, I did, until the next day."

Mr. Libling told the court: "I was the sucker who cashed the cheque. Mr. Moran told me that he was selling all his furniture as his wife had died a couple of months back."

Mr. Campbell told the magistrate that Moran had left Trenton for Montreal the day after selling the television set, via taxi (a further charge of defrauding a taxicab company of $75 against Moran was dismissed.)

Moran has spent the past seven years in and out of the United States. He was deported three times. At one point, he served as secretary of an Alcoholics Anonymous group in the U.S.

Mr. Campbell said that Moran had committed no offences since 1955, according to his record.

However, the magistrate questioned whether crimes committed in the States would be recorded on a Canadian record, compiled by the RCMP and called for a further check with American authorities before sentencing the accused.

Given 3 Months For Wire Theft

TRENTON — A Trenton man, Alfred Squiers, 38, of 74 Bay St., was sentenced to three months in jail at Trenton yesterday when he pleaded guilty of a charge of stealing 300 lbs. of scrap copper wire from the Trenton utilities. The wire, valued at $90, has been recovered.

Two other men, Alan Wilson, 30, of 61 Ray St. and Robert McLaughlin, 25, of 62 Leopold St., who pleaded guilty to the same charge were placed on a one year's suspended sentence by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

In explaining the difference in sentences, the magistrate said that in view of the fact that Wilson and McLaughlin had no previous records and Squiers had, he felt the differentiation was warranted.

The court was told that the men had been caught with the wire on the night of May 8 by Constables Davis and Vickers of the Trenton force.

Ratepayers Would Delay Annexation

TRENTON—A comparatively large group of almost 40 persons attended last night's meeting of the Trenton Ratepayers' Association in the town hall. According to president Alfred Vaughan, it still was not good enough. "We need at least 50 per cent turnout of members at each meeting before council will sit up and realize we mean business," he said.

Those present included Councillor Gerald Weaver and G. Whitley of the planning board.

Councillor Weaver answered several questions and at one point, when an expenditure of $48,646 listed under "other protection" in the town audit was questioned, he left the hall to fetch a detailed account of how this money was spent.

Later, at Councillor Weaver's suggestion, the association decided it would present council with a list of complaints and questions only if the councillor was unable to answer them satisfactorily at the next meeting of the association.

The councillor said the $48,646 was for magistrate's and police court costs, payment of the area share towards the county courthouse in Belleville, and miscellaneous items in the protection to persons and property category.

ANNEXATION PROTEST

The meeting also authorized Mr. Vaughan to appear again before the Ontario Municipal Board, requesting that annexation of parts of Murray and Sidney township be delayed until storm and sanitary sewers are extended to those parts of town now without them. "This will take at least six years," said Mr. Vaughan, and he stated that sidewalks and curbs were being constructed at the expense of sorely-needed sewers.

President Vaughan will also oppose annexation on grounds he will not increase the town's industrial assessment, since the land involved is earmarked for residential development.

The areas in question have been approved by the OMB for annexation on Jan. 1, 1964.

The association also agreed, by a vote of 17 to 9, to request that the town adopt a one-year term for council members instead of the present two years.

Let Contract For Sidewalk

TRENTON — The Trenton Parks' Board will install a light, automatically controlled, in the parking area on Mount Pellon. This move comes as the result of a request from board member Clyde Mason.

At last night's meeting of the board, a contract was awarded to Moss-Lassing for the installation of sidewalks in Champlain Park from King Street to the steps on 2nd Ave. Contract price: $858. Flowers will be planted along King Street.

Three area residents, Michael Gartner, John Kerr and M. Loder, had written to the board to complain about older boys playing ball in Champlain Park. Windows have been broken; holes dug; trees damaged. Put up a sign, "No Ball Playing," suggested the residents. But the board can't see where this would do any good. Signs could be removed and there's no way of policing the park. Furthermore, such signs would stop little children from playing ball in the park area, after all, that's what the park is for.

The parks' gardener, Bart Boers, has finished planting hard ornamental maples on Patrick and Guerin Streets; Jackson Drive and Wilson Crescent.

A request from the town to plant trees on North Murray Street will have to be sheltered for the moment, as the board has spent its tree-planting allowance for this year.

A request from residents living in the vicinity of McNichol Park in northeast Trenton, will be honored. Residents want a fence erected on the park to prevent children in the park playground running over into sheep beds, lawns, etc.

Entertainers To Give Shows In Gaza Strip

TRENTON—It's a lonely life out there on the Gaza Strip. That's why the Canadian government has again this year sent out a troupe of 13 entertainers to bring a little life and color into the monotonous daily round of the Canadian armed forces stationed there.

Headed by singing stars Shirley Harmer and Tommy Common, with ragtime pianist Alex Read "thrown in" for good measure, the entertainers left RCAF Station Trenton on Sunday aboard a Yukon aircraft. At Pisa, Italy, the troupe transferred to the less-glamorous Dakota and started a gruelling schedule of 12 shows in 10 days. United Nations' Emergency troops from Canada, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Denmark, Brazil and India will benefit.

In addition to Miss Harmer, Mr. Common and Mr. Read, other musical stars to comprise the CBC party are: French-Canadian vocalist Claudette; dancer Agnes Cabot; magician Robert Downey; fiddler Al Cherney and a musical group under Bert Niosi.

Frankford Tax Rates Increase

TRENTON .— Frankford's mill rates, set last night, are up slightly from 1962. This is due to education costs, says village clerk Glen Mitts.

The residential rate is up .58 of a mill from last year, at 93.28 mills for 1963 compared with 92.70 mills for 1962.

The commercial rate rose by 2.37 mills from 99.99 mills for 1962 to 103.36 mills for 1963.

Parks Board Viewpoint

There are frequently two sides to any story, and Mr. William Hurst, chairman of the Belleville Parks Board, thinks this is certainly true of our objection, presented in an editorial last Saturday, to the proposed road arrangement on Ewick's Island.

While praising the Parks Board for its plans for immediate development of the island, we pleaded for an arrangement whereby a road would circle the central knoll. Only thus, we contended, would access to the picnic and beach area be made easy enough to assure maximum use of the area.

Not so, argues the Parks Board chairman. The persuasive Mr. Hurst makes several telling points. The one which carried the greatest weight with us, and will perhaps be similarly received by many citizens, raises a point of safety. The present plans call for the area to be approached by roads from the east and north. In this way, Mr. Hurst points out, it would not separate the beach and picnic area from the central knoll. The southern part of the one-time island thus will be one unbroken playground for youngsters, who will be able to roam freely without their parents worrying about traffic hazards.

Mr. Hurst also points out something which, when we wrote the editorial, we did not know. Besides the two or more main parking areas to be provided eventually, some of them at least a considerable distance from the beach, there will also be parking space for an estimated 200 cars at the end of the causeway which will approach the picnic area at its northwest limits.

Mr. Hurst argues that it will be simple for car drivers to deposit passengers who cannot walk far and then return to the main parking lots, if the limited space on the northwestern side of the picnic area is filled. This is true, although it does not completely remove our earlier objection. What if the car driver is the person unable to walk any great distance? Or what happens if a lone parent, probably a mother, brings a carload of youngsters and paraphernalia to the beach?

Mr. Hurst's viewpoint of the situation is reasonable and we have presented it here, we hope fairly. One point which impressed us was that the canteen, and other buildings which are planned, will be so placed that it would be relatively simple, at a later date, to join the two roads we have mentioned by a road at the base of the knoll. Perhaps, for this reason, the original plan deserves a trial. Our own conviction is that, in a year or two, this road around the knoll will be deemed necessary because of the heavy traffic to the canteen. We admit, though, that it will have its drawbacks.

Demurrer

Mr. Richard Jackson, the distinguished member of the Parliamentary press gallery whose entertaining and informative column appears on this page three times a week, knows much more about the Ottawa scene than we do and Mr. Jackson is not infallible. He is entitled to his opinions and we print them. But we do not always agree with them.

Our Mr. Jackson, it seems to us, went off the deep end the other day without even the precautionary preparation of holding his nose.

In a sparkling, spacy piece with no malice, he tossed mud pies at the "Striped Pants Brigade" of the Department of External Affairs. Mr. Jackson evidently had a lot of fun writing the column. The opportunity to do so was provided by a speech by Prime Minister Lester Pearson to 150 trade commissioners of the Department of Trade and Commerce, in which he too, took a few digs at the "Striped Pants Boys." The difference was that we doubt whether the Prime Minister meant these allusions to be taken seriously, while Mr. Jackson evidently meant everything he said.

"Maybe sometime it might occur to somebody to have External Affairs take off its morning coat and put on a business suit to hustle along with the working stiffs from Trade and Commerce for business other than the consumption of tea and scones," he concluded.

Now we know nothing about the inner workings of the External Affairs Department. Maybe it needs a shake-up. But changing from morning coat to business suit would not make much difference. What alarms us is the suggestion that the External Affairs experts should "hustle along . . . for business." They ought no more to be expected to promote our foreign trade than the "working stiffs" from the Department of Trade and Commerce ought to be expected to, say, the role of diplomats. Every man should stick to his last. Each task is too complicated to expect a man to be an expert in both.

Gives Birth Twice a Year

By Josephine Hudgins in San Francisco Chronicle

In a rural area less than 10 miles from New Delhi, the village elder sat under a neem tree and talked to some city newspaper reporters about population growth.

"How many children do you have?" a reporter asked.

He: I only have four, but Indrajit here has 18. I've been married 23 years and he has 18 children. Nine living and nine dead."

He gestured with abandon. "It's a matter of God."

Indrajit said his wife has two babies every year.

"Twins?" the Hindu reporter asked incredulously.

"No. One baby every six months," replied Indrajit. "That's a lot of bebies but we'll increase our population to fight the Chinese."

Soon after the Chinese attacked, Balraj Khanna of the Jan Sangh reactionary party declared it was anti-national even to talk of family planning during the emergency.

And what amounts to the Delhi city council decided to go slow with plans for family planning program "since the country needs manpower to fight the Chinese hordes."

But Dr. S. N. Agrawal, assistant chief of the Institute of Economic Growth, quickly answered that the national emergency made family planning even more essential. He criticized the logic of those who wanted larger families in order in to populate the army.

"The children who were born today will be of the fighting age after 18 years and production of arms will have increased by an added burden on the national economy," he said.

Roughly 7 million Indian babies are born every year, of which about 13 million survive to the age of 18.

And if, to take an extreme example, no children were born in India as of today, then for the next 18 years, India would continue to have 13 million people of the age 18 every year.

Still, to the villagers, the wartime emergency created a dilemma.

"Even though we need manpower to fight the Chinese, our country's greatest weakness is its population," the elder said thoughtfully. He continued in a light vein.

"Indrajit's oldest child is 15 and married but he has no children. He's not following his father."

Indrajit noted proudly: "My wife gets a present on Republic Day!" (India's Independence Day, January 26.)

The reporter asked the elder if he'd ever heard of family planning.

"No," he replied, "but it would be a good idea." He said they often thought of having few children.

"If Mr. Desai (the Finance Minister) gives me 1,000 rupees for children, we would". The only remedy they know: abstinence.

The director of India's family planning claimed, "There is not the slightest doubt that people want to have smaller families."

In Col. K. L. Rains said some 15 per cent of married couples in rural areas have some knowledge of birth control methods. There are 8,000 family planning clinics in India, of which 7,000 are in the rural areas.

Approximately 360 million of the country's 450 million people live in the rural areas, so mathematically there is one clinic for every 50,000 villagers.

A powerful, outspoken man, the Colonel liked to talk about his fantastic goal of a 50 per cent reduction in births within ten years. "I am sure I can say a thing cannot be done with interrupted by someone already doing it," he observed.

The only picture on the wall of his modest office was a drawing of a youthful Margaret Sanger who first came to India in the thirties.

Her opponents told her then that birth control, which she had been imprisoned for preaching in America, would be even more ridiculous in India.

They said that Indian women, who scarcely knew where their babies came from, looked upon them as gifts from God.

But Mrs. Sanger went out into the villages and talked to the mothers. She played with the baby of a woman pregnant again, and asked her, through an interpreter, if it would not have been better to wait to have another baby until this one was a little bigger.

The woman said eagerly, "You mean there is a way?"

Twenty-seven studies carried out in various parts of India reveal, according to Colonel Rains, that 70 per cent of mothers over 35 who have four or more children, appear to be ready to learn family planning methods.

The average mother wants a limited number of children at intervals of three to four years.

"And fortunately, there is only a small obstacle due to religious views," the Colonel said. In India never had any Comstock laws.

"Our biggest problem is to find some simple means of birth control."

Then he quoted Mrs. Sanger, who spoke recently in Singapore at the International Planned Parenthood Conference:

"We have been able to discover and make the atom bomb, and yet we have not got a really simple, good and harmless contraceptive."

Statistics show that the birth rate in India is 38.7 per 1,000 while the death rate is less than half, at 18.7. And the death rate will continue to drop, with advances in public health.

In highly developed western countries with an ever-abundance of food, Malthus has been proved wrong.

But his theory is in danger of coming true in India. "So we must aim at doing" Khosla, "Knock, knock. Who's there?" and hope that it is never "Mr. Malthus!" The other fads, and some songs (remember "The Music Goes Round?"), they become awfully tiresome, and sometimes downright nerve-wracking.

With that off our chest, we can only say that we hope the latest game, "Tom Swiftie," doesn't eventually fall by the wayside. At the moment, however, it's amusing, and will probably remain so until it is no longer a novelty.

What is "Tom Swiftie" in fact, who is Tom Swift? Well, Tom Swift is a leading character in a juvenile boys' adventure books, and a "Tom Swiftie" is a Tom Swift quotation that is followed by with an adverb or other descriptive phrase that gives it a humorous twist.

Naturally, the quotations don't have to come from Tom Swift books. You can make them up for yourself, if you wish.

Actually the game of "Tom Swifties" is fairly old, but only recently has it started to take the continent by storm. It was founded in Minneapolis 10 years ago by a group of businessmen, and it was there that one of the greatest "Tom swifties" first saw the light of day. Which one do you pick (we ask morally) as your favorite?

"I'll have another martini," said Tom dryly.

"You have the charm of Venus," Tom murmured disarmingly.

"I've turned over a new leaf," said Tom rakishly.

"I'm glad I passed my electrocardiogram," said Tom wholeheartedly.

"I just lost a game of Russian roulette," said Tom absentmindedly.

There are many more, of course, but we'll save the rest for summer's dog days we say waggishly.

Man Interprets God's Laws For Himself

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In any discussion of world problems and man's fate, somebody sooner or later is bound to proclaim, with a sweet smile, a need, "Well, if we only would obey the Decalogue, everything would be fine. After all, the Ten Commandments are still the best rules to follow."

Yet, if we took such a man seriously and questioned him on only one of the Ten Commandments, and perhaps the most important, what would be the result?

"Thou shalt not kill." A plain, flat statement, without qualification or modification. What does our Christian who accepts Decalogue say to this? Does he accept it, completely and unequivocally? Or does he try to get around it in one way or another.

First of all, he will say that we have a "right" to kill in self-defense — even though the Decalogue does not say that "Thou shalt not kill, except in self-defense."

Then he will say that society has a right to kill offenders, if their offenses is deemed grievous enough — even though the Divine killer, Cain, was not executed by the Lord but was branded and sent into exile.

Next, he will insist that a nation has the "right" to kill enemies in time of war; he may deplore such a necessity (and many Christians do deplore it), but he does not doubt that the Lord is on the side of the righteous. He will also point to many Old Testament passages which seem to confirm his position.

So, finally, what does the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," mean? It amounts to whatever we want to make it. Nobody but a "crank" takes the commandments literally; nearly everybody believes that under certain conditions it is right and proper to kill. Hardly the Socrates, Jesus and a few saints have ever truly believed that it is better to suffer pain than to inflict it.

The trouble with the Ten Commandments is that the Christ believers flout it; it is that even "believers" do not believe it, do not live it, do not even try to do it. A simple sentence of four one-syllable words, "Thou shalt not kill," has confounded Christendom for two thousand years — for the bloodiest wars of all have been religious wars.

Of course, "everything would be fine" if we followed the Ten Commandments. It is not even that we try to follow them and fail — it is that, confronted with these four plain words, we interpret them as we want to, for we have made our own Eleventh Commandment: "Thou shalt follow the Decalogue only until it hurts."

Emphysema Results in Loss of Lung Elasticity

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I was told at the hospital that I need to learn to breathe correctly.

The attendant said I stop breathing when I sleep, and otherwise have shallow breaths.

Has anyone ever learned to breathe? I've tried and tried, and it tires me. Can anything be done? — Mrs. H. C.

Of course you don't stop breathing when you sleep. All our body processes (except mental) go on. The Colonel said, when we sleep. Heart action, metabolism, blood pressure, temperature — all make use of the chance to rest.

Both the rate and depth of your breathing will depend, of course, on whether you have some lung disorder, such as emphysema — a loss of elasticity in the lungs.

You exert muscular tension to inhale. You exhale mainly by relaxing and letting the lungs push the old air out. The amount you exhale, and then the next breath depends on how much stale air has been expelled.

Hence with emphysema (and this is true of some sufferers of asthma, too) many of them (who develop emphysema, too) it is important to use the lungs to the best effect possible under the circumstances.

Yes, you can learn to breathe more correctly. Many already have done so. Even while awake—many of us fall into the habit of taking much of our breathing with the stomach muscles, and chest movement is reduced.

A conscious effort to use your chest muscles will make fuller use of your lungs. Incidentally, any other muscular activity, it gets easier after you've kept doing it for a time.

You can't do this consciously while you are asleep, and it is to be a part of the way your breathing will be shallower.

Do your best while you are awake. Then let nature take care of themselves while you sleep.

Dear Dr. Molner: How can I come up with a word to fit several pupils in the school where I teach who would like my advice. — Mrs. J. M.

There is too much to say on the subject for one column, so I've written a small booklet, "Acne — The Teenage Problem." It is available in return for 30 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope. Address requests to Dr. Molner in care of The Daily Intelligencer, Box Dicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, N.Y. Please be subdued if you use patience and persistence.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it safe for a person with a normal thyroid to take a very light dosage of thyroid to control weight? — M. M.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When you poke through the bins of second hand books at the back in front of second hand book stores, you realize how few are the literary ventures which finally end up anywhere else but in these bargain bins. Our literary and publishing industry appears to be a section of the provision business, along with groceries, meats.

But there is one area of literary activity which may not reach much money but which the author or the publishers, but which must afford immense satisfaction to them in the knowledge that here is work that is guaranteed life for all time on the shelves of libraries and scholars. And that is primary historical research. Three of these have come to my attention just lately. First is the four volumes of Jones' Wills and Taverns" by Edwin C. Guillet, who has many other volumes of pioneer stuff to his credit. Second is "The Canadian Gunsmith, 1608 to 1900," by S. James Gooding of Perth. This is Florence B. Murray's "Muskoka and Haliburton, 1615 to 1875." To read these books is admittedly to perceive what our Canadians forebears did with their daily lives, a little matter the historians, with their infatuation for politics, have fobbed off with an occasional paragraph of generalization. Our pioneers were living souls, not faceless pieces in fatuous political checker games.

Gypsies Came From India

Brockville Recorder and Times

Gypsies originally were a low-caste people in India. They migrated from northwestern India in the first millenium A.D., reaching Greece by about 1300. The Encyclopedia Britannica comments: "Society has always found the gypsies an ethnic puzzle and has tried during its efforts to fit them, by force or fraud, piety or ridicule, into living or cruelty, into some framework of civil or governmental order, so far without success." This is borne out by a genealogical study of several nomadic tribes by a German sociologist, Dr. H. Arnold. He believes that a family, once composing to a nomadic lift, may be a scientific fact. The Romany language, incidentally, has given English two words: "pal" and "cosh."

Surpluses

Moose Jaw Times-Herald

With Canadian grain surpluses already accumulating even at the present high level of exports to China, it would appear that if and when large grain crop deliveries were worked out. Such policies should provide for a curtailment of agricultural production to more realistic and manageable — to say nothing of avoiding output levels, coupled with expansion of Canada's manufacturing base so as to make the country less vulnerable to the shifting tides of international economic-city markets.

ture' accounting for 54,000—roughly .40 per cent—of the March-to-April gain of 134,000 in employment.

On top of this, non-farm employment showed larger improvement than is expected for this season, rising by 80,000 over the month to 5,849,000.

The job report was released, as scheduled, on the eve of the opening of a new session of Parliament. The new Liberal government is expected to unveil a legislative program aimed at coping with Canada's unemployment and economic problems.

MORE JOBS FOR MEN

The report noted that employment of men has strengthened steadily since the beginning of the year, reflecting an improvement in goods-producing industries. In contrast, some of the service - producing industries were lagging isngrowth. The result was that the employment of men increased over the year by 76,000 to 4,290,000, while employment of women was up only 14,000 to 1,707,000.

The year - to - year growth in jobs in non-farm work was 107,000—or two per cent. The report said the largest year-to-year gains appeared to be in construction, manufacturing and transportation.

"Noteworthy was the lack of growth in government and community services," the report added.

Raccoon Sits In Big Tree To View Scene

It may have been trying for a tree-top sitting record — and if so it succeeded.

Crowds of small children viewed the strange sight outside 77 Prince of Wales Drive all day yesterday.

But it never blinked an eye, nor did it move any more than a fool or two during its long all-day vigil.

This morning the big oversize raccoon was gone.

It either decided to move under cover of darkness or was captured by a nocturnal possum marauder.

Whence it came nobody knows.

Two years ago another raccoon visited the area but it remained on the ground. It was seen three or four times then disappeared.

Life Saved By Helmet

A crash helmet may have saved the life of a 19-year-old Corbyville youth thrown 75 feet off his motorcycle at Belleville city limits last night.

Richard Clarence Hayes was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with neck injuries after he was found lying unconscious on the Highway 37 overpass at Highway 401.

Provincial police say he was crossing the overpass when the headlamp on his machine flickered out. The motorcycle struck the 10-inch curb on the bridge, hurling Hayes to the pavement.

His crash helmet was smashed by the impact.

"If he hadn't been wearing it he probably would have been killed outright," said a police officer at the scene.

Hayes was spotted lying on the overpass by a passing motorist, Reginald Cooper, of Belleville.

Liberal Policies

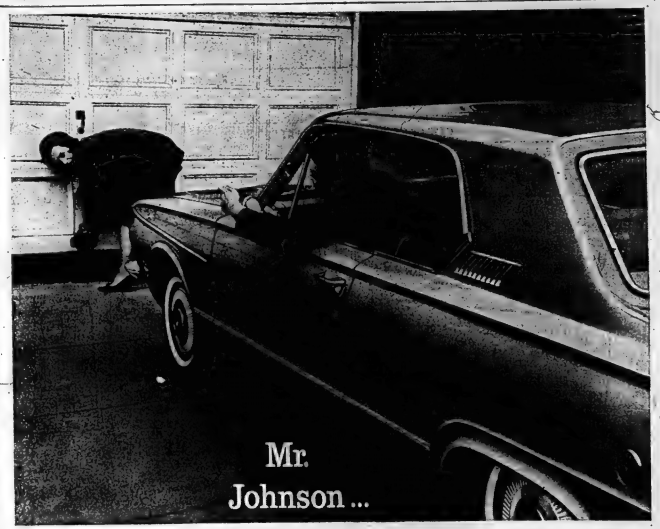
With the last election, the centre of balance in Conservative membership shifted even more strongly to the Prairies, the traditional home of free-trade sentiment in Canada. The Prairies returned 41 Conservatives, compared with 37 from Ontario.

Thus any criticism of government trade policy by he official opposition is more likely to be directed towards the methods chosen rather than the basic policy.



In the other two opposition parties, there are even more radical positions. During the election campaign Social Credit leader Thompson said the eventual goal should be free trade with Britain and the United States, while NDP Leader Douglas advocated an Atlantic trading area on the lines of President Kennedy's Program.

The Conservative opposition isn't likely to oppose a program to reduce the impact of foreign control in the economy, in view of their "Canada first" election campaign slogans and their own efforts while in office to reduce the inflow of foreign capital.

NDP Leader Douglas campaigned for a massive effort to regain control of the economy by developing more Canadian investment. He also called for greater government control over the major decisions made by private capital—both Canadian and foreign—and had some harsh things to say about activities of foreign owners, especially in the auto industry.

Canada Is Last

It would put the CAS in a stronger bargaining position.

The economy class round-trip jet fare from a Canadian point to Europe is about $28 cheaper than the fare from an equivalent U.S. point.

IATA, welcoming the U.S. decision not to dispute the higher fares at least for the time being, expressed worry about the "two-fare structure" created by Canada's position, and the possibility that some traffic would be diverted through Canada from the U.S.

An emergency policy meeting of IATA, the 94-member organization of the free world's air lines, has been called for Thursday in Bermuda to discuss the fares.

HAPPY ABOUT IT

The British aviation ministry said it is happy the U.S. is allowing its airlines to charge the IATA - approved rate and it looked forward to discussions about the fares and "the future relationships between governments and IATA."

IATA can set suggested fares —and the vote has to be unanimous on them—but in most countries, governments also have power to regulate fares. In 18 years, about 97 per cent of the IATA-recommended fares have been accepted unmodified.

Canada's ATB said it is against the higher fares because Canadian airlines are making money already on transatlantic flights, and 80 per cent of their business comes from Canadians themselves. To set a higher fare would be penalizing Canadians and subsidizing less profitable European lines.

Transport Minister George McIlraith said that because of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar a year ago, Canadians have actually been paying an eight-per-cent bonus on overseas air fares. This happens because international air fares are set in terms of U.S. dollars.

For this reason, Canada's fare structure was not really lower than the new rate charged under the IATA accord.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Influential senators, angered by the United States backdown on a fare increase on transatlantic air routes, called government officials today for a public airing of the international dispute.

In advance of an afternoon hearing of the Senate commerce committee, its chairman, Washington State Democrat Warren C. Magnuson, protested that the U.S had capitulated without a fight.

He estimated a five-per-cent increase in roundtrip economy class fares will cost Americans travelling to Europe about $15,000,000 a year.

Contributory

at low interest rates for municipal works projects.

6. A national development fund to provide capital for industrial expansion.

7. An economic advisory council made up of labor, management and government to study the methods used in Western Europe to control unemployment.

8. Restoration of the $8,500,000 cut made in Colombo Plan aid as part of the previous government's austerity drive.

9. A federal-provincial conference to work out a program of fisheries development.

10. A special study of railway branch - line abandonments to form the basis for a new national policy on abandonments.

WANTS PENSION PLAN

In a campaign speech March 15 at Barrie, Ont., Mr. Pearson called the contributory pension plan a top-priority item for a Liberal government.

Mr. Pearson indicated that other social welfare measures would have to take second place to the task of stimulating the economy to create jobs and new national income.

One thing which was not made clear, however, was the status of a Liberal pledge to extend family allowance payments for students past age 16.

The Liberal stand on a scholarship fund to help able students reach university was laid down clearly by Mr. Pearson in a speech at Brandon, Man., when he proposed 10,000 scholarships a year, valued at $1,000 each, for needy students.

A strong reference to defence policy, particularly the Liberal proposal to accept nuclear warheads, is almost certain to appear in the throne speech, it probably will be tied to Mr. Pearson's plan to set up a defence policy committee in the Commons.

The prime minister also made repeated references to a system of national farm marketing boards where farmers want them. There would be prompt action to obtain provincial co-operation in this regard.

Twin Sisters Make Success Of Business

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Identical twin sisters are celebrating the 10th anniversary this spring of a highly successful collaboration in the shoe business.

Susanne Kriegel and Laure Verdures own and run the two Durer shoe shops in Paris.

Among their clients, they count the Countess of Paris, the Empress Farah of Iran, Brigitte Bardot, and innumerable smartly dressed Parisiennes.

They are so alike that neither these nor any others of their customers, nor any of their staff, can tell them apart. Even their own families have difficulty in distinguishing them if they do not want to be recognized.

In 1953, these two young married society women knew a great deal about art, but absolutely nothing about designing, manufacturing, and selling women's shoes.

In just 10 years, they have emerged as leaders in the field of high-priced, handmade footwear, with their only competitor in Paris the range of Christian Dior ready-to-wear shoes.

STUDIED ART

The twins come from a wealthy and cultured family, with extensive interests in Algeria. They grew up in a world of art. Both studied at the Beaux Arts School in Paris.

In 1953, after political developments in North Africa led the family to sell its interests in Oran, the two girls decided to open a business together in Paris.

They found premises on the Champs Elysees and, with no commercial experience whatsoever, drew lots to decide whether they should open a dress shop, a fur salon, or a shoe store. The choice fell on the shoe business.

As art students, the Pouget sisters greatly admired the work of Albert Durer, the 16th century painter and engraver. So they took Durer as their trade name.

In six months after the Champs Elysees store was opened, the business has proved

Weddings

DEMILLE — PRIOR

PICTON — Chrysanthemums and spring flowers enhanced the beautiful interior of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene for the marriage of Lynda Jane Prior and Larry Talbert Demille, on Saturday, May 11, 1963. Canon R. B. Wright officiated at the four o'clock ceremony which united in marriage the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Prior, Picton and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Talbert Demille, Bloomfield.

Traditional wedding music was played by the organist, G. A. Jenkin, including "I Love You Truly," during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a cocktail-length dress of embroidered organza over taffeta with fitted bodice, bouffant skirt and three - quarter - length sleeves. Her only jewellery was an heirloom locket which had been worn by her great grandmother. Her shoulder-length veil was held by an organza pillbox with tulle veil, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and ivy.

Mrs. O. Gilchrist, of North Bay, as attendant, was gowned in a pink taffeta sheath with organza and lace overdress, the full bell skirt being caught with a large bow at the back. Her cap of white flowers was caught with white veiling and she carried a cascade of shasta daisies and ivy.

The groomsman was Mr. Albert D. Prior, while the ushers were: Barry Turpin and Douglas Demille, of Bloomfield.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother chose a blue bouclé sheath with white accessories, while the bridegroom's mother wore a navy suit dress with white accessories. Their corsages were pink carnations.

Spring flowers brightened the home and the bride's table, covered by a white linen cloth, was centred by the wedding cake flanked by arrangements of shasta mums. Miss Cheryl Gilchrist served.

For a trip to Ottawa and points in Eastern Ontario, the bride wore a dove-grey ensemble with navy accessories, raspberry top coat and corsage of white carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Demille will reside in Oshawa.

Vice-Regal State Dinner Not to Be Held This Year

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP)—For the second time in a row, the vice-regal state dinner and reception that usually precedes the opening of a new Parliament will not be held this year.

The gala affair was not held before the 28th Parliament opened last September because of renovations to Rideau Hall, official residence of the Governor-General.

This year, it has been postponed until the opening of the fall session of Parliament because Governor-General Vanier is still recovering from a mild heart attack.

The two main social functions connected with the 28th Parliament's opening Thursday will be receptions tendered by the Speakers of the Senate and House of Commons after the opening ceremonies.

Alan Macnaughton, government nominee for Commons speaker, is expected to receive about 1,000 guests including members of the diplomatic corps, the Senate, the Commons and their wives.

About the same number are expected to meet Senate Speaker Maurice Bourget in his chambers. The rooms will be decorated with red roses, Easter lilies and cascades of white hyacinths in crystal containers.

CHOOSES GOWN

Mrs. Lester B. Pearson, wife of the prime minister, has chosen for the receptions a white satin gown embroidered with red carnations designed by Bonnaky of Montreal. With it she will wear a white satin stole lined with red.

Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the opposition leader, plans to wear an emerald green satin sheath with pearl jewelry.

Mrs. Robert Thompson, wife of the Social Credit leader, was expected from her home in Red Deer, Alta. It was not known if the wife of the party's deputy leader, Mrs. Real Caouette of Rouyn, Que., would be here.

The wife of the New Democratic Party leader, Mrs. T. C. Douglas, will return here Thursday but too late to attend the opening.

U.C.W. Meeting

PLAINFIELD U.C.W.

The Plainfield U.C.W. met at the home of Mrs. Allen Gibson last Wednesday evening with the president, Mrs. Violet Elliott, presiding.

The worship service was in charge of Mrs. Mursery Gibson using the theme, "Our God".

Mrs. Harold Skelly read the Scripture Eph. 4.

It was decided to change the meeting night to the second Thursday.

The treasurer reported $362.39 on hand. An invitation was read from the Roslin group to attend a "Blossom Tea" in May.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Fred Sills, who introduced Chapter IV of the "Word and the Way" for discussion. Three groups were to explore the meaning of 'love' in its three aspects according to the Greek meanings: first, philia, which means friendship; second, 'eros' which means physical desire and aspiration; third, 'agape' which means the love of compassion, the outgoing love of God for man and a Christian's love in imitation of God's love.

To support these ideas readings were given by Mrs. Frank Hodgen, Mrs. Jack Salmon, and Mrs. Rinaldo Emerson. The Rev. J. Nicholls closed the meeting with prayer.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Jack Salmon, Mrs. Arthur Wright and Mrs. Fred Sills, served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

AOTS Men's Club Holds Box Social

WELLINGTON — Recently the A.O.T.S. Club met in the Centennial parlor of the United Church with their ladies as guests.

President Keith Hubbard called the meeting to order and welcomed the ladies. A singsong of favorite tunes and hymns, conducted by Kenneth Lane, assisted at the piano by Mrs. Bryan Crook, began the fellowship of the evening.

President Keith stressed the theme "Mother's Day" and led the devotions of the evening. He also reported on the May 3rd weekend at the Ontario round-up of A.O.T.S. clubs held at Muskoka Sands Inn, Gravenhurst. Donald Pettingall, Arnold Foster and Ken Lane gave thoughts of this inspiring conference. An interclub visit to Hallowray Street United Church A.O.T.S. Belleville and the club "Car Wash" project for June were announced.

President Keith and secretary Ken, were appointed as club delegates to attend the National A.O.T.S. conference to be held in Halifax in August.

The program for the evening led by Ken Lane, brought out the many hidden talents of the club members and guests. Don Pettingell and Arnold Foster presented a skit, assisted by several of the group. A musical selection was given by the quartet, "The Four Lads". The TV game of "Password" was enjoyed by all and was followed by president Keith as auctioneer who sold the many decorated box lunches that the ladies had bought.

BIRTHS BOOMING

LONDON (Reuters) — A surprise boom in babies has forced a stepping up of the program for building maternity hospitals. The Registrar General's office says that by the year 2002 there will be 17,000,000 more persons in England and Wales than today—increasing the population to 63,774,000 — and 2,000,000 babies born every year.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

TIMELY HOSTESS HINTS

Everyone wants to play hostess.

It takes a great deal of planning and tact to be a good one. Now that the spring party season is in full pedal, you'll have ample opportunity to try your hand — if you're new at the game — or refresh old techniques if you're a veteran on the party circuit.

Here are some reminders that might be timely:

Plan early. Give guests plenty of warning so you'll have a complete guest list made up well in advance. Then decide what you'll serve. If it's a buffet with cocktails, or a sit-down supper, try to prepare dishes that may be made — or at least standard — the day before. Buffet food should be given special consideration and should be chosen for its ability to stand a long time over a warmer without sacrificing any flavor.

Help, such as a bartender or a maid, should be hired early and instructed to come early so they can get the lay of the land and know where everything is.

Make sure you have plenty of large ashtrays and a full supply of cocktail napkins. Even if you don't smoke and serve pretzels with cocktails, napkins should be offered anyway.

Put final touches on the party well before the first guests are expected. It's very thoughtless of a hostess to dawdle over arrangements, and then her make-up and let guests arrive before she does.

GREET GUESTS AT DOOR

The hostess should greet guests at the door when they arrive. If you're busy introducing people, either excuse yourself and greet the new arrivals or let your husband stand guard in the meantime as do the honors. Be sure you greet them, though, as soon as you're free.

At a small party, you should make sure that new arrivals meet everyone. At a large party, it's only necessary to introduce guests into one group and let them take it from there.

During the party, it's up to the hostess to see that glasses are filled and guests are presented with a selection of before-dinner snacks. If others is declined, don't try to force a guest to have some out of a mistaken sense of hospitality.

When dinner is ready, you lead the guests into the dining room and indicate where each should sit. At a buffet, guests are directed to the serving table and may sit wherever they choose. You signify a sit-down dinner is over by folding your napkin to the left of your plate, rising and leading guests into the living room for coffee, if it hasn't already been served at the table.

The hostess doesn't accompany her guests outside, but the host should see to it that an unsafe, but it's not necessary.

Mother's Helper

DIAPER PINS will stay sharp and slippery smooth if you stick them into a cake of soap at change time. Best for this is a self-sniffed soap with the wrapper left on. Push the pins deep into the bar, and be sure the whole thing is well out of Baby's reach.

The Experts Say

Bookselling Said Field For Both Men, Women

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — "Bookselling is a field in which women can compete as successfully as men—a field where, more than in any other, men and women are treated as equals."

This is the opinion of Mary Scorer, a Winnipeg bookseller for the last three years.

"A man hasn't any more of an advantage than a woman in this field," Miss Scorer said in an interview during the Canadian Booksellers' Association convention here. "And publishers recognize this when you apply for credit."

A love of books and an interest in people are just as important to success as a shrewd business mind, says Miss Scorer, to whom books are "things I love best" rather than merchandise.

Experience in some aspect of the book business — preferably retail selling and publishing — is a must before going into the business. She learned the mechanics of bookselling while working as a stenographer for a British bookseller for three years and then as a clerk in the book section of a department store.

CHOICE IS VAST

The most difficult thing to learn is how to select books for the shop, she says, noting that there are more than 200,000 titles for the English-speaking world to choose from.

Knowing your locality and the interests of the people living in the area makes selection of books much easier.

In her shop, not far from the downtown Winnipeg shopping area, she has a well-stocked table of Canadian literature which, she says, is "the most successful" in the shop.

"People in this country are willing to support a Canadian author and take a chance on a book just because it is Canadian, while they wouldn't take the same chance with an American or British author."

Recommending books is only a small part of her work—most people like to choose for themselves—but she must always be prepared to tell a customer something about a book.

WATCHES REVIEWS

Histories and biographies can usually be sold without the seller having read them, but she must read as many reviews as possible of children's books and most read the books themselves when she can't get the necessary information from reviews.

As for tastes, she finds men tend to read more non-fiction than women.

"Men rarely read books that appeal to women, such as those by Francis Parkinson Keyes, March Cost or Elizabeth Seaford. But many adventure stories for men such as those by David Walker and Ian Fleming are sold to women."

There is a tendency today to fill children's books with colorful pictures and little thoughtful text, Miss Scorer says. "This is a bad state of affairs, especially because such books are expensive."

She suggests mothers are making a mistake if, when buying a book for their child, they shy away from it because they see a few big words. They may be underestimating the child's ability to comprehend and enjoy books that challenge his intelligence.

Miss Scorer notes that science fiction is becoming increasingly popular for children but that fairy tales, myths and legends are still favorites—"There will always be room for these in the children's section."

French Onion Soup

by Mary Moore

Use shoe polish to clean white tapes on Venetian blinds.

Last week when I gave you a gourmet recipe called Glenhyrst Fish Supreme I promised to give you more Glenhyrst recipes later on.

The one I have for you today is a simplified recipe for French Onion Soup I was served at the Hotel de Grand du Louvre. The secret of this may be that a man made it. Men have a way of eliminating all the fuss and getting to the main business.

I will give the mystery man's method and follow it with my method.

Maybe you will switch loyalties!

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Grilled Baby Beef Liver and Bacon; Hashed Brown Potatoes; Creamed Celery; Waldorf Salad; Lemon Snow with Spicy Custard Sauce; Coffee.

Put soup and water in saucepan to heat. Fry bacon gently until crisp, remove and reserve. Sauté onions in bacon fat until just clear, with salt and pepper. Add onions to soup with crumbled bacon and simmer 30 to 45 minutes. Add sherry. Serve with croutons and grated Parmesan cheese. Croutons: Butter bread slices, then cut into ½ or ¾" cubes. Toast in 350 deg. Fahr. oven, stirring occasionally until dry and lightly browned.

FRENCH ONION SOUP (repeated from January 7, 63):

3 Spanish onions, 3 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 drop tabasco sauce, 8 cups water, 10 beef bouillon cubes salt and pepper, ½ cup (or more) grated Parmesan cheese toasted French bread.

Slice the onions thinly, and over them pour 1 quart boiling water and let stand 5 minutes. Drain well. Melt the butter in the soup pot and gently saute the blanched onions in it until they have just absorbed it. Boil 2 cups of the required water and pour it over the bouillon cubes and stir to dissolve them. Add to the onions and add the remaining 6 cups of water, Worcestershire sauce, tabasco sauce and some salt and pepper. Simmer covered for 1 hour. Toast slices of French bread, sprinkle each generously with Parmesan. Pass under hot broiler to melt cheese. Taste soup to see if it needs more salt and pepper. Pour into bowls, top each with toast and serve. Pass more Parmesan cheese at table. This is supposed to serve 10, but 't would not be enough for 10 Frenchmen.

Bay of Quinte Lists Delegates To Convention

2ND OF SIDNEY — Mrs. Harold Dickens was hostess to the Bay of Quinte Institute on the evening of May 8th when the regular meeting took place.

The new president, Mrs. Cecil Jeffery opened the meeting.

During the business session, it was decided to send for four tickets (the allotment for the branch) to attend the banquet put on at Peterborough on June 13th in honor of Mrs. Van Beecraft, the president of the Associated Country Women of the World. The Institute was reminded that the Tweedsmuir History should be sent to Mrs. Roy Bush at once. It was thought it would be better to wait 'til fall, now to get somebody for Hardey's School, seeing it is so near to closing time of the school for the summer.

Those from the Bay of Quinte Institute that will be taking part in the 62nd district annual convention on May 30th at Marsh Hill United Church are: Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson, Mrs. Jerome Palmer, Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Frank White, Mrs. Donald Sandercock, Mrs. Ross Stickle, Mrs. Cecil Jeffery and Mrs. Alva Meyers.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. John Howe, convener of home economics and health, who put on a fine demonstration of favors for a child's party, one being a horse letter ed to a hitching block. This was made of a rolled peanut butter sandwich, cut in two parts one large for the body and smaller for the head with the help of toothpicks. The hitching block was an oblong piece of cake, chocolate iced, with a life saver fast in it, to which the horse was tied. Another was a rose made of a white marshmallow rolled out in colored sugar.

Mrs. G. Bilham won the prize for an interesting contest put on by Mrs. Dickens.

Thanks were given to Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Dickens for being such good sports to be convener and hostess on such short notice.

Lunch and a social half hour were enjoyed.

Proper to Marry in Church?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — I am a widow who will be remarried soon. My future husband is a divorced man (the innocent party). Would it be proper to be married in the church (United) or should it be in the minister's study?

I had planned for a quiet reception for immediate relatives and close friends. Do they have a toast to the bride at a second marriage. If so, who should propose this? —FORTYISH.

DEAR FORTYISH — Weddings involving the innocent party to a divorce are often solemnized in the church sanctuary in the United Church. But this is the minister's decision.

Toasting the bride means wishing her well — which your friends doubtless do. This toast is just as much a part of a second marriage as it is of a first. Proposer may be the clergyman, the best man or an old family friend.

DEAR DORIS — Every summer I have trouble getting a tan. I look pale and feel awful because my arms and legs are so white. I hate to wear shorts even though my legs are a nice shape.

I have tried different solutions but they don't seem to help. If you can name any cure, please do. — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED — Can you believe it? Some easy tanners would envy you your fair skin and shapely limbs! But there are tanning lotions and leg paints to help along that look of summer sun. See the saleslady at your favorite cosmetic counter.

DEAR DORIS — I am a 13-year-old girl who has fallen in love with a boy who's a few years older than me (19). He doesn't even know I exist, except for the night we met when he kept asking me for dances until I finally accepted. Now he acts as if I'm not even around.

It's not just puppy love, because I love him too much for that. How do I get this boy to like me, despite the difference in our ages? — LOVESICK.

MY DEAR LITTLE LOVESICK PUPPY — He found you, then he forgot you. Between these two events he discovered that he was six years older than you are. Believe me, your very best plan is to forget him.

(Worried about what's proper? Ask Doris, who has been counselling people with problems like yours for years. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Ann Landers

Two Points of View On Immigration Policy

DEAR ANN LANDERS—When I saw in the paper that you went to Russia a couple of years ago I figured you were a Commie. Now, after reading your answer to "Proud American," I am sure of it.

Just because the man wrote and said he was sick and tired of seeing foreigners come over here and get rich while red-blooded Americans can't even find jobs you called him an "ignorant malcontent."—ANN LANDERS

The foreigners are the ignorant malcontents. That's why they come to America. They aren't satisfied over there so they come here to get rich. These foreign pigs elbow their way in by the millions. And what do they do when they get here? They criticize our government, our manners, our schools and our children. No matter where they came from it was always better "over there."

The foreigners worm their way into factories and businesses, starting at the bottom, pretending to be grateful and humble, and before you know it they are in the top jobs and the true Americans are out on the street.

I'm in favor of shipping five million foreigners right back to where they came from and giving their jobs to deserving unemployed Americans.—FLAG WAVER AND PROUD OF IT.

DEAR FLAG WAVER—Thank you for your point of view. Here is another letter—on the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I was deeply interested in your splendid reply to "Proud American" who complained because foreigners were coming over here taking jobs which should be reserved for "true Americans."

Over the past 10 years more than 100,000 immigrants entered this country, bringing with them skills declared to be in critically short supply in the United States. One of our most serious shortages, according to the U.S. Department of Labor, is in the field of engineering. Of the 100,000 especially skilled immigrants who entered this country in the past decade 31,000 were engineers. This represents 80 per cent of the number of engineers graduated from United States schools during 1961.

Immigrants are making essential and laudable contributions to our country. They are not displacing "true Americans" they are creating jobs for Americans by contributing to this country's economy.—R. N. W. OF THE U.S. COMMITTEE FOR REFUGEES.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—My husband is a good father and excellent provider—of material things, that is. He is active in church work and civic affairs, reads a lot and considers himself an authority on many subjects.

This man runs ten feet ahead of me when we walk to church together and shouts, "Look out for the cars or you'll be run over." He has never opened a car door for me, lit my cigarette helped me with my coat or allowed me to use the cream or sugar first. Often he is the only male in the room who does not stand when a lady enters.

I've been correcting him about these things for almost 20 years which of course makes me a nag and a shrew. Am I wrong to feel that a man owes it to his wife to behave in a fairly civilized manner? What can I do to make him see it my way?—RATHER STAY HOME.

DEAR RATHER—If you've been unable to make a dent in 20 years you may as well save your breath to cool your soup. At first his poor manners may have been traceable to ignorance but now they are punitive.

People who behave badly to punish others only make themselves look ugly.

CONFIDENTIAL TO FEET OF CLAY—You have a head to match, Mister, if you believe that yarn. No man is going to buy a girl a car and pay her rent because she "reminds him of his sister."

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experience of thousands of teenagers if you write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope.

Celestial Ride

Cooper's Atlas started him off in the same flawless manner that other Atlases did last year in boosting astronauts John Glenn, Scott Carpenter and Schirra into orbit.

During five minutes, five seconds of powered flight, the Atlas shoved Faith 7 into an almost perfect orbit ranging from 100 to 164 miles above the earth. Spacecraft speed at orbital insertion was 17,544 miles an hour—nearly 300 miles a minute.

While Cooper blasted upward, he reported in crisp, clear tones the condition of the capsule and himself. Gravity forces up to eight times normal pressed him against his couch.

Once in orbit, the gravity pressures were suddenly gone and Cooper was in the Earth orbiting world of weightlessness —in which he was to remain until re-entering the atmosphere at flight's end.

SEEK MORE INFO

Because of Russian reluctance to release detailed information on their long flights, Cooper's mission was expected to add greatly to the storehouse of knowledge U.S. scientists are collecting on the effect of prolonged space trips on a human being.

Medical monitors and doctors stationed at ground stations carefully watched his condition for any signs of strain which might lead to termination of the flight.

A tape recording played at the press site at Cape Canaveral several minutes after launching showed the exchange of conversation between Schirra and Cooper when the Atlas reached Faith 7:

Schirra—"You're smack dab in the middle of the go block."

Cooper—"Boy, oh boy!"

Schirra—"Have a good ride, boy."

Cooper—"thank you, buddy."

MILLIONS SAW BLASTOFF

Cooper's launching was combined with the same openness that marked the first previous U.S manned flights. Thousands viewed the launching from nearby beaches and millions watched on television.

The city viewers included Cooper's wife, Trudy, and two teen-age daughters, Camala, 14, and Janis, 13, at their Houston, Tex., home, and Mrs. Hattie Cooper, the astronaut's mother, and his grandmother at the latter's home in Tecumseh, Okla.

This is in contrast with the secrecy which has cloaked all four Soviet man-in-space shots until after the cosmonauts were airborne.

After Cooper turned his capsule around, it was in the proper orbital attitude, inclined at a 34-degree angle with the earth. This is the proper position for firing the three reverse rockets which would bring the capsule out of orbit in case of emergency.

In swift succession, Cooper was in contact with the tracking stations at Canary Islands, Kano, Nigeria and Zanzibar. Thirty minutes after launching, Mercury Control reported that all systems were functioning perfectly and "we have a hale, healthy and working pilot."

Cooper told the Zanzibar station with 30 frames a second for tion he was working to adjust the cooling system in his cabin and suit.

Mercury Control said Cooper would make a complete circle of the earth every 88.7 minutes.

SUN BLAZED BRIGHTLY

Cooper had climbed into Faith 7 just as a bright red sun blazed across Cape Canaveral.

The 36-year-old astronaut was smiling despite Tuesday's postponement which saw the countdown move to within 10 minutes of launch, only to be frustrated by a faulty radar data analyzing device at the tracking station on Bermuda.

He climbed into Faith 7 at 6:32 a.m.

Cooper, who went to bed Tuesday at 8:45 p.m. was awakened by Dr. Howard Minners at 2:30 a.m. Breakfast was served at 4:22 to Cooper, Astronauts Schirra and Donald (Deke) Slayton, and Walter C. Williams, Project Mercury operations director.

The astronaut tugged on his space suit at 5:24 a.m. following a physical examination by Dr. Minners. He has lost a pound from Tuesday.

APPEARS ON TV

Cooper was barely off the ground when the first television pictures of an American astronaut in space were relayed to a ground station. A TV camera mounted above the instrument panel beamed the pictures to Cooper, from the moment he lifted off until he was inserted into orbit, to a Cape Canaveral monitor.

The station reported reception was good, although the pictures were jerky because they were sent at a slow rate of one frame every two seconds, compared commercial television.

Cape Canaveral had equipment to convert the pictures to normal scan speed and some were to be fed into commercial TV networks.

CABIN TEMPERATURE 100

Fifty minutes after liftoff Cooper established good voice contact with the tracking post at Muchea, Australia. Minutes later he made contact with the Woomera, Australia, station and reported his cabin temperature was 100 degrees and his suit 82 degrees, both well within limits set for the flight. He said his oxygen, fuel and electrical supplies were okay and that he had checked out all spacecraft controls and found them operating satisfactorily.

Later Mercury Control said it erred in reporting a 82-degree suit temperature. It said the actual reading was 32 degrees and that considerable discussion was taking place among flight controllers about the temperature.

The announcement said that one ground station reading placed cabin temperature at 118 degrees, but flight officials believed this in error. It said Cooper reported that his capsule temperature was steady at 100 degrees and he felt very comfortable.

The control centre said that as Cooper passed over the Pacific everything looked good. A little later as he travelled over the Canton Island station, he was given the "go" sign to try for at least seven orbits.

As Cooper completed orbit No. 1, he talked with astronauts Alan Shepard, the first American into space, and Schirra. Shepard told the pilot: "It was a beautiful shot."

Shepard told Cooper to turn on his television camera and as the jerky films were relayed to a monitor at the Cape, Shepard said: "You look pretty casual up there."

"Boy, I am," Cooper replied.

Schirra shouted "have a good ball" as Faith 7 slipped out of radio range and on into the second orbit.

TURNS OFF CONTROLS

As he whirled into his second orbit, Cooper shut off all controls and electrical power and started drifting flight, allowing the craft to move freely on its yaw, pitch and roll axes.

In this condition the vehicle rotates slowly, making about one revolution every 30 minutes if control is not re-established by the pilot. The capsule will not move far off course because it is flying an orbital path determined by the laws of nature.

SEES FAMILIAR SIGHTS

As he swung into orbit No. 2, Cooper said he had seen many of the same sights witnessed by previous American astronauts, including the sing-low layer on the horizon. As he passed over the Pacific near the end of orbit No. 1, he saw the "fireflies" first seen by John Glenn on his pioneer U.S. orbital flight last year.

The fireflies are created by flakes of frost falling off the capsule and being illuminated by the rays of the rising sun.

Cooper described the sunrise as he came over the Pacific as tremendous.

As on all previous American manned orbital flights, Perth, Australia, turned on all its lights as a greeting. Cooper said he saw the lights clearly from his vantage point about 160 miles in space.

Seating Plan for New House Will Be Tidier and More Interesting in Some Spots

OTTAWA (CP)—The seating plan for the new House of Commons is tidier—and interesting in spots.

Former defence minister Douglas Harkness, who resigned Feb. 3, to protest the Diefenbaker government's delay on the nuclear issue, remains on the Progressive Conservative party front bench.

He will be the first MP seated on the left of Mr. Speaker—with three veteran colleagues between him and the next former cabinet minister.

He will be to the right of the speaker—at the far end of the chamber.

HERRIDGE IS BACK

H. W. (Bert) Herridge, old Socialist timer, is back on the front bench of the New Democrats, temporarily at least. He will sit behind T. C. Douglas until the 17-mark caucus names a replacement for Deputy Leader Harold Lewis, who's onto lawyer defeated in the general election.

Mr. Herridge used to sit in the front row beside the former CCF leader, Hazen Argue, in the 1958-62 parliament. He took over Mr. Argue's spot when the Saskatchewan farmer defected to the Liberals last year.

Each side of the Commons chamber has 138 seats arranged in five rows, a total of 276. There are 265 members, leaving 11 desks vacant for possible expansion. Traditionally the governing party sits to the right of the speaker, facing opposition forces arrayed to the left.

On the opposition side the 95 Conservatives led by John Diefenbaker are seated closest to the speaker's chair. Next to them are the 26 Social Credit led by Robert Thompson. The NDP, who in the last Parliament shared the government side with the Conservatives, are next at the far end of the chamber.

Except for Dr. Marcoux on their far flank, the 128 Liberals —excluding speaker - designate Allan Macnaughton — are alone on the government side of the house. It has been years since no group of opposition members helped fill out the government side, or that an overflow "rump" of government members did not occupy opposition-side seats.

On the right after Mr. Chevrier are State Secretary J. W. Pickersgill, Finance Minister Walter Gordon, Postmaster-General Azellus Denis, Mines Minister William M. Benidickson, Maurice Lamontagne, president of the privy council, and Associate Defence Minister Lucien Cardin.

ARE WITH BALCER

To the right of Mr. Balcer are these former ministers: J. Waldo Monteith (health), Walter Dinsdale (northern affairs), Hugh John Flemming (revenue), Paul Martineau (mines) and Theogene Ricard (without portfolio).

Between Mr. Ricard and Mr. Harkness are Marvin Howe, Quebec lawyer, and Alvin Hamilton, Saskatchewan farmer who ARE WITH BALCER.

Mr. Thompson, Mr. Caouette, A. B. Patterson, Fraser Valley, and Gilles Gregoire, Lapointe, are the four Social Credit front men. Dr. Marcoux, whose place is pretty wide, is likely to be filled by Bert Leboe, Cariboo, who has been seated beside Mr. Caouette in the last house. Mr. Gregoir takes his place.

Disabled Persons In Canada Now 1,245,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Advisory Council on the Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons was told Tuesday that about 1,245,000 Canadians are classified as disabled.

James L. McIlwain, chairman of the council, said that of this number more than 300,000 are of working age—between 16 and 65—and many of them could be rehabilitated to a useful life. He said many more might have been able to lead more satisfying lives if they could have received rehabilitation services early enough.

Labor Minister Allan J. MacEachen said enabling Canada's disabled to become gainfully employed through vocational rehabilitation is good not only in terms of humanitarian values but also from an economic point of view.

Earl Campbell, the labor department's national co-ordinator of civilian rehabilitation, said that since the signing of the agreements staff employed in the provinces had increased to 140 from 70. However, he said this number is not nearly enough to ensure that all handicapped persons will be reached.

Two Banks Own 49 PC of a Trust Company

TORONTO (CP)—The assistant general manager of the Royal Bank of Canada said Tuesday it is quite common that two other Canadian banks each own 49 per cent of a trust company.

J. H. Coleman of the Royal Bank told a panel discussion at the annual credit congress here that the Bank of Nova Scotia is believed to own 49 per cent of the stock of Chartered Trust Co. and the Toronto-Dominion Bank holds a similar amount of stock in Canada Permanent Toronto General Trust Co.

Mr. Coleman had noted that during the last 15 years, Canadian chartered banks — with the possible exception of two banks—have begun to make instalment loans whose effective rates vary from nine per cent to as much as 13 per cent.

"Strictly speaking, it may be said we are breaking the Bank Act," he said. "We are not allowed to charge more than six per cent, but we are doing that today."

Dean of Women Says Students Are Just as Sexy

WINNIPEG (CP)—The dean of women at the University of Manitoba says her girls apparently are not as sex-conscious as those at the University of British Columbia.

But Audrey Huntington made it clear in a Tuesday interview that the Winnipeg co-eds were just sexy.

She commented on a claim by Prof. Helen MacRae, UBC's dean of women, that not all the foremost on the minds of female students there, Prof. MacRae was speaking at Kingston.

"I'm not naive enough to believe that many of our girls don't have sex on the mind, but it isn't a problem we're continually meeting," Miss Huntington said.

"The big difference between our university and UBC is that most of our girls live at home and a large percentage of the UBC female population lives on the campus.

"I'm not saying our girls are not as sexy but they just don't have the same opportunities, though living at home."

EDMONTON (CP)—Sex is not the foremost thought in the minds of girl students at the University of Alberta, two faculty members said Tuesday.

"It is evident that Alberta girls are seriously interested in their studies," said Dr. Johns.

"However, this (sex) aspect of life is probably part of their concern, but it is in all people of that age. It is not just confined to university students nor just to girls."

Findings Reveal Indians May Have Had Village and Fort at Bunker's Hill

BY HARRY MULHALL

TRENTON (Staff) — As students, Arthur Marchese and Ronnie Creelman work in the sixth grade. In off-school hours the two 12-year-olds may have made a first-grade discovery to busy some of the country's leading anthropology scholars.

At least that's the exciting possibility raised by their discoveries of what conceivably could be ancient Indian artifacts almost on their doorstep in this town's West Side district.

In the past three months they have unearthed almost on the surface of Bunker's Hill a minor cache of small stones resembling arrow and spear heads and domestic scraping implements.

They made their first discovery near a hydro sub-station close by their Mormora Street homes. Shortly afterward, they turned their attention to the grassy area along the Trent River — with fruitful results.

Since then, the consistency of their finds has aroused curiousity among friends and parents' enthusiasm. It is the possible significance to Canadian history.

Among the latter is Trenton's town assessor, J. Allan Smith.

Mr. Smith thinks if the youngsters' finds might prove the" genuine articles (both hunting and household), they could be the clue to a missing historical link.

"There was a very large Indian village in this area somewhere — but no one has ever been able to locate its exact whereabouts," he says.

He points to fact the area is already fairly rich in Indian lore, even before Champlain came down the Bay of Quinte.

NATURAL FORTIFICATION

These include the portage route known once as The Carrying Place, in the northwest corner of the present Prince Edward County; the old Iroquois trail beside the Trent River — it's now Highway 33 — in the Frankford area.

"Most people were sure the site of the village was toward Picton. But if this find is ever borne out it could be one of the most important archaeological discoveries."

The boys themselves also have a theory. Bunker's Hill is a fairly-gentle gradient, but it countryside down to the Trent; dominates the surrounding ita position superb as a lookout point; it would have a natural tribal fortification.

However, it also raises several questions, the most obvious connected with a colorfully recent history. The land was part of the property once occupied by a huge chemical plant destroyed during World War I by a series of explosions after it caught fire. Today, the relics of that once - flourishing industrial settlement still are firmly rooted in Bunker's Hill. Concrete piers and pillars remain firmly imbedded in its soil.

Too, the Trent - Canal was once dug past the base of the slope. Why, during its excavation and levelling, the federal company was sinking its complex of foundations and supports, wasn't evidence of the Indian community bared?

Mr. Smith thinks the site is worth the attention of university archaeologists. The youngsters feel the same way.

"We are waiting for a special ist to have a look at these finds," says Arthur Marchese.

"Anyway, we will keep on looking for more."

AMATEUR ARCHAEOLOGISTS — Ronnie Creelman and Arthur Marchese ponder the identification of their finds on Bunker's Hill in illustrated history book showing implements of ancient man. On table is part of a cache of what they believe may be Indian artifacts found by them in the past three months in Trenton.

Flying Since Childhood, Astronaut Cooper Hopes To Eventually Go to Moon

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—As a boy, Gordon Cooper read the comic strip Buck Rogers and wondered whether man would fly into space before the 25th century.

Today he's amazed at the swiftness of events which have sent astronauts into space in his lifetime—and his participation as one of the pioneers of this great effort.

If anyone seemed destined for space flight, it was Cooper. He has been flying as long as he can remember.

His father, an air force colonel, was a close friend of such aviation greats as Wiley Post and Amelia Earhart and Gordon used to listen to their flying conversations. The elder Cooper took the boy aloft almost before he could walk.

"Gordo"—as his fellow astronauts call Cooper—is the first handling the controls of a plane when he was six and flying his first solo at 16.

LOVED PLANES

Cooper's mother says her son always was interested in airplanes.

"Gordon made a lot of model planes," she remarked recently at her Carbondale, Colo., home. "Later, when he was in senior high school, he had a good friend who ran an airport. Gordon worked there to pay for flying instruction. He soloed there while his father was serving with the air force in the Far East."

The senior Cooper died of cancer in 1956.

Had Mrs. Cooper ever worried about Gordon's early-day flying?

"I worried about it, yes," she replied. "But I once asked that question of Gordon's father and had three boys who were flying. She said 'Don't you know that God's up there the same as on the ground?' and she went on knitting. I have always tried to remember that."

Cooper, a Methodist, feels much the same way.

Cooper was born March 6, 1927, in Shawnee, Okla. After graduation from high school in 1945, he entered the Marine Corps and spent some time at the Naval Academy Preparatory School. After his discharge in 1946 he attended the University of Hawaii for three years.

WIFE A PILOT

At the university, he met and married the former Trudy Olson of Seattle, Wash. Under Cooper's instruction, Trudy soon had a pilot's license and the couple explored the Hawaiian Islands in a Piper Cub. They took their first baby for a plane ride soon after she was born.

The Coopers now have two daughters, Camala, 14, and Janita, 13.

While at the University of Hawaii, Cooper received an army commission and then transferred to the air force.

He was assigned to the Air Force experimental flight test school, Edwards Air Base, Calif., in 1956, and helped develop the new experimental fighter aircraft.

Cooper, now a major, has logged more than 2,600 hours flying time, 1,800 in jets.

NARROW ESCAPES

As a test pilot, he has had several close calls. He and fellow astronaut Virgil Grissom had a near-fatal plane accident before their selection in 1959 as space candidates. They were taking off in a T-33 jet trainer when the landing gear collapsed. The plane crashed and burned but both men escaped unharmed.

Trudy was elated when Cooper was selected to make a flight in space. She said she'd keep him in orbit for more than a day.

"I'd go with him if I could," she said.

She also shares his enthusiasm for traveling to travel one day to the moon.

Must Have An Informative, Honest Press Says Publisher

QUEBEC (CP)—One of the basic, urgent necessities of newly emerging-nations is an honest, informative press, Canadian publisher Roy Thomson said Tuesday.

The awaking of social and political consciousness in hundreds of millions of people made it necessary for new nations to progress in the next 10 years as rapidly as western civilization his in 100, he told the closing luncheon of the spring conference of the Institute of Newspaper Controllers and Finance Officers.

"But for that to happen at this breakneck pace, somebody has got to dig in and help," Mr. Thomson said.

"In this great new development nothing, in my opinion, is more necessary than the establishment of an honest, informative and truthful press, allied with television stations, magazines and books, all imbued with these same qualities of integrity."

What the residents of these newly developing nations need to believe would be "decisive in the battle of the cold war."

SOVIET BRAINWASHING

Mr. Thomson, who recently visited Moscow and spent two hours talking with Premier Khrushchev, said he is convinced that the Soviet Union is "slowly but surely turning towards a modified form of capitalism. Or, perhaps they would say, towards a liberalized form of communism.

"Already, the basic concept of communism, whereby every individual is treated alike, is being watered down. Extra rewards now are being given for extra or better service."

Mr. Thomson said he is convinced that communism is only for have-not societies.

"I believe as an affluent society develops, it is inevitable that capitalism will evolve."

Up to now the Soviet Union hasn't had sufficient essential supplies to go round and there were no surpluses.

Under those conditions state planning and state direction of labor were necessary.

But Russia had developed to a point where consumer choice would soon be available.

"Then rival producers will publicize and sell their goods in opposition to each other. Society will bring some form of advertising and competition for buyer goods and the profit motive will develop. I believe they will move closer to our system and this will become very evident in the near future."

WANT ONE ASSESSMENT

TORONTO (CP)—An economic study group that advocates a Canadian tax system based on single land assessment told the royal commission on taxation today that Canadians have reached the breaking point in supporting government. "We now face the immediate decision in Canada of whether the state is created to serve man or man is created to serve the state." The alumni group of the school of economic science is a private, non-profit organization that offers 29-week courses to students in Ontario.

Array of Complex Concepts Involved in GAAT Meeting

GENEVA (CP)—An array of complex concepts is involved in the GATT conference at Geneva May 16-21.

GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade—is itself a puzzler. Merely a multilateral contract by legal definition, it is really a word organization with a growing permanent staff.

With only 24 signatories at its first meeting in 1947, GATT now 64 countries attend its last conference with another 40, many of them newly-independent, taking some part in the sessions. Trade experts gave this A-B-C picture of GATT and related matters:

GATT is a sort of United Nations of trade but so far only one Communist country—Czechoslovakia—is a member. It has long sought tariff reduction on a world basis, rather than regionally, through the "most-favored-nation" device.

EXPECT TO DO SAME

Under this technique, if Canada chopped tariffs on greasegums from Britain, for instance, it would also be expected to do the same for other countries. Some progress was made but negotiations were item-by-item and country-by-country, a tedious process.

GATT now enters its most ambitious phase as a result of the United States Trade Expansion Act of 1962, which gives President Kennedy unprecedented scope for negotiation of tariff cuts on a linear basis.

The Geneva meeting also assumes new importance because it tackles two big problems previously neglected. The first—particularly of interest to Canada—is agricultural protection which either excludes tariff reductions for farm products outright, or makes them an illusion by side measures.

The second is the special situation of developing countries who—through a forthcoming UN meeting—can be expected to raise a political storm if the'r products such as primary products and tropical commodities is left unsolved.

Cannot Open Hospital Due to Lack of Staff

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto has a new $6,000,000 hospital ready to receive 808 patients but can't open its doors for lack of a qualified nursing staff, Metro Chairman William Allen said Tuesday.

"Metro government has been unable to recruit a nursing staff" to open the just-completed municipal Riverdale Hospital for convalescent and chronically ill patients, Mr. Allen told a Metro executive committee meeting.

Metro Welfare Commissioner Robert J. Smith and Personnel director George Noble are in England trying to hire 135 employees, including nursing supervisors, head nurses, general-duty nurses, nursing assistants and orderlies.

Mr. Allen said that even if 135 are found, only 200 of the 808 beds would be available to patients. Metro had been unable to recruit anywhere near the required staff to open even 25 per cent of the hospital.

A nursing staff of 300 is required to operate the hospital at full capacity.

ASSISTANT NAMED

OTTAWA (CP)—Appointment of Marcel Joyal, 38-year-old Ottawa lawyer, as executive assistant to Transport Minister George McIlraith was announced Tuesday. Mr. Joyal has practised law here since 1946 and opened his own firm five years ago. He is a former president of Canadian University Liberal Federation and worked with various ministers of the former Liberal government between 1945 and 1948. He is the son of. Dr. and Mrs. Hector Joyal of Haileybury, Ont.

10 Per Cent More Tourists --If Weather Co-operates

By STUART LAKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Early summer weather in New York, Chicago, Cincinnati and other major U.S. cities within several hundred miles of the Canadian border may have a bearing on efforts to reduce Canada's unfavorable tourist trade balance.

"If these centres get their usual hot, muggy weather while we enjoy our cooler, more pleasant summer, then the reservations will begin to pour in," says Alan Field, director of the Canadian Government Travel Bureau.

Given such conditions, the bureau is figuring on an increase of at least 10 per cent in tourist spending over last year.

Visitors to Canada in 1962 spent a record $560,000,000 but Canadians abroad spent $610,000,000, making it the 12th straight year that Canada has had a deficit.

However, the deficit of $50,000,000 was less than one-third of the 1961 figure of $160,000,000 and the smallest since the $6,000,000 of 1951.

"Canadians are the world's greatest travellers," says Mr. Field. "If more of them would decide to visit other provinces and not other countries we wouldn't have to worry about a deficit."

GET MORE INQUIRIES

The belief that Canada will play host to more visitors this year is based on the number of inquiries reaching the travel bureau's Ottawa office—the result of increased spending on promotion and the drive to attract more European tourists.

About 1,000,000 pieces of mail asking about Canada were received in 1962 and the volume so far this spring indicates this year's flood should be about 25 per cent greater.

"We're handling between 18 and 20 tons of mail some days," says Mr. Field.

What's more, a sub-post office located at the bureau's headquarters makes it possible for the agency to fire back answers the same day.

Biggest attraction is the Trans - Canada Highway, its 4,860 miles from St. John's, Nfld., to Victoria, B.C., nearly completed.

"We're working out a plan whereby tourists can travel the highway in several stages and then receive a windshield marker of some sort to show they have visited all 10 provinces," says Mr. Field.

THIRD LARGEST EARNER

Other lures are the changing of the guard on Parliament Hill in Ottawa, which attracts up to 5,000 people a day during the summer, the Calgary Stampede and Cape Breton's Gaelic Mod.

Campers destined to flow into provincial and national parks in increasing numbers although Mr. Field says, "the backbone of our trade is still the family going from place to place by car."

Transfer of the travel bureau to the trade department from northern affairs was a beneficial move, says Mr. Field.

"After all, trade and tourists go together and now we have the services of Canada's trade commissioners who can drum up business for us all over the world."

Tourist trade now ranks as the third greatest dollar earner for Canada, behind woodland products and wheat.

"We hope to nail down second place this year and go to the top by 1967."

The tourist bureau is working under "firm targets" laid down in January by George Hees, then trade minister. He forecast an increase of $75,000,000 in tourist spending in Canada this year and a matching increase for 1964.

Newfoundland: Final figures for 1962 are not yet available but indications are that improved roads and the growing number of provincial parks made the year a record one. These factors, along with Newfoundland's popular hunting and fishing, are expected to produce another bumper tourist year in 1963.

Nova Scotia: It enjoyed a record year in 1962, playing host to an estimated 706,407 visitors who spent $55,191,291. Another increase in visitors is expected in 1963, drawn mostly by the scenery and historic sites.

New Brunswick: It also enjoyed its best- year, 1,732,500 visitors who spent an estimated $52,000,000. Family sightseeing drew most visitors and Fundy National Park was a major attraction. Responses to the province's advertising program were up 19 per cent in March over those of last year, indicating another big year.

Prince Edward Island: A total 252,000 visitors spent $9,500,100 last year—both records—and the tourist industry hopes to boost this to 275,000 and $10,000,000 in 1963. The successful summer school for highland dancing and piping originated in 1962 at Cavendish will be back along with two new attractions, a wildlife park at North Rustico and a Northumberland Strait swim meet.

Quebec: It will spend $560,000 on efforts to lure tourists this year, the biggest promotion budget of any province. American tourists dropped to an estimated 2,671,897 in 1962 but this was compensated for by an increasing number of visitors from other provinces. Income from all tourists was estimated at $925,000,000, an increase over 1961. The government now is building a network of camping grounds and roadside snack stops to complement camping space available in provincial parks.

Ontario: Officials say U.S. tourists spent an estimated $400,000,000 in 1962, a healthy increase over the previous year, and predict another boost in 1963. Camping is still a growing activity in Ontario and two new parks are expected to open this year. There now are more than 1,000 public and private camping and trailer sites. The province expects the heaviest flow of tourists to the Georgian Bay-Muskoka, Haliburton and Rideau Lake areas.

Manitoba: An increase of at least seven per cent both in the number of tourists and the money they spend is predicted for this year. An estimated 355,494 tourists visited the province in 1962 and spent $39,386,475. Camping is believed the most popular activity.

Saskatchewan: About 600,000 tourists, 200,000 of them Americans, visited the province in 1962. Total spending was about $25 000,000. Many of the visitors were passing through en route to the World's Fair. One of the most attractive prospects for 1963 tourists is the opening of new resort areas in the north. The province also is building numerous camp sites.

Alberta: It is calling for a 15-per-cent increase in the number of visitors this year. Director Ed Bryant of the Alberta Travel Bureau predicts 2,700,000 tourists will spend an estimated $152,306,800. In 1962 there were 271,816 American visitors and 2,862,000 Canadians who spent about $132,440,000. Jasper, Banff, Yoho, Kootenay and Waterton National Parks are expected to attract most visitors.

British Columbia: An estimated 3,650,000 tourists visited the province in 1962. The 2,147,756 Americans spent about $145,000,000. Figures are not available for spending by others. From the response to its promotion program, the province looks for as many as 4,000,000 tourists in 1963.

TOURIST SPENDING DEFICIT — Canadian tourists abroad continue to spend more than visitors to Canada. Visitors to Canada in 1962 spent a record $560,000,000 but Canadians abroad spent $610,000,000 — the 12th straight year that Canada has had a deficit. (CP Newsmap)

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The 1962-63 calibre of Canadian junior hockey, whether it be "A", "B" or "C", will scarcely go down into the archives as an example of good clean sport and sportsmanship.

Across the nation the newspapers carried reports of junior battles that provided nothing much that resembled hockey but had all the earmarks of "win at any cost" donnybrooks, near mayhem and unnecessary injuries.

One of the most stillized "items" in hockey equipment was the thumb of a referee. Penalty-box statistics reached a new high. And that much-maligned person, the referee, came in for more verbal and other abuse in some cases from coaches, who, it seemed, had little or no control over ice-borne, fight-provoking proteges.

And the Memorial Cup final between the Edmonton Oil Kings and the Niagara Falls Flyers proved that the "go-get-'em" virus was not confined to the lower junior brackets.

Len (Kitchener Record) Taylor, in a recent column, points out that the cause of Confederation wasn't advanced very much by the national junior finals. The public disorderly pattern, he said, followed that of the junior final of 1962, which was an ill-tempered display featured by an absence of sportsmanship."

"The Oil Kings," says Taylor, "winning their first Canadian title, were the physical aggressors as they were a year ago, if the press reports are correct."

"They have been weaned on diet of pep talks that the only way to beat the rest is to outmuscle them. Broken bones resulted from this year's confrontation and Canadian solidarity went a glimmering as the eastwesterners pelted remarks about the absence of that long-boasted western hospitality.

"A year ago the bitterness of the feeling in the Edmonton-Hamilton series left us with a "whats-the-use" reaction. It returns, doubled in spades.

"A year ago the Edmonton and Hamilton coaches were trading public insults and the players were so busy bashing one another around that the onlookers looked more like a bull fight than a hockey game.

"This year's final suffered from too much talking by the brass. Hap Emms started it with a ridiculous charge about a loaded team in the west which just didn't happen to be true this time. Emms was made to look silly when someone quietly read him the regulations and may have been sulking over since.

"Since that time the oral battle has seldom let up with the Niagara Falls coach firing volley after volley at the rink, the officials, the executives and any other target of suspected opportunity.

"The series, judging by the injury list and the penalties, developed into another meeting of the pugilistically inclined.

"When you think of the thousands of youngsters who pursue the hockey dream in Canada and of the few of them ever get a chance to play for the Canadian championship it makes you wonder why this has to be.

"Surely there must be a little light-hearted satisfaction in just earning the right to play for the Memorial Cup. Some of us might think that the players would be somewhat impressed with the honor of the occasion and conduct themselves as if it were a time to produce nothing but the very best in the way of conduct and performance.

"While the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association completes the curriculum for those university courses it is operating this summer let's hope that hockey philosophy has a prominent place in the listing of subjects.

"Somewhere, somehow we had better start teaching our youngsters that the game's the thing if we are going to be able to justify the time, money and effort spent to promote it.

"Canadian games that resemble gang wars are a mighty poor advertisement for all that is being done for the sport today."

Plan Games Meet For Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The first annual Toronto International Games, which the sponsors hope will attract track and field stars from the United States and Europe, will be held here Tuesday, June 25, it was announced Tuesday.

C.F.L. Designs Cup Weather Formula

By STEPHEN SCOTT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Football League general managers Tuesday decided on a formula to deal with Grey Cup games postponed by weather or any other eventuality.

League commissioner G. Sydney Halter announced at the end of two days of closed meetings the formula is designed to protect the public.

Under it the public returning the next day to see the end of a postponed game is guaranteed at least 20 minutes of play instead of the nine minutes and 30 seconds Toronto fans got in the fog-bound Grey Cup game between Winnipeg and Hamilton last year.

The nine general managers also recommended the appointment of a "revenue producer" to continue efforts to have CFL games viewed on United States television and asked for the plugging of a loophole in league regulations under which certain import players are classified as Canadians.

RELEASE DETAILS

The postponement formula:

If postponement is forced before a game starts it will be played the next day.

If it is forced during the first two periods it will be continued the following day with the score, field position and personnel the same as when the game left off.

If the game is halted in the fourth quarter the commissioner will have the choice of declaring the game ended or ordering its continuation the following day at which time two 10-minute halves will be played with a kickoff at the beginning of each half. The score will be carried on from the previous half.

Halter said he would declare a game ended only if one had what would appear to be an insurmountable lead, say 24 points.

DECIDES LEAGUE GAMES

The formula applies only to the Grey Cup—there was no discussion of a formula for postponed league games which will continue to be subject to the ruling of the commissioner.

The general managers voted to recommend to the CFL executive the creation of what B.C. Lions' Herb Capozzi called a "revenue producer" or "business development officer."

He said a committee will define the new appointee's exact duties. The officer would meet advertisers now supporting Canadian football, seek new ones and take over the clubs' attempts to have league games broadcast on American TV—a move the clubs feel would increase the league's revenue and be an assistance to recruitment of players in the U.S.

The managers also asked Halter to draw up a regulations for approval that would close a loophole under which players born in Canada but who have lived most of their lives in the U.S. are classified as Canadians. As such they do not come under restrictions limiting teams to 10 imports each, although they often receive the same pay as imports.

Bragan Gets Contract For 1964

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The slumping Milwaukee Braves gave manager Bobby Bragan a complete vote of confidence Tuesday night by renewing his contract through the 1964 season.

Club president John McHale announced at a press conference that Bragan's contract had been extended another year as the Braves wallowed in a tie for last place in the National League race.

Bragan's original contract signed last fall is believed to pay about 35,000 annually.

Asked about a raise in the new agreement, McHale said he "hoped so"—with the club."

TICKET SALES UP

VANCOUVER (CP)—It seems that both teams are benefiting from the recent one - for - five trade Toronto Argonauts made with Edmonton Eskimos for quarterback Jackie Parker. Joe Ryan, general-manager of the Western Football Conference Eskimos said in an interview Tuesday that pre-season ticket sales are running well ahead of last year. Lew Hayman, general-manager of the Eastern Conference Argonauts, said in the same interview that his ticket sales are running about 800 ahead of last year.

AUSTRALIAN WINS

ROME (AP)—Martin Mulligan defeated Boro Jovanovic of Yugoslavia Tuesday in the final round of the Rome International tennis tournament for an Australian sweep of the singles titles. Mulligan, first unseeded player to win the championship since the Second World War, downed Jovanovic 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Earlier in the day Margaret Smith retained the women's title by defeating fellow Australian Lesley Turner 6-3, 6-4.

Chisox Herbert Blanks Tigers

Tosses 4th Consecutive Shutout

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

One of these days someone is going to get a run off Ray Herbert. Sure they are. But don't hold your breath, Charley.

Chicago White Sox' ace has not been scored in four straight games and gives no indication he is going to ease up. His next scheduled outing will send him against Minnesota's struggling Twins, who've been blanked six times this season.

The 33-year-old right-hander, trade bait a couple of years ago but a 20-game winner last season, spaced six hits in scoring his fourth consecutive shutout Tuesday night, a 3-0 decision over Detroit Tigers. The victory enabled the American League leading White Sox to retain their one-game lead over Kansas City Athletics, 5-2 victors over Cleveland Indians.

New York Yankees scored a 5-1 triumph over Minnesota behind Whitey Ford's five-hit pitching and veteran Robin Roberts won his first game of the season after four losses, pitching Baltimore Orioles to a 6-1 decision over Washington Senators. The Los Angeles Angels' game at Boston was rained out.

NEAR RECORD

Herbert, just another good journeyman pitcher until he was traded to Chicago a couple of seasons ago, blossomed into a 20-game winner last season. This year he's started off with five shutouts in six decisions, four of the blankings in order. He's within one of the major league record of five in a row by Walter White of White Sox in 1904. His 36 consecutive scoreless innings compares with the record 56 by Walter Johnson in 1913.

In his last four starts he's allowed a total 13 hits. He stopped Baltimore on four hits, Washington on three and New York on two. Against Tigers, he struck out seven and walked none.

Jim Landis gave him all the hitting support needed, driving in all the Chicago runs on a homer and a two-run single.

Kansas City rushed in four first inning runs, two on a bloop double by Jerry Lumpe, then held off Cleveland on the six-hit pitching of Al Bakow.

Yankees' Ford got the benefit of an unearned run in winning his fourth straight. Hector Lopez singled in the winning run in the eighth inning after the Minnesota infield had messed up two potential double plays.

Roberts tossed a four-hitter for the Orioles, with his shutout bid spoiled by Larry Osborne's homer. Homers by Jim Gentile and Boo Powell helped him to a 4-0 lead in the third inning.

"U.S. Improving Too Fast"

Russ Predict Olympic Scores

NEW YORK (AP)—Want to know the point score of the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo?

The Russians think it will be: Russia 712 points, United States 518, Japan 221.

And they are all worried about it.

They think the United States is improving too fast. In an attempt to keep pace, the Russians are using brainwashing, yoga and deep breathing of isolated air in special chambers.

These reports come from the Institute of the Study of the U.S.S.R. The institute says the Soviet government attaches great political importance to sports competition and "is taking great pains to ensure that Soviet athletes do not lose to the United States team in the forthcoming Olympic Games at Tokyo."

Of course, the Olympics are supposed to be an individual contest, and point scores are strictly unofficial. They are kept by news agencies—and the Russians, who take them seriously.

The Russian point system, according to the institute, that the Soviets scored 683 points at the 1960 Rome Olympics, and the U.S. 432.

EXPECT BETTER TOTAL

They expect to better their total in 1964, but also expect the U.S total to increase. Y. Mashin, one of the Soviet government sports bosses, says the Soviet Union should increase its point total by 29, while the U.S. will be up 55 points and Japan 78.

"We are being overtaken in the rate of increase," Mashin said.

Among the several moves being taken by the Russians to avoid this is the national Spartacus games, billed by one Soviet sports official as a "dress rehearsal" for the Tokyo games. Some 60,000,000 Russians will take part at the neighborhood level, with those showing special aptitude for any sport being given more training. After eliminations, the finals will be held in Moscow in late summer.

Psychologists are also working with Soviet athletes in an effort to instill the "will to win," and yoga exercises and "negative-charged ions" believed to increase stamina and sharpen reflexes are being breathed in special chambers.

The Soviets, the institute says, consider international sports a showcase for their way of life, and as a chance to gain "the love and respect of millions of simple people in all corners of the earth."

SEEK BAN

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)— The Illinois house of representatives Tuesday defeated a bill seeking a ban on mechanical noisemakers at athletic events in the state. Representative Claude Walker, a Republican who sponsored the bill, said sirens, air horns and cowbells spoil sports attractions for most spectators.

'Bums' Never Like This!

'Beer, Cans, Rubbish'

NEW YORK (CP) — The Mets are back home in the cellar, and the National League office is trying to get them back to New York fans back to normal too.

League president Warren Giles has laid down the law to the effect that incidents at weekend games here with Cincinnati Reds "had better be the last."

Giles talked to Mets general manager George Weiss following a Cincinnati protest, and said Tuesday he was promised that protection for visiting players at the Polo grounds will be spruced up.

"He gave me assurances that ample police protection will be provided, Giles said.

Fans pelted the Reds with rubbish, beer and cans, and spat on the players as they passed through the dressing room doors in deep centre-field during games last weekend.

"We do not intend to stifle fan enthusiasm," Giles said.

"But visiting players — and the home team's players, too — are entitled to the protection of the office."

COMPLAINTS ABOUT DEBRIS

Giles said "I'm not saying they were or were not. But beer cans and garbage on the field are not exaggerations."

On Saturday, Reds' pitcher Joey Jay stumbled after making a delivery to a batter, and a rubber ball was found. Apparently it was tossed on the field.

Giles said Weiss said that was the only occurence at Yankee Stadium.

"I told him I don't care what goes on in the other league," Giles added. "It's not going to happen in ours."

Fans Give Flyers Warm Reception

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Niagara Falls Flyers, the defeated Memorial Cup finalists, arrived home Tuesday night to the wild acclaim of more than 6,000 fans.

The team, officials and a handful of followers that went west for the final Memorial Cup series between Niagara Falls and Edmonton Oil Kings, for the Canadian junior hockey championship, left Edmonton by train Sunday after the Oil Kings wrapped up the series 4-2 with a victory Saturday night.

But loyal hockey fans lined a five-mile parade route here as the players were taken in a motorcade through the city to the Memorial Arena where the players were introduced.

The loudest cheers were for forwards Gary Dornhoefer and Gary Harmer, both of whom broke a leg in the series.

The club will be honored tonight at a testimonial dinner.

Stadium Repairs Problem

Leafs May Fold In 1964

TORONTO (CP)—Harry Kimber, president of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, said Tuesday there is a possibility the club may not operate next year if it is found that repairs to its stadium are too expensive.

He said the outcome depends on the results of a structural survey of Maple Leaf Stadium authorized Tuesday by the Toronto Harbor Commission which owns the stadium.

Mr. Kimber, also chairman of the harbor commission, said after the meeting that "only" the survey reveal that extensive work is needed to put the building into good condition, the baseball club would not be able to afford it.

"It depends on the cost of the repairs. If it is going to cost $100,000 or $150,000 to put it into shape, we can't do it. The purpose of the survey is to find out."

The baseball club, plagued this year by declining fortunes both on the diamond and at the box office, held a 15-year lease on the stadium built in 1926. The lease expired last year and this year's agreement is temporary. Rental is about $12,500 a year plus a percentage of the gross of Sunday games which in prosperous years can put the rental close to $80,000.

Bisons Edge Crackers, Leafs Split

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The beefy Buffalo Bisons, holding their own as northern division leaders in the International League, are doing their bit keeping Atlanta Crackers from their top spot in the southern division.

The [illegible] Crackers [illegible] Tuesday night, Coupled with a 5-2 Arkansas Travelers victory over Columbus Jets, that put Travelers in the southern division lead with just a shade better percentage than Crackers.

Richmond Virginians and Toronto Maple Leafs split a doubleheader, Toronto taking the first game 4-2 but falling 10-5 in the second. Indianapolis Indians whipped Jacksonville Suns 6-1 and Rochester Red Wings shaded Syracuse Chiefs 1-0.

Dick Smith's lead-off home run in the eighth inning broke a 4-4 tie and also ended a 16-inning shutout string for Bob Humphreys, Atlanta's ace relief hurler.

Bisons also got homers from Jim Hicks and Joe Christopher. Doug Clemens hit one for the losers.

ALLOWS THREE HITS

Nelson Chittum and Fred Valentine teamed to give Rochester its slim victory margin. Chittum pitched a three-hitter, fanning seven and walking three while Valentine clouted a third-inning home run, his third in as many games.

Richmond's 12-hit attack featured three home runs in downing Toronto in the nightcap after the Maple Leafs punked across two seventh-inning runs to win the opener. Leafs' Ty Cline collected six hits in eight trips to the plate, including 5-for-5 in the second game.

Joe Shipley notched his fifth victory in six decisions for Indianapolis. A flurry of wild pitches in the eighth cost him a shutout.

Fans Resent Soccer Ducats To Liz, Dick

LONDON (AP)—Film stars Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton became involved in a soccer storm Tuesday—all because their love affairs invited to the English Cup final May 29.

Sidney Needham, chairman of Leicester City, started it.

He sent the two stars complimentary tickets to the final between Leicester City and Manchester United at London's Wembley Stadium.

The game is the showpiece of the English season and traditionally is a 100,000 sellout months before being played.

Thousands of fans who have followed the finalists throughout the season cannot get tickets and some are protesting.

An official of the Leicester club said:

"Every year the chairman of each cup final team invites a few personal friends. The invitations to Miss Taylor and Mr. Burton do not affect the allocation of tickets to the supporters."

Says N.F.L. Gambling Was Limited

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League said Tuesday the big thing to come out of pro football's gambling investigation was the fact that gambling hasn't come out of it.

Here to attend the first meeting of all the coaches in one year, the first since 1956, Rozelle declared that he was very definitely relieved that the intensive probe hasn't turned up more than the findings that Paul Hornung of Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of Detroit Lions, plus five other players on the Detroit club, had placed some bets on football games.

"It was a painful experience to all of us," said Rozelle, "but the big thing to come out of it is that football as a business had not grown more serious."

It's a hair-raising entertainment experience you wont' soon forget and one that you'll long remember and rave about. The enjoyment of "The Raven" is enhanced with the presentation in Color and Panavision.

Giant Love Subject Unusual Drama

The crazed love of a prehistoric giant for a ravishing teenage girl succeeds in making Eegah filmed in Eastman color, one of the rare stories to come out of Hollywood. Eegah opens today at the Belle Theatre.

Richard Kiel, 7' 2" giant who is Hollywood's biggest actor, plays the mighty Eegah whose fervent love is turned to putty when the first girl he has ever seen enters his ancient cave. Marilyn Manning portrays the girl who arouses the ageless giant while Arch Hall, Jr., enacts the role of Tom, Roxy's frustrated boy friend who fights the fabulous Eegah in hand to hand combat (David and Goliath) and temporarily rescues Roxy from her predicament; living in a mountain cave filled with the mummified remains of the ancients.

LARSCHEID INJURED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Larscheid, rookie sensation of the British Columbia Lions' backfield in the 1962 Western Football Conference season, may have been knocked out of action for the 1963 season by a smashed knee. Larscheid suffered the knee injury Saturday in an exhibition game at Logan, Utah. In Logan, Larscheid apparently was not too concerned about his injuries. He said doctors had "tied a couple of ligaments back together in my knee and it should be as good as new come Aug. 1."

Animal Farm Is Talent Ranch

ZEPHYR, Ont. (CP) — The number and variety of performers handled by talent agent Lorna Jackson would be the envy of other theatrical agents.

At first glance her talent lis reads like material for a strip tease — Misty Bit, Charoon Flower—or for clown - heavy vaudeville — Milkweed, Butch and Pauncho Lopez.

But Misty Bit's last engagement was in a Shakespearean drama on CBC-TV's Festival series. He played a long-haired miniature dachshund dog, the same role he plays in real life.

TRAINED IN TRICKERY

Movie and television performers in search of winged or four-legged realism call on Miss Jackson for birds and beasts, many of them trained to perform tricks if necessary.

A chicken appropriately named Chickie will roll over and play dead. Turpentine the pig likes to come indoors and snooze by the kitchen stove like a cat.

Pauncho the monkey will pick up the pups among some 60 dogs on the farm and rock them back and forth in a loop of his long tail.

The menagerie includes a pinto pony, 15 cats, a fox, a squirrel, a sheep named Fleecy, a crow, goats, a racoon called Randy, ring-necked doves, a ferret named Eleanor and donkeys who answer respectively to Herbert; Frances and Pedro.

Miss Jackson, assisted by fellow animal-lover Marion Peltier and occasionally by volunteers from among the neighbors' children, has her work cut out providing for the needs and temperaments of her charges.

But she is pleased to be able to pursue a hobby that makes money. "I've always loved animals and wouldn't be happy doing anything else," she says.

NAME PLAYERS

NEW YORK (AP)—Allen Fox of Los Angeles, Donald Dell of Bethesda, Md., and Eugene Scott of St. James, N.Y., were named Tuesday as the United States Davis Cup players who will oppose Iran at Tehran on June 13-14-15. Robert Kelleher of Beverly Hills, Calif., is the team's non-playing captain.

Indiana's Own Herb Shriner Has Become a Californian

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Look who has become a Californian—Indiana's own Herb Shriner.

The humorist is settling here and he's trying to get accustomed to local living. It hasn't been easy.

"For one thing, it's awfully difficult to find any rhubarb pie in California," he said. "And it's impossible to find any sugar pie." He explained that was an Indiana dish, a poor man's pie with almost no filling.

And the dress among Californians has confused Shriner.

"I figured if I was coming to California I wasn't going to wear a tie any more, just sport shirts," he said. "The first thing I know, I run into a bunch of dudes in ties and grey suits. So I gotta dress like 'em."

But he's willing to face the problems because of California's other advantages. He explained why he had moved his family from his eastern base.

SHOW FILMED EAST

"I probably should have made the move five or six years ago, but I was doing a live show, Two for the Money, which the producers wanted to do in New York. Then I was stuck with a variety show for a year.

"I've been fascinated for a long time with film, and I wanted to pursue something I have given a lot of thought to—exploring the American character. I lived at Fort Lauderdale in Florida for six months and while it's a fine place to be retired, I wasn't ready to retire. I found I had to come to Hollywood because it is the centre of the film business and I could get the things I wanted done here."

Shriner's future is still unsettled. He has done a lot of work on a television show he would call Herb Shriner's Wonderful People—grass roots Americana. He would tour most of the year in his land cruiser, visiting county fairs and other events or just talking to folks who had something to say.

Meanwhile he travels as Dupont's goodwill ambassador and plays high-paying dates at state fairs and expositions.

On Toronto, Montreal Tracks

Virus Said Not Serious

TORONTO (CP) — Some race horses at Ontario tracks have suffered from an illness with symptoms similar to those of a disease which has closed several United States tracks, a spokesman for the Ontario Jockey Club said Tuesday.

However, the effects of the disease in Ontario have not been as widespread nor as serious as at U.S. courses, the spokesman said.

The OJC spokesman said some thoroughbreds at Fort Erie and trotters at Mohawk Raceway have been scratched because of an illness with similar symptoms.

Trainers "insist it's an annual thing," the spokesman said. Ontario horsemen regard the disease as "something like the common cold among humans."

MONTREAL (CP) — The cough-inducing virus sweeping horse racing tracks in the United States has hit Montreal's Richelieu Raceway, an standard harness track that averages some 9,000 a program in attendance.

Paul Dansereau, the track's president and general manager, said Tuesday about 750 horses are quartered there and some 10 per cent of them have come down with the virus. However, he said it was "not alarming" and there was no immediate danger of having to close the track.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Jockeys Paul Bobenko, a recent arrival from New England, and Jerry Harrison, a native of Florida, both enjoyed riding doubles at Greenwood Tuesday as leading rider Ron Turcotte was only able to finish second once and third once in seven tries.

Bobenko's victories were both squeakers. He rode the early Mischief Stable's Chadidia in the first race and Lady Nise in the sixth.

Harrison's victories were achieved much easier than Bobenko's. In the second race, he rode Snow Lane, owned by J. Edmonds and T. Smith of Toronto, and Starlet to Star, owned by John Smallman of London, Ont., in the fifth.

CHICAGO (AP)—A virus believed responsible for a severe coughing epidemic that has affected both running and harness horses has been isolated by research teams in Florida and Kentucky, it was reported Tuesday as several trotting tracks were forced to close because of lack of entries. It is hoped to develop a vaccine.

Stan Bergstein of Chicago, director of the Harness Racing Institute, said the virus was isolated from thoroughbred horses infected at Gulfstream Park near Miami and from trotters struck at Buffalo Raceway, Hamburg, N.Y.

The U.S. Public Health Service is investigating. James Steele, chief of the veterinary section of the Communicable Disease Centre in Atlanta, said that as far as can be determined no human illness has been associated with the equine outbreak.

Horses affected run a high fever, are subject to coughing and lose of appetite. No deaths have been reported. The illness usually takes about four days to a week to run its course.

The coughing among the trotters now is apparently at its peak. It has closed several tracks.

Brandywine Raceway in Wilmington, Del., is closed this week because of a lack of horses. Maywood Park in Chicago closed Monday for four nights. In Cleveland, Northfield Park has cancelled its trotting programs for tonight and Thursday night.

Thoroughbreds have been serious at Yonkers Raceway in New York State and at Buffalo Raceway, Jerry Paul, owner-trainer of Bobby Hanover, said Tuesday in Thursday's $50,000 National Championship Pace at Yonkers, is "shaping and is a doubtful starter.

The semi-final leg of the $16,000 Harness Tracks of America Pace was transferred from Hazel Park in Detroit to Roosevelt Raceway at Omro Mdws. near Washington where it will be raced Friday night. It was moved from Hazel Park after Michigan officials barred shipment of horses into the track because of the epidemic.

Batting — Johnny Temple, Colts, collected four singles and knocked in run in deciding eighth-inning rally as Houston won its sixth straight, 4-3 over New York Mets.

MORRISON IS ILL

OTTAWA (CP)—Arnie Morrison, 54, quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four football union in the 1930s, was reported in fair condition in hospital Tuesday after suffering a stroke. Morrison was the Ottawa quarterback when Riders dropped the Eastern Canada final to Nevia Imperials of the Ontario Rugby Football Union in 1938. He is a former winner of the Jeff Russel Trophy—awarded annually to the Big Four player who best combines clean play, sportsmanship and promotion of team spirit.

After plundering enemy territory with amazing success, San Francisco Giants have returned to Candlestick Park—and find home isn't the warmest place in the world to be, after all.

Giants opened a two - week stand at San Francisco Tuesday night and squeezed out a 3-1 decision over Pittsburgh Pirates, with right-hander Jack Sanford registering the 100th victory of his National League career.

In a turnabout for the defending champions, Candlestick hasn't been a happy haven for them this season. They were a remarkable 51-31 there last year and only 42-41 away from home. This spring they've won less than one - half at Candlestick, seven of 15, but have feasted on the road at a 13-5 clip.

By winning Tuesday night, Giants pushed 1½ games ahead in the league scramble. Warren Spahn and Milwaukee Braves trimmed St. Louis' second-place Cardinals 4-3, Chicago Cubs, 2-1 winners over Cincinnati Reds on Ken Hubbs' two-run homer in the eighth inning, moved into a virtual tie with Pittsburgh Pirates for third, 2½ games off the pace.

DRYSDALE BEATEN

In other games, Philadelphia Phillies beat Don Drysdale for the first time in five seasons in a 5-1 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers; and Houston Colts posted their sixth straight victory and dumped New York into the cellar, edging Mets 4-3.

San Francisco managed only four hits off Bob Friend in the seven innings he worked but bunched a walk to Willie Mays, singles by Willie McCovey and Orlando Cepeda, an error and Joey Amalfitano's sacrifice fly for two runs in the fourth. They added another off Harvey Haddix in the eighth.

Sanford now 6-2, allowed just three hits before being lifted in the ninth after a one-out single by Bill Virdon. Billy Pierce then gave up a hit to Bob Skinner, but Bob Bolin set down the final two Pirates without further damage.

Wes Covington's eighth homer started Phils off toward a 3-0 lead in the first inning against Drysdale, who had beaten Philadelphia 13 times in a row dating back to September, 1958.

Cal McLish, who won it with a five-hitter, also rapped two doubles and scored twice, while John Callison batted in two runs with a single and double.

END SKID

Braves, who had lost three straight and nine of their last 10, pulled out of their skid behind Spahn. The 42-year-old southpaw wizard was touched for 11 hits and was banged in the abdomen by a liner off Stan Musial's bat in the second inning. But he stuck it out for his fifth victory this year and his 332nd over-all.

Milwaukee cashed in three runs in the third against Cardinal starter Bob Gibson, and Spahn himself delivered the deciding run in the seventh with a line single. Julian Javier belted Spahn for a homer and triple.

Nuxhall singled in Reds' run in the eighth.

Young Canadian Star

Joins US Davis Cuppers

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Brown, 18-year-old tennis player from Port Credit and ranked No. 1 boy player in Ontario, will report to the United States Davis Cup team at Kenyon College, Ohio, June 7 for training and a two-month tour of the American net circuit.

Arrangements were completed Monday night by Bob Malaga of Cleveland, vice-chairman of the U.S. Davis Cup committee, Zouch Palmer of Oakville, president of the Ontario Lawn Tennis Association, and Eddie Condon of Ottawa, chairman of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association junior development committee.

Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Brown. His mother, Louise, was Canadian national women's singles champion in 1937 and now is playing captain of the CLTA four-player women's team competing in British tournaments this season.

Brown, who first hit a tennis ball at the age of seven and played in his first tournament two years later, joins the top American junior prospects in the U.S., including Montreal born Mike Belkin, Canadian and American junior under-18 singles champion.

Dismiss Suit Of Engineer Against Town

PICTON — The suit for damages for wrongful dismissal brought against the town of Picton by Herbert L. Gray, former town engineer, was dismissed yesterday by Mr. Justice S. N. Schatz, who found that Mr. Gray was in strict disobedience of his instructions.

The action was dismissed without costs.

Mr. Gray was dismissed last June when he refused to produce forms applying for a supplementary grant of assistance to Spencer St., leading to a new factory. The property, evidence showed, was owned by Mayor Harver J. McFarland, who built the road extension.

Mr. Justice Schatz said disobedience of instructions was sufficient cause for dismissal. Evidence showed the engineer had been instructed to prepare the forms by council and committee heads.

"He is a man of integrity," the judge said. "This has been indirectly said by counsel in this case, but he did neglect to read information in a form that he was instructed to do.

"He gave as his reason that he had no duty, but he also admitted he did not try to get it, and he felt it would be against his professional ethics to sign this form. His own letter made it quite clear that this conflict of interest was his main interest."

Mr. Justice Schatz said that had Mr. Gray filled out the form and refused to sign it, it would have been a different matter.

Council, he was, was acting in good faith. Councillors were concerned with the establishment of a new industry in the plaintiff, on the other hand, had in essence attempted to dictate to those who hired him, and his only recourse was to resign.

Mr. Gray gave as his reasons: he did not have the power; Mr. McFarland had built the road at a cost of $22,000, and he could get no breakdown of costs; conflict of interest; the ethics of his profession; he application for a grant can be made after the road has been completed.

Reeve Bernard Hepburn, who is a public relations officer for the Canadian Gypsum construction company, said the road benefited the property and built the factory on it, which he then leased to the operating company, Proctor-Silex.

A cheque for $1,000 to cover Mr. Gray's salary from the time of his dismissal in June until the by-law dismissing him went through in August, was returned to the defendants.

Regular Meet Of Auxiliary Is Held

PICTON — The regular meeting of the W.R.A. was held on Friday afternoon in the Royal Hotel, with the president, Mrs. A. M. Clarke presiding.

The prayer for Hospital Auxiliaries was repeated in unison, followed by the reading of the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs. A. Clarke, reminded everyone that this was National Hospital Day and that it was being observed locally in our own hospital with conducted tours for the High School students present and that four of our Auxiliary members were assisting.

The Hospital Auxiliary was responsible for the transportation to Kingston General Hospital on Saturday, May 11th, of four High School students representing Prince Edward County, who participated in their observance of National Hospital Day in Hospital Region No. 6.

Appreciation was expressed to those responsible for the "Hospital Day" decorations window in Eaton's and to Mr. Gerry Morrison for his kindness and generosity in providing the facilities.

Mrs. Ern Ward asked for three 6-qt saucepans for use in the physiotherapy department of the Hospital on Monday and Thursday afternoons from 3.30 p.m. to 8.30 p.m. and for ladies to assist with the W.H.A. tag day on May 31 and June 1st. The headquarters for the tag day will be in the Agricultural Office.

The date of the Carousel and Motor Show has been changed from June 3 to October 3 and 4 and will be held at the Community Centre.

Mrs. H. Simpson reported on the Blood Donor Clinic and said that a letter had been sent to Toronto asking for a clinic to be the next clinic be October 7th.

Mrs. Slaven read the annual report of the Blood Donor Clinic and gave a summary of the convention in Toronto which she attended with Mrs. Peasy with Mrs. M. Hagerman and Mrs. A. Moore.

Mrs. R. Sipp read the report of the telephone convener, Miss A. McConnell. The captain's report for fall tea will be 1st on the Monday preceding the meeting and if unable to do so to please contact the convener.

Junior Farmers Will Be Hosts To Scottish Girl

PICTON — From May 13th to 22nd, Prince Edward County Junior Farmers will be host to Miss Lena Muriel Whyte, a Scottish young farmer delegate from Murlton of Barra, Glimerdrum, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. While in Prince Edward County Miss Whyte will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Montgomery and family. She will stay in the Williams' home until May 18th, when she will transfer to the Montgomery home. During her visit to Prince Edward she will have an opportunity to see much of the area and the type of agriculture that is carried on. In addition she will have an opportunity to attend a Junior Farmers' meeting and also see something of the Junior Farmers' activities in all club offices and is at present chairman.

During her term as a Young Farmer member she has exhibited outstanding leadership, in addition to her Junior activities she has travelled widely. She is a former secretary-treasurer of the Aberdeen Agricultural Society and she takes an active part in rural organizations. Miss Lena is at present Poultry and Dairying Adviser for the North of Scotland College of Agriculture in the Turriff area. She holds the National Diploma in Dairying (1958) and the National Diploma in Poultry (1960). The poultry unit at home is also her responsibility and she is the farm bookkeeper. She was educated at Oldmeldrum Public and Inverurie Academy, Inverurie. All welcome Miss Whyte to Prince Edward County and hope that her stay will be pleasant and interesting.

Norris Whitney To Seek to Be P.C. Candidate

PICTON — Announcement that he will again be a candidate for the Progressive Conservative nomination in Prince Edward-Lennox, was made by Norris Whitney, speaking at the annual meeting of Hallowell-Bloomfield P.C. Association.

"I feel I am recovered from my recent illness and my doctors assure me that I am physically able to carry on the duties as member," Mr. Whitney said.

The announcement ends a great deal of speculation. Mr. Whitney has served four terms.

Also prominently mentioned as possible candidates when a convention is held are Dwight O. Reynolds, campaign manager in several elections, former Prince Edward Warden, former chairman of the Ontario Marketing Board, also active in a variety of public projects.

Also considered a possibility is J. M. Hartwick, currently president of the National Dairy Council, who is president of Quinte Milk Products Ltd., and also active in community affairs.

Mr. Whitney predicted an election in the autumn.

P.C. Association President, Barney Hepburn said there are not yet enough data to hold a nominating convention.

Land of the Castanets Clicks With Economy Boom

MADRID (Reuters)—Spain is enjoying an economic boom, thanks partly to the influx of some 8,500,000 tourists a year.

The country can boast of financial stability and full employment. Furthermore, industrial wages rose by at least 10 per cent last year, helped by a higher minimum wage established by the government for farm and industrial workers.

The current prosperity recalls the previous boom in 1956 when Gen. Francisco Franco ordered a sweeping wage increases. His action gave Spaniards 30,000,000,000 pesetas (about $500,000,000) extra spending money a year.

At that time, there were too many pesetas chasing too few beefsteaks, radio sets and other goods. Now the economy appears to be better balanced.

JOBS AVAILABLE

Symptomatic of the employment situation was the fact that Barcelona's daily newspaper, La Vanguardia, recently carried 379 advertisements in its help-wanted section and only 46 advertisements of jobs wanted.

Spain's middle - class housewives, long envied by their sisters in other industrial nations for an unlimited supply of maids at low salaries, find the boom troublesome. Maids are disappearing swiftly from the housewives' kitchens into cafeterias, factories and offices.

Economists argue among themselves as to whether Spain's current prosperity is being used to the best advantage.

Some think the "neo-capitalismo" of the Roman Catholic lay organization Opus Dei, which sponsors a paternalistic, socially-conscious brand of capitalism, is the right answer.

Others say that the answer must be in a "neo-socialisme" of the kind proposed by labor union thinkers.

TOURISTS HELP

The man-in-the-street shows little interest in the issue.

But he can, and does, appreciate the new prosperity which has come with the tourist invasion.

Along the Mediterranean coastline, a new world of superhotels, camping sites and vacation bungalows is spreading like a forest fire.

There is money in tourism. Hotel circles recently buzzed with the news that a foreign group setting up a new luxury hotel were paying the manager a salary of 1,000,000 pesetas (about $17,000) a year. Spain is not accustomed to salaries of this size.

Lynxes Appear On Outskirts of Alberta Cities

EDMONTON (CP) — Lynxes are appearing on the outskirts of Alberta cities and towns, prompting the provincial government to issue an unusual sort of "press" release.

It explains that the ordinarily timid animals do not represent any serious threat to people; that they are merely trying to find food, and that they are protected by law.

"While any person might be expected to act on his own behalf to dispatch a lynx found in the farm chicken coop, he may not be excused for hunting and killing specimens of a protected animal simply because it happens to cross his path.

"Why permit completely unfounded fear and frenzy to supplant . . . dedication (to conservation) with wrathful stupidity?"

The lynx population has shot up in the last few years because of the animal's favorite food, rabbit, increased in numbers. Now the rabbits have declined again and as a result the lynx is having trouble finding food in the wilderness.

Driven by hunger, they have shed their normal fruitiveness and may hunt in daylight and in areas they normally shun.

While the government doesn't want people killing the lynx unnecessarily, it says wildlife officers are prepared to dispose of any of the animals discovered beyond "reasonably habitual wildlife premises."

Economic Plan In Forefront As House Opens

Attention in First Week Centres on Speech

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament, testing ground of the new Liberal government's 60 days of decision, met today to begin work on a program heavily weighted with economic measures.

Before getting down to work in the first session since the April 8 election which brought the Liberals to power, a round of traditional formalities was observed.

The schedule for today's opening went this way:

10:30 a.m.—Commons meets, elects a speaker. Senate, Commons adjourn.

2:45 p.m. — Senate meets again.

3 p.m.—Commons summoned to Senate.

3:30 p.m.—Chief Justice Robert Taschereau, administrator of Canada reads the Speech from the Throne.

Attention for the first week or so centres on the throne speech outlining the legislative program. Today's formalities are followed by addresses Friday by two freshmen MPs—Pauline Jewett (Northumberland) and Auguste Choquette (Lotbinière) —moving and seconding the traditional address in reply.

GETS CHANCE MONDAY

Opposition leader Diefenbaker sent on a comeback to office, gets his first crack at the government's program Monday. He also has the opportunity of moving a motion of non-confidence.

The government's program will have been well-publicized during the election campaign. Economic measures and efforts to curb soaring what Mr. Pearson has called the strains on Confederation are the keynote.

A new department of industrial development is promised. So is legislation to create two agriculture ministers—one for the east and one for the west.

Over the period of its life, Parliament is to consider measures for low-interest loans for municipal development, an industrial expansion fund and an economic council to aid economic targets. Finance Minister Walter Gordon is expected to bring down a budget about mid-June.

The government is well along the road to setting up a royal commission on biculturalism as the basis for defining problems and recommending solutions in relations between French and English.

PRESSURE PLAY ON SEAWAY TOLLS NOW STARTING

Briefs to Be Given Public Hearings

OTTAWA (CP)—The international pressure play over St. Lawrence Seaway tolls starts in earnest now.

The Seaway Authority of Canada announced Wednesday that it wants to hear ideas on the future toll structure in written submissions as well as at public hearings.

Deadline for the prepared briefs is Sept. 3, with the hearings likely to be held in Ottawa early next fall.

The American Seaway Agency is taking similar steps to sound out public feeling in the United States on the toll question.

Both agencies are required by law to report to their respective governments on the "sufficiency" of seaway tolls to cover operating costs as well as pay off the $475,000,000 capital cost of building the massive international waterway from Montreal to the Great Lakes.

The report must be in governmental hands by July 1, 1964.

HAVE ADMISSION

In the report, the seaway authorities will have to admit that so far the toll charges levied on seaway traffic have failed to produce sufficient revenue to meet the statutory requirements.

Their job will be to propose a way of collecting enough money to run the seaway and amortize the initial cost by the year 2008, the 50-year amortization period set by law.

This is where the pressure play comes in.

Powerful interests already poised in Canada and the U.S. to battle for a toll-free seaway, the same way, groups are mobilized to fight as hard for higher tolls.

In Canada, the Great Lakes Waterways Development Association won the first round of its fight for toll-free canals by persuading the former Conservative government to lift tolls on the all-Canadian Welland Canal.

When the seaway opened in 1959, tolls were levied on the Welland to pay off the $32,000,-

Newest and Most Nonchalant Man in Space Wins Hero's Acclaim

LONDON (AP)—Maj. Gordon Cooper, the newest and most nonchalant man in space, won a hero's acclaim from earthlings today.

Millions of Europeans hailed his epic flight.

The "unimpressed space traveller," one Danish newspaper called him.

Cooper rated a hero's headlines. Newspapers in Britain splashed the details of his ride into space.

The Daily Mirror blanketed its front page with a picture of the spaceman and his rocket and the headline:

"Gordon's so gay on the big ride-round."

"He is a real cool spaceman," reports The Mirror, "and he proved it by having a nap during the countdown while everyone else was tense with excitement."

The feats of Cooper and his colleagues, Russian or American, will one day be ordinary human experience," says The Daily Express.

"But today they are wonderful and the men who perform them uplift the human race by their courage."

Many Europeans stayed up late to watch a midnight television relay from Cape Canaveral showing TV recordings of

MONETARY FUND JOB MAY GO TO CANADIAN

Bank of Canada Governor Named

WASHINGTON (CP) — An other European is likely to succeed Per Jacobsson as managing director of the International Monetary Fund, but the possibility that a Canadian may be offered the job as a compromise candidate should not be ruled out, fund informants suggested today.

The 59-year-old Swedish economist, one of the world's most influential financial silhouettes, died of a heart attack in London May 3. One of his closest and most respected f r i e n d s was Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada.

By tradition, the top fund post, carrying an annual tax-free salary of $40,000, goes to a European because the head of the twin organization—the International Bank for Reconstruction—usually is an American.

There are rumors that a number of European prospects now are being looked over, including Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, deputy governor of the Bank of France.

CHOICE NOT EASY

However, in view of the rivalry between the two European trade blocs—the Common Market and the Outer Seven—selection of a European choice with the common support of all the European powers may be no easy matter.

But in the event of a sharp clash, say, between B r i t a i n and France over a promising candidate, fund informants suggest consideration might swing to a North American as a compromise. Best bet in that event is that the 55-year-old Canadian governor, who helped found the fund, could have the job if he wanted it.

If Rasminsky has said, however, that he is not interested.

Whites, Opposing Biracial Agreement, Boycott Stores

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—A desegregation pact aimed at ending this industrial city's racial unrest has the backing of some of Alabama's most prominent businessmen.

Their names were disclosed Wednesday night amid reports of a budding boycott of stores by white persons opposing the biracial agreement.

Both white and Negro leaders say they will stick to the agreement despite efforts to intimidate white shoppers to boycott downtown merchants.

Negroes, who launched a boycott a year ago in their campaign for desegration, are again the stores, but merchants report fewer white shoppers. The merchants are worried, and some say the city's economic plight, already bad, is becoming more serious.

Commission M a y o r Arthur Hanes and Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) C o n n o r have called on white residents to boycott the downtown merchants in retaliation for the desegregation pact.

A spokesman for a citizens committee said release of the names of 71 persons asked to participate in efforts to solve the city's racial problem was designed to avert further vio-

Expect France to Approve Inter-Allied Nuclear Force

OTTAWA (CP)—France is expected to go along with approval of an inter-allied NATO nuclear force at the alliance's ministerial meeting here next week, diplomatic sources here say.

This force will comprise units already in being: several American Polaris missile submarines in the Mediterranean, British bomber command, tactical air forces of Canada, West Germany, Belgium and The Netherlands—and two French squadrons based in Germany and armed with U.S. nuclear warheads.

This force will have two main purposes: to commit American and British strategic nuclear weapons to European defence; and to co-ordinate the assignment of targets of various nuclear units.

Except for British bomber command, the nuclear warheads will remain under American control.

Competent sources say agreement of the French has been achieved by NATO's undertaking to stress publicly that the new force will simply be an extension of British and American nuclear power.

These sources say the NATO council, which will meet from Wednesday to Friday, will play down the aspect of a new command for NATO and probably make no public reference to the two French squadrons being included.

Handling of the French point of view has been delicate because France is embarked on formation of her own nuclear "force de frappe" and has declined to make a part of a NATO nuclear arm.

Diplomatic sources said the

Duvalier of Haiti Insists He Will Remain in Office

PORT AU PRINCE (AP)—Haiti's dictator-president Francois Duvalier insists he will remain in office despite reports abroad that he is planning to flee his rebellion - threatened country.

"Haiti will continue under my administration," Duvalier told correspondents summoned to his palace Wednesday in an apparent effort to scotch reports he intended to flee.

By showing himself unscathed Duvalier scored a victory over enemies who had sworn to kill him rather than let him begin a new presidential term.

Duvalier's constitutional term of office expired Wednesday, but he declared himself re-elected for six more years after a rigged ballot two years ago. Duvalier's regime plans a orgy in his inauguration May 22, a number which is said to have superstitious meaning for the moon-faced dictator.

Haitians throughout the countryside are being herded into trucks and carted to Port au Prince. By next Wednesday there may be many as 500,000 additional people in the shabby capital.

The people also are being forced to "contribute" to help defray expenses of the inaugural celebration.

"Papa Doc," as he is known to his Negro Haitians, may survive that day, too, but foreign observers of Haiti's troubles give him no more than another year at the helm of his impoverished little nation.

Francois Barbot, once Duvalier's right-hand man, has sworn to kill his former chief and is at large somewhere in Haiti with a band of underground fighters.

The other nations of the hemisphere are solidly opposed to his dictatorship though as yet they have not been able to

AGREE TO LET MINDSZENTY LEAVE HUNGARY

Pope Gets Cardinal To Accept Exile

BUDAPEST (AP)—The Vatican, the United States and Hungary's Communist government were reported to have reached an agreement that will allow Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty to leave for Rome.

High Vatican sources said they expected the 71-year-old Roman Catholic primate of Hungary in Rome in a few days to assume a high Vatican post.

Informants in Budapest reported Wednesday night that long negotiations proved fruitful.

(Reuters News Agency said that Hungarian Premier Janos Kadar left Budapest today for an unknown destination aboard a Soviet airliner. It was believed he was on his way to Moscow for urgent talks with Soviet leaders.)

Freeing of the Cardinal would remove one barrier to resumption of normal diplomatic relations between the United States and Hungary and would improve relations between the Vatican and the Hungarian government.

No information was available on details of the agreement, but it is believed to include other concessions to the Vatican.

The Hungarian Communists sentenced the prelate to life imprisonment in 1949 for alleged high treason. Liberated in the 1956 uprising, he took refuge in the U.S. legation in Budapest when the Russians crushed the revolt and he has been there ever since.

The cardinal for years refused any suggestion of safe conduct out of the country. Instead, he demanded to be exonerated of the charges against him and to be allowed to resume his normal activities as primate of Hungary.

Under canon law, Pope John could not order the cardinal to leave Hungary. But informed church s o u r c e s reported in Rome that the Pope had ordered to "advise" Cardinal Mindszenty to leave if the Hungarian regime would recognize the Holy See's right to appoint Hungarian bishops, admit a church dignitary from Rome to travel freely in the country and guarantee regular and free contact between the Hungarian church and the Vatican.

Whites Back Negroes

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—More than 1,000 Negro students marched on downtown Greensboro Wednesday and tried to integrate two theatres and a cafeteria. About 200 were arrested on charges of trespassing.

Four white students were also arrested. Police said they blocked the line of customers at the cafeteria, refusing to be served unless the Negroes were also served.

Home To Earth In Pacific Ocean, Near Sundown

Reverse Rockets to Be Fired Near Shanghai

By REM PRICE

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper, a superbly-performing space pilot, sped on toward completion of his marathon 22-orbit flight today, heading for a splashdown in the Pacific Ocean.

With astronaut and spacecraft in excellent working order, Mercury Control Centre finalized the good word to Cooper during orbit No. 16 that he had the green light to go all the way.

If there is no emergency hitch, the reverse rockets on Cooper's Faith 7 capsule are to be fired east of Shanghai, China, about 7:03 p.m. EDT and he is to begin a gradual descent to a parachute landing in the Pacific 80 miles southeast of Midway Island.

Touchdown time was scheduled about 7:23 p.m. EDT, 12:23 p.m. midway time.

A large P a c i f i c recovery force, headed by the carrier Kearsarge, waited in the area. The Kearsarge hoped to improve on its record of last Oct. 3, when it had astronaut Walter Schirra on board just 45 minutes after he landed some 9,000 yards from the craft.

Cooper was warned on for the full flight not long after he awakened after a good night's sleep.

TAKES PICTURES

Then he went into action as a camera bug. Over the Indian Ocean he pulled out a 35-millimetre robot still camera with a fast lens to photograph the sodiacal light, a weird glow visible on the horizon in the east before sunrise and after sunset. Scientists hope the color pictures will prove a theory that the phenomena is caused by the sun's rays reflecting off dust clouds.

"Hello down dere! did I take pictures, pictures, pictures!" Cooper exclaimed to communicator Virgil Grissom on the ground at Guaymas, Mex. Then he reported he was turning the capsule 360 degrees on its yaw axis to take the "mit jobbies."

He referred to a series of eight horizon pictures made especially for Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which is studying the possibility of using the horizon as a navigation reference point for spaceships returning from the moon.

The-06-year-old air force major went to sleep around 10 p.m.

Entertainer Dies

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—John L. Till, 77, last surviving member of a show business family that toured Canada's big vaudeville houses at the turn of the century, died here Wednesday.

Mr. Till, born in Philadelphia, started touring with the Marionette show of his parents, John and Josephine, at the age of 12. He served overseas with the 13th regiment in the First World War, entertaining Canadian troops in the trenches with Marionettes.

PAY INCREASES FOR ALL RANKS ARE ANNOUNCED

Boosts Retroactive To Oct. 1st 1962

OTTAWA (CP)—Pay boosts for all ranks in the armed forces except the chiefs of staff, whose salaries are set by the cabinet separately, were announced Wednesday by the government.

The increases range from just under $1 weekly for a private, aircraftsman or ordinary seaman to about $19.60 a week for a rear admiral or his equivalent rank-in the army, a major-general.

A defence department spokesman estimated that the raises, retroactive to last Oct. 1, will cost the government an extra $25,000,000 a year. This would lift the annual bill for military pay and allowances of all kinds to close to $500,000,000.

At the end of March there were 123,694 members of regular forces and 59,678 in the reserve.

The announcement by Associate Defence Minister Lucien Cardin said that besides the increases in basic pay, other boosts will result from revision in the system of trades pay.

CHANGE PROGRAM

In addition, the government also changed the arrangement for "progressive pay" — automatic raises at stated intervals. For example, a sergeant now will get three increases of $60 a year each at two-year intervals, instead of three $36-a-year boosts at three-year intervals.

In still another move, the government has given military legal officers special allowances to "remove the inequalities" be-

Quebec, Politician Thinks Canada May Become Federation of States

Mr. Laporte, during a debate on means of amending the Canadian constitution, told the legislature Wednesday:

"From a preliminary study, the solution which appears most acceptable, probably the only acceptable solution, is a federation of states which would have a great measure of independence.

"It is not impossible, according to some historians, that Canada will move towards a federation of sovereign statues within the next 20 or 30 years.

"Would there be at least 10 states? This is impossible to foresee for the moment. The cradle of Confederation as far as we are concerned is outmoded, but not all the provinces can be ready to become the role of a sovereign state."

Mr. Laporte said that Quebec, as a member of such a federation, could have nearly all the prerogatives of an independent state leaving such things as defence, foreign relatons, customs and monetary control in the hands of the Ottawa government.

"Some people will say that this would be a step towards separatism," said the 43-year-old minister. "I think differently, that it would be a means, perhaps the only one of preventing it."

Pleads Guilty To Joy-Riding Leaving Scene

A convivial outing that started in Bath and progressed to the Deseronto area, ended in Belleville magistrate's court this morning with a 58-year-old man fined $25.

George Leonard Howard pleaded guilty to joy-riding and failing to report an accident.

OPP Constable H. S. Adamson said Howard and an Ottawa salesman met in Bath and went to Tyendinaga Township in the salesman's car on Tuesday.

Howard later took off in the car and failed to return it. The next day the salesman found his damaged automobile in a Napanee garage. Subsequent investigation showed the car had struck a bridge on the York Road, causing about $300 damage.

The car, said the officer, actually was owned by the salesman's company.

"He is still got his job?" queried Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

"No sir, he hasn't," the officer replied.

The magistrate fined Howard $25 for joyriding and $20 plus costs on the accident charge, with a week to pay.

Senior Citizens To Hold Picnic At Cobourg Park

About one hundred members of the Senior Citizens' Club assembled in the Recreation Centre for their weekly and monthly meeting of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson contributed a duet, well rendered solos, accompanied by Mrs. Shirley. Mr. George Gulliver was presented with his commutina and led in old-time tunes and provided music during the lunch period.

The president, C. L. Hyde, announced that the annual picnic for the clubs in the East Central Ontario region would be held in Cobourg Beach Park on July 17, and that two buses would be available to convey all who wished to attend.

The annual convention of the United Senior Citizens of Ontario will be held in London, Ont., on Sept. 4 and 5. The club voted to send two delegates to be chosen at the next regular meeting of the club after the election of the new officers for the coming year, which will be the important item for the first meeting in June.

Cards of thanks were received from several members who have been ill and in hospital.

The members then enjoyed several rounds of progressive euchre and the winners were: Mrs. Storms, Mrs. Forrester, Mrs. Doyle, Mrs. Law, Mrs. Charlton and Mr. J. Sandland. Mrs. Botting was the winner of the door prize draw.

The hostesses of the refreshment committee served the usual lunch.

Two Drowned, Boat Capsizes Near North Bay

NORTH BAY (CP)—Two men were drowned Wednesday when their small boat capsized in the South River near their Trout Creek home about 25 miles south of here.

Dead are Mervin Rich, 26, and his brother Eric, 16. A third man, George Rich, a cousin of the brothers, was rescued after he clung to the overturned boat.

Ontario Provincial Police, called by fishermen who saw George clinging to the boat from a nearby bridge, rescued the survivor. Bodies of the victims were recovered after six hours of dragging operations.

The boat turned over after the propeller on the motor hit a submerged stump.

Work of Society Is Reviewed By President

At Monday's annual meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society, the 45th annual report was presented by the president, G. B. Boyce. The following excerpts provide some information on the work of the society during the last 12 months:

"This has been a satisfying year in many respects. The chief accomplishment has been the operation of the County Museum for another successful season, however, several other projects such as the easy conversion for secondary school students have also been initiated.

"In addition to a tour of Upper Canada Village and two visits to the Hastings County Museum for special displays, there have been four meetings. These included a talk by Mrs. Jeanne Minhinnick on Upper Canada Village; a lecture by Mr. C. W. Smith on "The Role of Guns in Canadian History;" a history of the Con Demill Business College by Miss Ruth Nightingale; and a report on some new leads in the local history by your president.

"Total membership in the historical society for 1963 came to the 300 mark. To date this year, the number of members is down. We can, with your co-operation, we will again reach the 300 mark.

"The efforts of several hard workers should be noted: Tom Ransom for his tireless efforts in all aspects of the Society's work; Mrs. J. Sargent for her several duties, especially as chief curator at the County Museum and program chairman; Mrs. A. E. Bennett for her work as recording secretary and for her assistance at the museum; the other museum curators — Barbara Wesse, Jerry Jenkinson, and my wife; T. Dale Martin, our conscientious treasurer and museum assistant; our membership secretary, F. Bishop; our pinister, Mrs. Egerton Boyce; Rodger Greig, our artistic and technical adviser; the other members of the executive who have helped in many ways — especially Mrs. Jim Bush, Mrs. John English, Miss Hazel Farley, and, Mr. T. G. Wrightmeyer; The Ontario Intelligencer and Radio Station CJBQ for their constant co-operation; the many members and friends who have helped by donating time, money, and material to both the museum and the historical society — the efforts of all these people are sincerely appreciated.

"The Society has continued to publish material relating to this history of Hastings. The most recent pamphlets outline the history of Shannonville, the development of Belleville, and the beginnings of education in the Belleville area.

"We expect that the coming year will be a year of continued advance as we strive further to preserve something of the colorful past of this historic part of Ontario.

Brothers Barred From Driving For Four Months

Two teenage brothers were barred from driving privileges in their parents' consent for four months by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Belleville today.

Ralph Danko, 17, and his 19-year-old brother Brian, both sons of an RCAF warrant officer, pleaded guilty to theft from a car on Trenton air base.

The magistrate first ordered them not to drive until 21, but was allowed as absolutely necessary. However, he revised the sentence when the youths' father protested.

He said he operated as S. collector summer and part at Bracebridge, and it was necessary for at least one of his sons to drive.

"You are a full time employee of the air force aren't you?" Wills asked Warrant officer?" Magistrate Wills retorted.

OPP Constable T. H. Holmes said the youths were caught by air force police removing articles from a parked automobiles to their own car on the base.

TEAM MAY TRAIN

Trenton Community Gardens Board chairman, Daniel Senick, said today that the possibility of the Gardens committee dating a Boston Bruins junior team on a week-long training camp in Trenton is still a possibility from the boa rd's standpoint.

Mr. Senik said that a subcommittee had been appointed by the board to investigate all angles of the case.

The committee will find out the cost of boarding and lodging for the period required; costs of any extra equipment needed to improve the accommodations, ientily to allow for the making of ice; costs of a wood surface by the arena for the week if other rental commitments for the building must be cancelled and the possibility of renting "summer" ice time to other groups in the future.

Until all the facts are known, said Mr. Senik, the board definitely hasn't closed the door on the idea of training the Gardens' ice to the Junior Bruins.

Defence Quotes Crown Attorney, Wins Dismissal

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP)—A defence lawyer quoted an article on criminal law written by the Crown attorney and won a dismissal for his client Wednesday.

A police constable testified that Angus Smith, 38, of Oshawa, was charged with being in care or control of a car while intoxicated; admitted he was the driver of a car which struck a parked car in Oshawa April 20, even though most of his driving was unintelligible.

Terence D. Ley, defence counsel, picked up the Criminal Law Quarterly, and said Crown Attorney Bruce Affleck had written that the admission of a driver could not be used against him if he was in a drunken stupor.

Mr. Affleck agreed with the defence lawyer's submission and the charge was dismissed.

IN THE BAG are about 90 lake trout yearlings, part of a lot of 100,000 being planted in Lake Ontario this year in an effort to restore the trout fishery. Earl Lemke, of the Fisheries Research Station at Glenora and the Department of Lands and Forests Ranger School, compares the temperature of the water in the bag, in which the fish were shipped to the station, with the temperature of the water in the tanks, before transferring the fish.

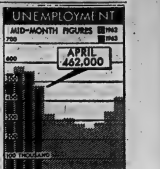
Camera Club Elects Officers

On Wednesday evening, the Bellerville Camera Club held its regular monthly meeting at the Kiwanis Centre and the first item of business was the election of new officers for the coming year.



Officers elected were: president, Earl Yateman; vice-president, and program chairman, Don Askett, secretary, Hedley James, treasurer, John Teltte; ways and means committee chairman, Mike Last and bulletin editor, Al Heard.

Following the election of new officers, Earl Yateman gave instructions on the art of table-top photography.

For the remainder of the evening, members of the club gathered around the table, photographing several objects, including cat's eyes (marbles), glass figurines and a plastic laundry basket.

UNEMPLOYMENT DOWN—Rising summer job opportunities in industry and on the farm resulted in a drop in Canada's unemployment total to 462,000 in mid-April. This was 87,000 lower than the March figure and 23,000 below the April total in 1962.

Graph shows monthly totals, including those without jobs and seeking work and those on temporary layoff, for 1962 and to date this year.

Start Last-Ditch Effort To Restock Lake Ontario With Yearling Lake Trout

A last ditch program to restock Lake Ontario with lake trout will dump a total of 100,000 yearling trout into the lake this year, and the same amount next year. The program, now in progress, is a co-operative venture of the New York State Conservation Department and the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

Lake trout were common in Lake Ontario at the turn of the century and a profitable catch for commercial fishermen. But the yearly take declined with brief recoveries, since the 1924 peak of one-and-a-half million pounds and since 1950 the fish have been considered virtually wiped out. From 1954 to 1961, attempts were made to restock the lake, at the rate of 10,000 to 25,000 fish per year, but the efforts were unsatisfactory. The planted fish appeared to thrive until near adulthood but they died off quickly as they reached spawning age.

TROUBLE UNKNOWN

Nobody knows for sure just what kills the trout. Sea lampreys are considered the main cause in the upper lakes, but there have always been sea lampreys in Lake Ontario, and the lamprey-trout population must have been able to strike a balance. Over-fishing has been suspected, especially with the advent of the more-efficient nylon nets since the end of the war, but there is doubt that fishing is the whole answer. Industrialization of the lakeshore and resulting pollution of Lake Ontario, might be a factor, but the open water of the lake is not considered badly polluted yet.

The fish being planted were raised at the Charlevoix, Mich., hatchery of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and are being planted by Department of Lands and Forests personnel at the Fisheries Research Station, St. Clerons. From Charlevoix to Glenora, the yearling trout are travelling by the largest airlift of its kind ever attempted.

PLACED IN BAGS

At Charlevoix, the fish are being packed into large plastic bags, half filled with water. The bag is then sealed and inflated with oxygen, and two bags of fish are packed in a third bag, stuffed with ice. The third bag is packed into a cardboard carton, for protection during shipment. Each bag contains four pounds of fish — an average of 90 yearlings, and each carton weighs about 60 pounds. A Canso flying boat, brought down from Mooseonee, Ont., carries about 100 cartons per trip to the Fisheries Research Station, at Glenora.

After the four-hour flight, the fish spend a night in tanks at the station, before transfer to tanks aboard the station's tug, "Namegrush," for planting. Planting site is about half way between Charity Shoal and Main Duck Island, in Lake Ontario.

SHARE COSTS

Cost of the transportation and planting of the fish is being shared equally by the Province of Ontario and New York State. The fish are supplied through a pool arrangement, operated by the Great Lakes Fisheries Commission. By agreement, Canada and the United States pool their hatchery stock for Great Lakes planting and the Commission handles the distribution.

The first of the fish now being planted will be of adult size in about two years, and they may start turning up in whitefish nets about that time. It will be by accident if they are caught — it is illegal to sell lake trout caught in Lake Ontario. None of this year's planting will also fall prey to lampreys, in about two years, when the fish are large enough to attract lampreys. But male lake trout don't mill until they are about four years old, and the females spawn at about five years. The problem now is to see how many of the 200,000 yearlings being planted will live to spawning age.

Hasty Pee Vets To Honor Late Padre

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Association received permission to instal a stained glass memorial window in the Protestant Chapel, School of Infantry at Camp Borden, in honor of Lt.-Col. F. Goforth, M.C., the beloved Padre of the Hasty "Fs." A committee was set up to look after the purchase of a suitable window and now it is completed. On Sunday, June 2nd, the window will be dedicated to the Padre's memory.

It is hoped that all Hasty "Fs" who can possibly do so will attend this service to pay their respects to the late Padre as all know he is deserving of this tribute to his memory.

Through the kind co-operation of the C.O. School of Infantry all will be able to have lunch together. It will be most appreciated that if you are going, you would drop a card to Pete Cottle, 381 Wolsey St., Peterborough, as he has to let the C.O. know how many to get lunch for.

In Belleville it has been suggested that there would be enough going to charter a bus. It would be a much more pleasant way to travel, than in a bunch of cars and the boys would have a chance to get reacquainted again. Anyone interested will be able to get bus tickets from Harold Dreeup at the ANAF club room, in Belleville and get all details. The bus only holds 37/so it will be first come first served.

If you drive your own car, you must have proof of liability insurance to drive in Camp Borden.

Make your plans now to attend the Dedication of the Padre Goforth Memorial at the Protestant Chapel, Camp Borden. The date: June 2nd.

Russian Spy Executed

LONDON (Reuters) — Oleg Penkovsky, convicted as a Russian spy for the United States and Britain, has been executed, the official Soviet news agency Tass said today.

The agency said Penkovsky, who was tried with British businessman Greville Wynne in Moscow last week, was shot.

Penkovsky, 44, a Soviet scientific worker, was sentenced to death for selling secrets to the U.S. and Britain in the trial which ended Saturday.

Wynne, also 44, was sentenced to eight years in prison.

Well at Least What He Gets Is Not Baloney

LONDON (AP) — "Why can't we have something different?" asked Derek Gaisford when his wife gave him lamb chops again.

"What would you like?" she asked.

"Sausages."

Gaisford now has eaten sausages for 11 months— his wife bet him a pound he couldn't eat them every day.

"I'd always liked sausages," said Gaisford, "but I didn't realize just how much I liked them until I started having them at home morning and evening."

If he eats sausages for another month, he wins.

German House Approves Pact With France

BONN (AP)—The lower house of the West German parliament overwhelmingly approved today the French-German friendship treaty providing for co-operation between the longtime enemies.

The treaty now goes to the upper house—the Bundesrat—where approval is certain.

Chancellor Adenauer, in a brief speech before the vote, hailed the treaty as a great work of reconciliation for all future time.

Echo From the Past

Among the tides in the affairs of men, are there cyclic pre-occupations with certain problems and, accompanying such tides, is there a pendulum-like swing in public reaction to these problems?

This question suggests itself after reading the report on a speech by Dr. John Fotheringham, Toronto psychiatrist, to the annual conference of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies.

Dr. Fotheringham suggested that because of an increase in apparent and real cases of mental retardation, the day may come when governments will control marriages, conceptions and births.

Thirty years ago there would have been nothing very startling about such a statement. One of the bugbears of the day was the alleged high birth rate of couples of low intelligence. Times were hard, jobs were scarce and money was even scarcer. Under circumstances like these, many intelligent people delayed marriage or, if they were married, avoided bringing into the world children for whom they were fearful they could not provide the necessities of life. No such restraints, it was felt, were practised by those of low intelligence. Some alarmists painted a fearful picture of a future in which the morons would outnumber the normal people by two or three to one.

Then came the war, with the customary upsurge of weddings between servicemen and the the sweethearts they were leaving, perhaps forever. Those remaining at home were working steadily. The birthrate climbed. Since the new parents included many of the country's healthiest people, physically and mentally, the spectre of the country being over-run by morons disappeared.

In recent years, however, public attention has once again been focused on the problem of mental retardation. This time, though, there has been an entirely different approach. Stress has been laid on the fact that a mentally retarded child can be born to parents both of whom are highly intelligent. As the shrouds of secrecy have been ripped away, people have learned of many mentally retarded children who have bright, normal brothers and sisters. The stress has not been on preventing reproduction of children by parents of low intelligence, but on discovering ways of preventing mental retardation cropping up in families of healthy, bright offspring.

Now along comes Dr. Fotheringham suggesting that the government may have to control marriages and conceptions in order to check the growth of mental retardation. Of what use will control be, when, it seems, any normally intelligent couple may produce a mentally retarded child?

The only reasonable explanation seems to be that viewpoints of the institute and of recent years are both true but that neither presents the whole truth. Dr. Fotheringham makes sense only if, besides the mentally retarded children born to normal parents, there are also many retarded children born to parents of low intelligence.

Probably this would seem self-evident to experts in the field, but we do wish that experts would not so often take for granted that their knowledge is shared by the general public. We would like to get a comprehensive statement on this problem which we could feel assured was the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

This Is the Berries!

Young Canada is very busy these days, preparing for final examinations. Even so, we suspect that the younger generation will be more than willing to take time off from studies to co-operate with the National Dairy Council in a nation-wide crusade. The Council has sponsored a "Fresh Strawberry Ice Cream Festival." Being nothing if not ambitious, the dairymen have not settled for a mere "day" or even a "week" but have appropriated two full months, May and June. During this period the Council wants everybody to eat as much "fresh strawberry" ice cream as possible.

As we said, that is the kind of a cause for which Young Canada is always willing to sacrifice. Indeed, the only complaint may be that half of May has flitted by before we apprised the young folks of their plain duty. We plead extenuating circumstances—the Dairy Council's publicity men, complete with ice cream, were late in getting around to this office. As partial recompense for two wasted weeks, we hereby ask Dad to remember, when the young fry plead for a contribution which will help them all to cause, that this may be a tax-deductible expenditure. If enough cream is iced and combined with fresh strawberries, there will not be so much available to be churned into butter and sweetened with a subsidy.

Unpleasant 'Surprises' Face Taxpayers as House Opens

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — . . . well, there it is "Day 25" . . . and only 35 more to go until those "Blazing Days of Dynamic Decision" run out, with Prime Minister Pearson's "Action Countdown" reaching the zero hour of "Day Sixty."

Today, May 16, with the new Parliament opening, should have been "Day One," with 80 still to go before tell-tale "Day Sixty."

Because only now, with Parliament back in business, can the real "action" actually start.

Previously, most of the "dynamic Decision" was confined to appointments, all the way down the ranks from cabinet ministers to confidential messengers.

That Prime Minister Pearson got 94 days ahead of himself in counting down to "Day Sixty" he can charge against his own exuberant enthusiasm.

Hopefully, a cool, more calculating Mr. Pearson will now be able to put his own self-imposed "Action" clock, now out, by most pack a lot of difficult and unpleasant decisions.

Most painful will be the one, even now in the final making, for the Bombardier which Finance Minister Gordon has promised for June.

These, almost beyond question, will involve many of the "unpleasant measures," as he termed them, which Finance Minister, during the election campaign, warned would be necessary "to put the government and the nation on a financially sound basis.

While nothing, theoretically, is so secret, in government affairs, as a budget, every administration—and the present one—for its own self-protection, rather financially always tries to warn in advance of what is in the financial wind.

It is down from what the trade knows as "informed speculation," a politically polite term for "leak."

Nothing specific, of course, becomes known even unofficially in advance, except that the shape of things to come financially is allowed to become vaguely apparent.

And for taxpayers, this time the prospects are bleak.

HARD TIMES

Finance Minister Gordon, perhaps as part of this process of pre-conditioning for the tough budget, has proclaimed that Liberal financial policy is not an end to summoning deficits that have colored the national accounts so deeply and darkly since the past six years, and a bargaining, again, of balanced Budgets.

But, said the budget deficits, and they have run into an accumulated $2 billion odd, the Old Age Pensions and the Unemployment Insurance Fund, both in deep financial trouble, will have to be baled out.

So the "informed speculation," as it is termed, on the opening day of the new Parliament, is for such "unpleasant measures" as a sales tax "of a rather financially chilling variety."

The guessperts are focussing in on increased personal income tax, and the imposition of sales or specific taxes on such consumer services as electricity, long distance telephone calls, hydro.

This would scarcely break new financial ice ground, for, in years past, there have been levies on both electricity and long distance phone service.

Paste this in your hat, too. For long years, through both the Mackenzie King and St. Laurent regimes, it was standard political practise to raise the immediate pre-election spirits so that they conveniently could be cut just before the election.

Cynical?

Of course, but practicable, too. For taxpayers and voters seem to have remarkably short memories.

And remember, the Prime Minister promised publicly, some "unpleasant measures," so who should be surprised?

Love Allows Us to Admit Our Faults

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Apart from all other considerations, the deep psychological reason that we need someone to love is that we can freely confess our faults and our defects only to someone who acknowledges our loveability.

When people flee tyranny and persecution, and set up a community of their own, they do not permit any more freedom to their own dissidents than they themselves had been permitted in the past; with one exception, the religious settlers in the New World were just as harsh and tyrannical toward their heretics as the despots they fled from. What most people want is not freedom, but orthodoxy of their own sort.

The layman's idea of rigorous proof is not when she is in the right quickly forfeits her confidence in her intelligence, but when she loses her superficial charm with the man to counter-attack; for silence on the part of the woman is a much more effective weapon of domestic combat than harangue.

Speaking of the sexes, secret lovers give themselves away more by avoidance than by engagement. A lawyer answered a long time ago: "A woman with eyes only for one person, or with eyes always averted from him, creates exactly the same impression."

It is relatively easy for us to detect when others are bad from good, and hard for us to be tolerant of them; what is much harder to detect when we ourselves are bad from good, to forgive, and to be intolerant of ourselves for presenting this plausible counterfeit of virtue.

The youth's quest for self-knowledge is so tormenting and fruitless because self-knowledge cannot be obtained alone, but only with another; we cannot know ourselves until we have disclosed ourself to another and see our reflection in eyes that understand, and forgive.

The moralizer who is so scandalized by "obscenity" everywhere would do well to ponder the remark by a true moralist, Pascal: "Obscenity! You cannot receive a shock unless you have an electric affinity for that which shocks you."

The world of politics today is a full generation behind the world of physics. The significant "race" of our time is not the arms-race between nations but the "slingshot" between our political practices and our potentialities for destruction, on both sides of the curtain.

'Truth Smoke' In Bulgaria

Wall Street Journal

For the Bulgarian citizen who may fear he has been smoking too much, the Communist government has come up with a solution. It's something called "Atrotabak" cigarets. "These new cigarets," says the announcement, "have a pleasant flavor, are quite harmless and help in the curing of bronchial asthma, duodenal ulcer, Buerger's disease, high blood pressure and a number of other illnesses."

Though the cigarets contain no nicotine, they do contain atropine, hyoscyamine and scopolamine. And scopolamine, commonly its curative powers, is widely used as a "truth" drug; under its influence, anyone is likely to babble his innermost thoughts. Which may cause some free-thinking purfers to ponder the wisdom of changing brands.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

May 16th, 1938.

A paragraph from London reporting the death of George Eaton-Grayer, 29, designer of Canada's Great Seal, reminded us we'd never paid much attention to the impression it makes when applied to official documents. So we scouted around the Department of State Secretary of McLarty, Keeper of the Seal, and elsewhere and got this information.

A new seal is made on the death of a sovereign. The present one, a cumbersome affair that weighs like an ordinary second letter-press was first used January 25, 1940, by the late Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, then acting State Secretary. The seal is kept in a vault in the Secretary of State Department, and Dr. E. H. Coleman, Undersecretary of State, says it is used almost every day for proclamation has the seal applied and it goes on all commissions of appointment, its keepers Senators and Judges.

Sir Edgar Quinte district students were successful in winning their degrees in Queen's University, it was revealed by publication of the complete list. Two Belleville students were included in the list, Louis Maxwell Wise, B.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wise, Colman Street won his Master of Arts degree in chemistry while John Robert Carther, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carther of Chatham Street won his B.A. degree. Other successful district students were: Earl Edwin Blake, B.A. of Bloomfield; Harold Max Burgess of Wooler; Phyllis Marion Hough of Napanee and Verna Maud Wilson of Trenton who was also B.A. degrees.

May 16th, 1933.

Farmers protect their orchards from Raiders. As the unusual custom the farmers in the district posted themselves over the weekend at the entrance of their fruit orchards near the highways in an attempt to guard them from the annual invasion of "nature lovers," who each year trespass and pick in bloom-laden branches, causing hundreds of dollars damage. In some instances the farmers were powerless to stem the tide, their evidence in the shape of broken and bare trees, robbed of their branches stand on many farms near the tree-strippers. Just west of the east of the city, a farmer stalked his orchard with shotgun in hand. He apprehended a man, who was left on the highway near the fence, while the party worked at the job of tearing limbs from a blossoming apple tree, and seized by the owner at the orchard. Upon the return of the owners of the car the former made no charge for the damage before he allowed them to take possession of the automobile and proceed on their way. The worst raids on orchards were in Prince Edward County.

To Your Good Health

Some Peptic Ulcers Cured By Freezing Treatment

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is your opinion of the method of treating peptic ulcers that I have recently heard and read about? Where is the nearest hospital equipped to do this? — I. G.

Yes, I've heard about it, and discussed it.

It is a new technique and an imaginative one. But it is not a quick and easy way of curing everybody's ulcers.

There are indications for the use of this method, chiefly ulcers which bleed, or cause intractable pain.

It should not be used on just any ulcer. The freezing treatment has to be properly performed or there can be complications. It requires both specialized skill and equipment. Consequently it is not inexpensive.

On the average, it is not yet known how long results can be expected to last, and neither can it possibly be known, until some years of experience are available, how often the procedure can be repeated.

Perhaps we could compare it, philosophically anyway, with drastic measures used to make the patient shed some weight, but don't teach him how to keep it off permanently.

Thousands upon thousands of ulcers have been healed as a result of conventional treatment, and in the process patients have learned a few basic things such as how to live more sensibly.

Tip-not opposed to new and better ways of solving our health problems. I am, however, distressed at the idea that everything can be made easy.

Cecil: Life isn't like that.

I know that some doctors (and not without reason) have fought against advocates of novel methods which have minimized the dramatic aspects but have not pointed out the limitations.

I think these new discoveries should be pursued, but with reasonable restraint.

The freezing technique is an example. It has been effective in cases which have defied simpler treatment, for a variety of reasons, should be tried first.

Yes the question of "where is the nearest hospital equipped to do this?" I beg off. "I. G. lives in a metropolitan area. The doctor treating it, surely can tell him — and also decide whether such treatment is warranted.

Or if "I. G." does not have a peptic ulcer, but is getting the prayed conventional treatment for ulcers — why not?

Dear Dr. Molner: You wrote that exercise is good for people with high cholesterol. Would dancing be harmful? I am 60 and have hardening of the arteries. — M.H.

Exercise is one of several conditions involved. Loss of weight, diet and medication are others.

Cholesterol doesn't directly have any bearing on the amount of exercise you can take. If one has a heart condition, certain exercise might be inadvisable. So ask your doctor about the dancing.

Worried: No, there is no danger of a man with cancer of the prostate passing the disease on to his wife.

Of all the problems that pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment for this pest, write to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. University students starting a course in shoeing horses, for interest in riding is spreading in the east and in the interior, president J. F. Cogger of the Arabian Horse Association of BC reports there are 22,000 horses in BC.

No doubt there are many technical points to be learned about the shoeing of a horse.

But we like to imagine the bewilderment of the mighty smith, "with the iron hands," if he were asked to compete for a diploma in the farrier's art.

Somewhere, a certificate should be the warning that being "fit for the visit of a nail a shoe was lost. . . ."

An Imperial order-in-council was passed 82 years ago today — in 1871 — authorizing the admission of British Columbia to the Dominion of Canada. Vancouver Island had been annexed to the colony of British Columbia in 1866 but it became clear that a wider union was necessary to save the united colony from economic disaster. Negotiations for union with Canada were pushed and the union became effective in July, 1871.

1770 — Marie Antoinette married Louis XVI.

1875 — An earthquake in Venezuela and Colombia killed an estimated 16,000 persons.

Old Arctic Ruins Found

Ottawa Journal

This summer an Ottawa archaeologist, Mr. W. E. Taylor of the National Museum, will examine the ruins of an Eskimo building believed to be almost as old as the Pyramids of Egypt.

It stood near the rim of the Central Arctic, nearly 2,000 miles north of Winnipeg, on the Cormick Inlet of Melville Island. The ruins were first examined by Mr. W. E. Brown of the Mines and Technical Services Geographical Branch who has been active in research on the polar continental shelf.

Mr. Brown found charcoal in the ancient hearths, two stone spearheads and the remains of a stone trap. The Carbon 14 age test of the charcoal will show how accurate is the estimate that the ruins are between 3,000 and 4,000 years old. This is very old for the Arctic although Mr. Taylor says that remains already has Eskimo tools and carvings from about 1500 BC.

Archaeological evidence has been substantial. Two decades ago it was often assumed that Eskimo culture had come from Asia in the Bering Strait region, but on this continent 20,000 years ago. Now it is established that pioneers of prehistoric ancestor of Indians, made his appearance nearer 33,000 years ago.

Eskimos came later and their spreading occupation of the North may be not much than 4,000 years old. This would make the venturesome band which pushed across the snow and ice to Melville Island among the first humans in this difficult territory.

They were not the furthest North Eskimos. Traces of their kinsmen have been found on Northern Ellesmere Island but the Melville Island ruins offer evidence of their far journeys to the West.

The Eskimos raised no massive monuments as did the Egyptians and, because they left no writings, no Rosetta Stone will ever be found to give a key to hieroglyphics as in Egypt. However, the flagstone floor they laid in that old house on Melville Island will be lifted this summer as reverently as if a Pharaoh's tomb were being opened.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Guest speakers from other parts of this country are always offered their travelling expenses by the organization inviting them, and sometimes the speaker accepts them. In some cases professional speakers who otherwise would be swamped with invitations require a fee as well as their expenses: if the demand is their chief concern, perhaps they simply raise the fee out of reach of any but the larger and better-heeled organizations.

But in the friendly world of clubs and societies, there circulates around the country a band of generous public speakers who are willing to entertain in return for only their expenses. The custom then is for the organization to give a small presentation to the speaker as a souvenir and thank you. Usually a desk set, a cuticle box, or a desk set of pen and pencil.

"I wish," said one of these fellows, as I drove him out to the airport after the meeting, "they would quit giving things like this. I must have ten or fifteen silver cigarette boxes. What they ought to do, if they want to do something really nice, is give a box of flowers to my wife, thanking her for the loan of her husband.

Sales and Ad Club Closes Season With Gala Night Of Formality and Fun

Formality; Fun; Neither Forced.

That over-me-shoulder epigram might well be the motto for Belleville's most thriving social organization — if that self-same organization could be so readily described.

On its letterheads its reverend to as the Belleville Sales and Ad Club. On second glance it is more than that. It also is probably the only most go-ahead social group in the contemporary meaning of the word as it was in annual high light last night.

The Belleville Sales and Ad Club was formed nearly 15 years ago. Today its popularity is such it has been forced to declare a closed membership — but it is that membership that is really significant.

The club is composed of a cross-section of the city's enterprising businessmen, ranging from grocteria operators to radio and newspaper advertising men. Hence it directly affects, as no other club does, the day-to-day living of Belleville's citizens. Yet, the nicest thing is that it not only realizes its responsibility, but lives up to it — as witnessed by its large membership.

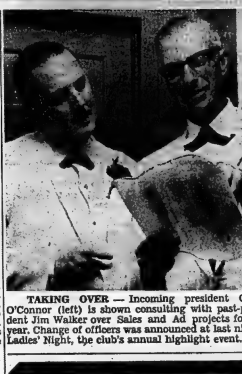
The club's secret — not hitherto publicly disclosed — may well lie in its adaptability, the combining of serious projects with spontaneous sociability. To recpat, nowhere was this better in evidence than last night when the club held its annual Ladies' Night — top event of its season — at the Club Commodore.

NAME EXECUTIVE

At that event, the club introduced its new executive, with their plans for the coming season, held a reception, banquet and a dance.

Perhaps the keynote to the whole thing was struck by its entertainment at the event. On stage were the Four Romeos, partners to the CBC's Juliette Show. These combined the spirit of fun and seriousness in their selections — so well they were given two encores.

So well did they indicate an encore for the Belleville Sales and Ad Club in coming years.



And, for a by-the-way, the new executive introduced last night were: Jerry O'Connor, president; James Walker, past-president and directors as follows: Don Boyle, Fred Deacon, Armand Duffy, Bud Gill, Gerry Hyde, Wally Partridge, Bill McBride and Bill Slade.

WINNERS OF PRIZES

The major prize, a ladies' wardrobe which included hat, shoes, purse and jewellery set, was won by Mrs. James Thompson. Mrs. Douglas Stork won an "outdoor living room," consisting of a patio, lawn chairs, picnic table, barbecue and accessories, outdoor planter and plants and chaise lounge.

Winners of other prizes were Mrs. E. Whiteman, Mrs. Noble Mahood, Mrs. George Hume, Mrs. Dick Doherty, Miss W. Mahoney, Mrs. Mame O'Connor, Mrs. Don Stanton, Mrs. Mac White, Mr. Golda Fitzgibbon, Mrs. Frank Laing, Miss L. O'Connell, Mrs. G. Wishart, Miss Margaret Blaind, Mrs. Don McKinney, Mrs. Tom Neill, Mrs. Bruce Lynch, Mrs. Bob Preston and Mrs. Don Boyce.

Fifteen long playing records were given as spot dance prizes.

Kiwanis Club Completes 40 Years of Service in City

This year the Belleville Kiwanis Club commemaorates forty years of service to its community and district. Four decades ago on May 16, 1923, the club was chartered under the sponsoring guidance of the Kingston Kiwanis Club.

Kiwanis does not identity itself to one single, easily identified welfare purpose. Its efforts are directed to many facets of community life allowing members to grow in their concept of the duties of the individual citizen.

The faithful adherence of Belleville Kiwanians to this ideal is reflected in the pages of a history of their club compiled and edited by past president, Taylor K. Franklin.

In tais compact concise forty-page edition, Mr. Franklin has done a magnificent job. It is a faithful accurate history of the club since its inception with no milestone left unturned, no interest unturned along itr forty years of community effort.

The history records the many community, enterprises of the club since its initial effort of "painting city hydrants" through the gamut of achievement which included sports, many sponsor ships, the Kiwanis playgrounds, welfare clinic, the establishment of the popular Kiwanis Centre, the Kiwanis camp and establishment of Key Clubs among others.

The widespread efforts of the club included high-class public entertainment. Its variety show "Pack Up Your Troubles" and a power boat regatta rated highly in this field. It brought such international celebrities as Gracie Fields and the late George Formby here.

Mr. Franklin has illustrated the history with timely and important club personalities and incidents.

Kiwanians justifiably glowed with a sense of pride when they read the outstanding record of their history packaged admirably with picture and story. It is a credit to Mr. Franklin and those who assisted him in its production and publication. The year book was published by the Commercial Printing Department of the Ontario Intelligencer.

The history or "Year Book" as its front page announces was presented to Kiwanians and guests at the Forlieth Anniversary Banquet held on May 3rd.

None So Blind as Those Who Won't Wear Glasses

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am writing to you in hope a close friend of mine will see my letter. To put it realistically, I should say I hope someone will see it and call it to her attention. This is the problem — she doesn't see a darned thing but she's too vain to wear glasses.

The woman is in her late 40's, very good-looking, and could easily pass for 35, if she didn't have deep furrows in her forehead and crow's feet around her eyes, which, of course, are the result of years of squinting.

She also has a reputation as a snob which is undeserved. The woman passes up people on the street right an dlife because she doesn't see them.

Please, Ann, a few lines in your column may encourage these foolish people to get the help they need. Thank you. — MRS. 20-20 WITH GLASSES.

DEAR MRS. 20-20 — Here is the letter. I hope someone reads it to your friend. Glasses these days are so smart, many a girl has faked myopia.

Well-designed specs often add to a person's appearance. And incidentally, some aging matrons look years younger in glasses because the frames hide the pouches under the eyes. And for those who have an aversion to glasses, there are contact lenses.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 18 years old and I have been married for two months. My husband lost his job the same week we were married. I took on a night job in addition to my 8-hour day shift because we owe on a car, appliances, furniture, clothing and he was up to his neck in debt before we married.

I get only four or five hours sleep at night and when I'm awake I'm on the go every minute. I believe my husband is really trying to find work but things are tough in this town and he hasn't had any luck.

I'm not complaining about his unemployment, but rather that he refuses to do anything around the apartment to help me. He won't shop for groceries or straighten up the place or even start supper.

When I get home exhausted, I have to cook, clean and do the washing and ironing. If I'm expecting too much from him please let me know. I will take your advice. — HANDS FULL.

DEAR FULL — Eighteen years old, married two months and off to a lousy start. You could have waited a while for this deal.

That husband of yours should be helping straighten the apartment, he should be doing the marketing, the cooking and anything else which might make your life easier. Any woman who has proven her willingness to go the extra mile, as you have, deserves all the help she can get.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Several months ago my husband and I entertained a couple in our home. When they left, the woman said, "We had a lovely time. And now you must come to see us sometime."

My husband has been nagging me ever since to go visit these people. I keep telling him we'll go when we get an invitation. He insists we have been invited and repeats th "Come and see us sometime" line.

I have told him repeatedly that I don't consider this an invitation but he claims I am thin-skinned and too formal.

If I am wrong about this I wish you woul distill me. If my husband is wrong, please tell him so he will get off my back. Thank you. — NOT SURE.

DEAR NOT — "Come and see us sometime" is a polite phrase equivalent to "How are you." About 95% of the people who ask "How are you?" don't really care. And the same goes for people who say "Come and see us sometime."

A meaningful invitation includes a specific day and time.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them in to her in care of this newspaper.

St. Michael's P.C. Plans Future Events

The May meeting of St. Michael's Parish Council of the C.W.L. was held on Monday evening. The president, Mrs. J. R. Rashotte, gave a warm welcome and conducted the business.

Mrs. H. Brown (convener of civic action) in her report, mentioned the coming "tag" day. Mrs. J. Lumsden is overall convener.

Mrs. F. R. Ross announced the V.O.N. tea, and asked the members to attend.

Plans were discussed for a garden tea to be held in June, at the home of Mrs. Ed Logan.

In the absence of Mrs. Donaldson, Mrs. Rashotte asked everyone to remember the rummage sale to be held in the near future.

Mrs. J. R. Rashotte, Mrs. J. Sheridan, Mrs. J. Whalen will attend the diocesan convention in Prescott.

Mrs. T. C. Young will be convener of Girl Guides and Mrs. P. J. Geary, convener of press and publicity for 1963-64.

Mrs. B. E. Burley gave an inspiring talk on the history of the C.W.L. of Canada and the duties of the various officers and members.

The members were enlightened by a film showing the work and way of life of the White Sisters of Africa. There was an interesting display of handwork done by the natives of their mission. The Sister's talk was most enjoyable.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY FOR MAY

Officially, the points will disappear from the tops of our heads this spring. Those teased, worried and tortured hair styles, which have reigned supreme for the last three years, will at last meet defeat at the hands of competent hair stylists, in place of the pointed-head look, the rounded look is now "in." The hair is lifted from the head, smoothed on top to produce a neat, but not exaggerated circle affect. The sides are only slightly puffed, to frame the face, and the width of the look will vary to suit each individual face. Hair spray will still be needed to control the top layer of hair and to preserve even these simple styles. The lengths of the new coiffures will range from the short (two inches) gamin Cleopatra type to the almost shoulder-length fashion, so popular and so untidy in the 1920's. All types of bangs, from skimpy, wispy ones to full dramatic sweeps are part of the rounded look.

HIGH CROWNED MILLINERY

Canada's milliners are cheering this latest inspiration of the hair stylists, because the latest high-crowned millinery fashions will not interfere with one hair on the new rounded head of fashion. In fact, the hats themselves appear to be extensions of the new silhouette. Crowns of

The styling is sophisticated, with no "little girl" touches. These same tiny gals tell me they have trouble finding hosiery in 27 and 28-inch lengths and hats in smaller head sizes than the standard 22½ inches.

If you fall into the Pee Wee classification do a little searching for these new Junior Petites —you'll like them.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this paper.

WEDDING

GARBUTT — ARMAND

PICTON — The Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, was the scene of a lovely wedding at three o'clock, Saturday, May 11, 1963 when Sharon Michelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Armand, 346 Main St., Picton, became the bride of John Richard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Garbutt, Scarborough, Ont. Canon Robert B. Wright officiated. White shasta and daisy pompons with yellow chrysanthemums decorated the high altar. The nave was adorned by tall standards of yellow mums and white gladioli while dracene ferns and white potted mums banked the altar rail.

Traditional wedding music was played by the organist, Mr. Monte Shannon, with "Sanctus," "Ave Verum," and the "Mozart Mass" as selections, during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a lovely picture as she entered the church. Her gown was an original model, designed and created by Tomira and was made of pure silk crystalline. The straight front was attached with Alencon lace from the neck, forming a spray which extended to the skirt. The double-boxed and inverted pleats from the sides to the back formed a graceful chapel train. At the back of the bodice a handmade rose, matching that on the veil, topped the back of the pleats. The neckline was scooped and circled by the same lace. Her long illy-pointed sleeves were fastened at the wrists by self-covered button cuts. A circular veil of imported tulle illusion was appliqued with Alencon lace and held in place by a handmade rose of the same material as her dress. She carried a colonial bouquet of mauve orchids grown by a friend and tawny gold roses with trailing ivy.

Miss Elizabeth Walmsley of Picton, was maid of honor, while Miss Anne Wharrie of Ottawa and Miss Judy Carter, of Picton, were bridesmaids.

Little Heather Duncan, of Toronto, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. The dresses of the senior attendants were made on similar lines of peau de soie, sleeveless with round neckline and slightly flared skirts. Over them was worn imported lace fashion with elbow-length sleeves and buttoned in the back with a single button at the neck. The rich deep shade of the maid of honor's dress and the dark green of the bridesmaids' dresses, along with the yellow silk dress with tiered ruffled skirt and puffed sleeves worn by the flower girl, complemented the bride's all-white ensemble. The maid of honor wore a circlet of white Shasta 'mums in her hair to match those carried in her bouquet which also included Regal Gold roses. The bridesmaids had circlets of yellow Shasta 'mums and carried similar flowers. The flower girl's head bandeau was of Pinocchio 'mums and she carried a basket of similar 'mums and white Shasta 'mums.

Mr. Robert Garbutt, of Highland Creek, was groomsman, while the ushers were: Mr. Reg. Garbutt, Jr., Highland Creek and Mr. James Garbutt, of Scarborough.

The reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, where arrangements of white and yellow 'mums, snapdragons, and carnations enhanced the rooms.

The bride's mother chose a sheath of imported pure silk in tones blue with flower hat to match. Her blue accessories and corsage of pink Sensation roses. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in navy blue silk with three-quarter length matching coat, white hat and accessories and corsage of cream Cymbidium orchids.

The bride's table was covered with a handmade cloth and centred with the wedding cake flanked by white tapers in candelabra and vases of golden Rapture roses. Servers were: Misses Carole Roblin, Betty Anne Anderson, Margot Publow, Picton; Lorna Hilder, New Liskeard; Elaine Pearce of Wallaceburn.

For travelling to Bob Lake, the bride donned a dusty pink suit with three-quarter length sleeves and matching fox fur cuffs, a large hat in matching tones, navy coat and accessories with corsage of lavender orchids. The couple motor Friday to attend graduation ceremonies at the O.A.C. in Guelph, later flying to Western Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Garbutt will reside in Toronto.

Minerva Chapter Sponsors Country Store, Spring Tea

The Masonic Temple, Foster Avenue, was a bower of beauty yesterday afternoon for the country store and spring tea sponsored by the Minerva Chapter, O.E.S., No. 138, under the fine convenership of Mrs. Dorothy Tugnett, assisted by Frances Mavner.

The theme of spring with its fragrant blooms was much in evidence, particularly in the vestibule which was a riot of color with huge baskets containing yellow chrysanthemums, daffodils and tulips with pink tulips and pink snapdragons also arranged in large white pots interspersed with yellow 'mums and white gladioli. Here also was an eye-catching display of brilliant red and yellow tulips, foregrounded with four welcoming bunnies which were cleverly designed and made from plastic bags. Those responsible for this elaborate decor were Rosella Clancy and Carrie Oliver.

ATTRACTIVE TEA ROOM

Colorful potted cowslips and graceful ferns outlined the white rail entrance to the tea room where the hostesses, Kay Bushell, A.M., and Edna Dobbs, PDDGM, invited the guests for a cup of tea. The focal point of interest here was the attractive tea table with its white linen damask cloth centred with an artistic arrangement of white and blue tinted 'mums, white snapdragons mingled with greenery. Pale blue and white tapers set in lacey collared tri-branch silver candelabra and the sparkling tea services added to this lovely scene.

The guest tables were equally attractive with lace-edged or embroidered luncheon cloths centred with delicate crystal rose bowls holding a solitaire blue tinted chrysanthemum. The conveners of the tea room were Georgina Rendell and Kay Ewing.

TEA POURERS

Those who poured tea during the afternoon were: Mrs. Marian Heath, D.D.G.M.; Mrs. Marian Prest, W.M., Marmora Chapter; Mrs. Margaret McKeever, P.D.D.G.M.; Mrs. Ila Carlaw, W.M., Campbellford Chapter; Mrs. Lottie Gibson, W.M., Wellington Chapter; Mrs. Edna Broad, P.D.D.G.M.; Mrs. Isabel Solomon, W.M., Colborne Chapter; Mrs. Myrtle Cross, W.M., Bellerville Chapter No. 55; Mrs. Edna Dobbs, P.D.D.G.M.; Mrs. Hazel Wilson, PM.; Mrs. Max Finkle, P.M.; and Mrs. Margaret Hunt, P.M.

Those serving the dainty goodies at various times throughout the afternoon were: Ila Calvert; Margaret Stalker; Frances Cole; Jane Cummins; Bev Cummins; Jean Stout; Margaret Hune; Elizabeth Hallam; Florence Cathcart; Isobel Woodley; Hazel McNevin; Eva Wotton; Viola Greatrix; Eva Thrasher; Janet Williams; Elsie Humphreys; Eva Heath; Laura Hyde; Hazen Wilson; Arlene Ashbury; and Nellie McBurney.

The kitchen convener was Marjoris Collyer assisted by Jess Bushell, Bea Haggerty and other members of the group.

The various sales tables all covered with white cloths and decorated with fairy white and blue streamers were situated along one side and across the front of the auditorium.

MANY APRONS

There were many beautiful aprons some in the overall style and others in the popular halfstyle in delicate prints, shimmering spangleish and colorful ginghams and these were in charge of Janet Williamson, Et. Humphreys, Ina Robinson and Ann Chapman assisted by their group.

The next table in charge of Ann Little, Mae Finkle, and assisted by their group had an attractive supply of needlepoint items including necklace and earring sets, mittens, baby sets, sewing box, coaster sets, felt slippers, dolly sets, trays, vases, wall plaques and many others. Pretty pastel colored straw hats were available at the end of the miscellaneous table with cowboy styles for the young man of the family, bonnet and sailor styles for the young miss and many styles of sun hats.

A number of mysterious parcels were available at the realistic post office located on the corner where Kay Bushell and Dorothy Middleton were in charge.

The candy table convened by Eva Heath and Alberta Ireland and their group had a generous supply of sweets, including maple creams, chocolate fudge, Turkish delight, homemade chocolates and divinity fudge either in individual cellophane bags or the economical assortment boxes. At the end of this table was the pantry shelf where a variety of jams, jellies, chili sauce, pickles and other preserves could be purchased. This was convened by Rhoda Gray, Vera Crawford, assisted by others in the group.

TEMPTING DELICACIES

The homecooking table always a drawing card at these affairs was laden with many tempting delicacies including chelsea buns, dinner rolls, iced and plain angel cakes, cherry cream and lemon squares, date loaves, cup cakes, lemon meringue pumpkin and apple pies, butter and berry tarts and an assortment of crispy cookies. These sold rapidly and were in charge of Meta Williams, Lois Pound, Rosella Clancy, Kay Ewing and assisted by their group.

The men's group of the chapter also contributed to the success of the event with John Haggerty, Archie Jordan, Reg Cooper, William Adams and other members in charge of the country store and sale of tickets on the grocery hampers. This country store as one would imagine had a wide variety of goods for sale ranging from fresh eggs, cake mixes, tea bags, canned fruit and vegetables, bundles of rhubarb, to plant roots including dahlia roots, peonies, scarlet lightning, boxes of violas and a number of potted African violets.

Treasurers throughout the afternoon for this delightful affair were Grace Vanner, Nellie Cooper, Minnie Moorman, Lena Reed, Laura Hyde, Nan Calbeck, Nellie Clark and Mae Hinchey.

All those responsible for this event are not only to be commended on its success but also for the friendly atmosphere in which it was held.

Pr. Ed. Belleville Club Enjoys Travelogue

On Wednesday evening, the Prince-Edward Belleville Ladies' Club entertained their families and friends to a pot-luck dinner at the Recreation Centre.

Mrs. Garbutt welcomed the members and their guests of the evening.

The program opened with community singing. Mrs. Gonsline introduced the McFarlane sisters, Misses Gay and Jane. Miss Gay McFarlane sang two solos, "There is Joy in the Song We Sing" and "The Holy Child," and her sister, Miss Jane McFarlane gave a violin solo, "The Belle Boy Suite," both soloists were accompanied by their mother, Mrs. (Rev.) M. G. McFarlane, at the piano.

Mrs. Bedell introduced Mr. Newton Thompson, Redners-ville Road, well known to many as he was with the railroad 42 years and also active in YMCA and church work. Mr. Thompson took his audience on an European tour by pictures and word description of the many places he and Mrs. Thompson had visited. The pictures of Holland were most interesting with the beautiful tulip beds, dairy farms, a lady making lace in her own home and the interior of a Dutch home; the city of Venice, with its canals, and boats; also beautiful scenes of Florence, Monaco, Monte Carlo and Isle of Capri. These are but a few of the places they visited.

Mrs. Garbutt, on behalf of the club, thanked the McFarlane sisters and Mr. Thompson for their kindness in coming. Small gifts were presented in appreciation.

V.O.N. Sponsors Colorful Spring Tea at Parish Hall

Yesterday afternoon the "Spirit of Spring" pervaded the attractively parish hall of Christ Church for the annual tea sponsored by the Victorian Order of Nurses. Lovely flowers adorned strategic points, and silent warblers were seen in shady nooks and swayed in pendant ornate cages from the lofty ceiling. Here and there about the spacious room were white baskets of big Commercial 'mums and tall spikes of white snapdragons and if that were not enough, a tree of blue delphiniums blossomed on side, and a yellow bourganvillia on the opposite side, while dividing the tea room from the auspicious of booths adorned with garland ropes of blue on white cloths — the colors of the Order — was a pretty snow-white trellis archway over which wandered pale pink rose-like flowers.

Likewise, each little quartet guest table was appointed with its white cloth and centred by small containers of spring flowers, white narcissi, red tulips and tiny clusters of the white spirea. The homebake table, convened by Mesdames C. Vader, T. E. Smith, S. Rose, J. Andrews and G. Cornish, with Mrs. H. M. Francis as treasurer, displayed a wealth of delicious nutrital, little cup cakes, daintily iced; apple, pumpkin, lemon and cherry pies, cookies with open faces, oatmeal cookies, date bread, raspberry and taffy tarts, bunches of tangy rhubarb, and many other delicacies to tempt the viewers.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOTH

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: A short time ago you listed the duties of the best man at a wedding. Would you also list the duties of the parents of both bride and groom? Who, for instance, supplies the food and drink for the reception? Any information you can give will be appreciated. Thank you for your time and cooperation.

Mrs. R. D., Hackettstown, N.J.

Answer: This is rather a tall order, but, briefly, parental duties break down as follows:

The bride's parents master-mind and pay for all expenses relating to the ceremony and reception. This includes invitations, announcements, the bridal gown and trousseau, flowers for the bride's attendants, the entire reception (catering, cake, floral decorations, music, gratuities, etc.); fees connected with the ceremony, such as music, carpet, awning, flowers and the sexton's fee (the groom takes care of the minister's fee), wedding photographs, gifts to attendants, and, if it's a double-ring ceremony, the ring for the groom.

The bride's parents also take care of having the bride's out-of-town attendants and their husbands (although they pay their own traveling expenses) and transportation for the bridal party to and from the ceremony.

BRIDE, MOTHER DECIDE CEREMONY

The bride and her mother decide on the type of ceremony and set the style for the entire wedding party. Gowns are selected according to the degree of formality of the ceremony and the time of day, and the men follow suit in their attire. Once the color scheme is set, mothers of both bride and groom choose their gowns to harmonize. While colors are individual, they should be compatible and should be of the same length and of the same general style.

The bride's parents often give the rehearsal dinner, but sometimes the groom's parents assume this responsibility, providing the bride's parents are agreeable.

The groom's parents pay for the wedding ring, marriage license, the bride's bouquet and going-away corsage, corsages for both mothers, boutonnieres for the groom and his attendants, accessories (ties, gloves) for attendants and both fathers, gifts for the groom's attendants, the minister's fee, the bachelor's dinner and the wedding trip.

Housing for the bridegroom's out-of-town attendants is also the responsibility of the bridegroom and his parents.

ATTEND REHEARSAL

Both sets of parents attend the rehearsal and the rehearsal dinner. While the bride and her mother make up the final guest list and send out the invitations, the bridegroom's parents submit a list of friends and relatives on their side, but they should limit it to the number requested by the bride.

At the reception, both mothers stand in the receiving line. The bride's father usually doesn't. The bridegroom's father may, but this is optional.

Labour Bureau For Women Is Requested

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Mrs. J. R. Cutt of Orillia, who recently was elected vice-president of the Provincial Council of Women, told the council's annual meeting Wednesday that the council support the establishment of a women's bureau of labor in Ontario.

Mrs. Cutt, speaking to 75 delegates representing 17 local councils of women in Ontario and federated organizations, said the council alone is responsible for persuading the government to set up the women's labor bureau.

The delegates also gave their support to a brief of the Ontario Association of Superannuated Teachers, which asked the provincial government for increases in teachers' pensions.

Mrs. Cutt noted that repeated requests by the council had some affect in promoting the sale of colored margarine in Ontario.

A panel discussed education and training in Ontario with A. H. McKague, assistant superintendent of secondary schools in Ontario, acting as moderator.

The two-day meeting ends today.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The parent who does not require his child to toe the mark is living in some never - never world of unreality. By their nature, growing children are seeking to enlarge the limits of their freedom. But there is abundant clinical evidence to indicate that many teenagers who demand more liberties are, in fact, frightened by the prospects of complete freedom. They are not quite sure how to handle it; they not only need but want limitations which serve as directions for the proper use of liberty.

Parents should realize this and also realize that there is a tendency to avoid applying proper discipline — even reasonable punishment — for purely selfish reasons: we don't really care what happens to the child — so long as he loves us! Of course, our children deserve our love; but they also need, deserve and crave the inviolable morals when they misbehave!

Barbara, fifteen, could come home at any of the two o'clock of the morning that she pleased. Her girl friends envied her freedom. It was by mid-night. But Barbara was unhappy.

"My folks," she admitted to a school counsellor, "seem to think that I will admire them more if they tell me: 'You're old enough to know. You can do as you please!' Actually, I feel as if they don't really care. All my girl friends tell me that their mothers stay up waiting for them if they're late — because they are worried about them. I'd like the idea of my folks worrying about me."

DIFFICULT GOALS

Just as it is needed in the home, firm discipline is needed in the school and wanted by the children themselves. And any mature adult which of his school-teachers he best loves and remembers. Invariably those teachers who avoided discipline because they wanted to be loved were soon forgotten. The teachers who were not afraid of being task-masters wielded a lasting influence on us; often they are unforgettable because they unflinchingly stood for a specific code of conduct and pointed us toward difficult goals.

On balance our worship of the love-cult can cause us more difficulties than it claims to cure. come. We must stop worrying about giving our children all the things we did not have. Instead we should re-check our own childhood to recapture from an older generation some of the things we did have.

Then, we may transmit a more realistic, more integrated way of life to children who will know where they are going because they will have a clear idea of where they came from. We need to stick to our guns, when we believe that we are right, and not fear that people will call us loveless parents. It we flatter away our moral authority as the price we pay for love, we will soon discover how superfluous we really are.

The tragedy, of course, is that our children really need us desperately and want us to be more than their pals. They need and they want parents!

KEEPS STINGING

WEDDING

FLEMING — CROFT

IVANHOE — A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, on Friday, May 3, 1963 at 3 p.m. when Jean Ann Croft, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crosby, Guildford, Surrey, England, became the bride of John Sellard Fleming, eldest son of Mr. Thomas R. Fleming, Ivanhoe and the late Mrs. Fleming.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. H. V. Walker, Belleville, assisted by Mr. Thomas Dodds, Stirling. The church was decorated with a variety of spring blooms.

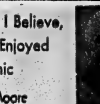
The bride, given in marriage by Mr. George Fleming, Toronto, brother of the bridegroom, was charming in a daffodil shade gown of nylon organza over taffeta, featuring a boat neckline, cap sleeves and accented by a full removable over-skirt of organza over satin with stem and flower appliques caught with a bow. Her headpiece was fashioned of yellow rosettes enhanced by a nylon veil. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and yellow Sweetheart roses.

Miss Shirley Fleming, as bridesmaid wore a deep turquoise nylon sheer sheath gown with bodice of soft pleats, square neckline, featuring a full skirt with matching satin contour belt. Her headpiece was a large rose in complementary color with matching shoulder-length veil. She carried a nosegay of white carnations and pink roses.

Mr. William Naylor of Madoc attended the bridegroom.



A reception was held at the home of the bridegroom, at which time telegrams were read by the best man and these were from the bride's parents in England and Mr. John Crosby, brother of the bride and Mrs. Crosby from Hong Kong. Mr. Walker and Mr. Dodds each spoke briefly.

For the wedding trip the bride chose a turquoise wool dress with accessories and a corsage of white and turquoise chrysanthemums.

Following the honeymoon in northern Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming will reside in Ivanhoe. Previous to the marriage a miscellaneous shower was given on the bride's house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Naylor, Madoc.

Queen Victoria, I Believe, Would Have Enjoyed This Picnic

by Mary Moore

To be talking about the "24th" on the 16th is a little farfetched, but the holiday is on Monday and I for one am going on a picnic.

I want a juicy hamburger, thick with onion and tomato, and any other fixings I can hold in and bite through, and a big chunk of chocolate cake.

A new idea for the hamburger meat mixture has so much flavor I want you to try it next Monday whether you eat in or out.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

(Continental Style)

French Onion Soup (see Wednesday) with Croutons and Parmesan; Homemade Whole Wheat Bread (see Tuesday) or Crusty French Bread; Chicken Salad in Lettuce Cups with Mayonnaise Cream Puffs with Chocolate Sauce; Tea.

SUNDAY

Braised Shortribs of Beef; Rich Onion Gravy; Boiled Potatoes; Green Beans; Celery Hearts; Carrot Curls; Shredded Fresh Pineapple; Warm Plain One-Egg Cake; Coffee.

VICTORIA DAY BURGERS:

These amounts make 8 generous burgers. 1 teaspoon onion powder or 1 tablespoon chopped onion, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon tabasco, ¼ cup milk or tomato juice, 1½ lbs. ground beef, ½ lb. ground pork, 2 teaspoons salt.

Add onion powder or onion, dry mustard and tabasco to milk or tomato juice, and mix with fork. Shape into 8 large patties. Place on grill over hot coals (or on broiler rack or in hot frying pan) and cook 4 to 5 minutes on each side depending on desired doneness and thickness of patties. When patties are broiled, place them on buns, toasted preferably. Spread each with cheese spread mixed with a little tabasco, before closing.

Before I made it I was intrigued with the next recipe. It is a pan chocolate cake with a nut crumb topping applied before it is baked. It turned out to be a beauty and I predict it will be a standby for you in the future.

BLONDE AND BROWN CRUMB CAKE:

Topping: ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar, ¼ cup soft butter, ½ teaspoon allspice, ¾ cup sifted flour, ½ cup chopped nuts (we used blanched almonds).

Batter: 1 8-oz. pkg. (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate chips, ¾ cup butter (half shortening and half butter are good), 2 cups sifted flour (all-purpose), 1 tablespoon baking soda, ¾ teaspoon salt, 2 cup firmly packed brown sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 eggs, 1¼ cups buttermilk.

In top of double boiler (preferably large enough in which to mix batter) nearly melt over hot (not boiling) water the chocolate chips and the butter or butter and shortening mixture. Remove from water. Stir to mix and completely melt and add the brown sugar and vanilla. Beat in the eggs, one at a time. Sift together the sifted flour, baking soda and salt and add alternately with the buttermilk to make a smooth batter. Pour into pan 9 x 9 x 2". Sprinkle topping crumbs over evenly. Strew evenly with chopped nuts. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour, having cake on rack at centre of oven. Twenty minutes before baking time is up, slide a cookie sheet below cake to disperse heat from directly under cake.

Shannonville U.C.W. Hold Successful Spring Tea

On the afternoon of May 8th, the Unified Church Women of Shannonville held a "Spring Tea." Despite the inclement weather it was well attended.

The guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. Asa Cook.

The first of the many attractive tables was the one in aid of the church choir, and offered a variety of articles, home baking, home-made chocolates, aprons, knitted socks, fancy work, and an assortment of cards.

The home cooking table offered many delicious goodies: buns, pies, cookies, tarts, squares, canned relishes, and pickles.

DELICIOUS CANDY

The candy counter was well laden with maple cream, chocolate fudge, and home-made chocolates.

The sewing table had a fine assortment of bait, overall and fancy aprons; knitted socks, tea towels, dainty doilies and various novelties.

The long tea table was exquisitely appointed with a white embroidered cloth and centred by a lovely arrangement of red tulips in a crystal bowl, flanked by tall white candles in crystal holders. The gleaming silver tea services and pretty flower designed serviettes completed the setting.

The seated guest tables were attractively arranged around the room, each centred with a vase of red tulips and white narcissi.

POURING TEA

Presiding at the silver tea services were: Mrs. W. Ross, Mrs. W. D. Robertson and Mrs. E. Vivian, while Mrs. W. Michaud replenished the teapots.

Others who served in various capacities included the following: home baking, Mesdames K. Vivian and D. Hinchey; candy, Mrs. C. Kierl; sewing table, Mesdames R. Stratton and A. Christian; chair hostesses, Mesdames C. Wood and R. Galbraith; kitchen help, Mesdames S. Elliott, C. Cameron, C. Stratton, G. Stratton, D. Thompson, D. Lazier, L. Clarke and J. Hinchey; serving the guests, Mesdames D. Steven, M. Little, J. Kirk, A. Hayter, G. Little and T. Breadman; treasurer, Mrs. G. Osborne.

"They'll Never Guess You Paid So Little"

Successful Living

By DORIS CLARK

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Do Only Bad Girls Wear Anklets?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — My aunt got me an anklet for Christmas and now I wear it all the time. Sometimes it becomes a conversation piece, but then one of the girls always comes out with "Only bad girls wear anklets." I've just let it pass by, not saying anything, but then it gets me thinking.

My aunt read it some place a while ago but says that it doesn't apply to girls now. Please tell me whether an anklet does mean that you are a bad girl. — FAR FROM A BAD GIRL.

DEAR FAR FROM — Not in my book it doesn't although it is an attention-getter and, as such, warrants only special-occasion wearing. What do our young people say?

DEAR DORIS — I am wondering if it is right for a girl my age (16) to be so very possessive. In one case, my girl friend likes John, the boy I went around with a year ago. I now have no interest in him. Why is it, then, that when Mary makes a play for him I get nasty and speak roughly to both? I hate to think John likes anyone else, but I just keep him tied down.

I will be happy to see the day that Mary will have a B.F. that she can trust, and I know John could very well be the one. Why am I so possesive?

In the second case, it is a boy I went around with two years ago; I still like him, but up until now I won't go out with him. Tonight he telephoned and told me that he is going out (steadily) with another girl. Now I want him back. I hate the idea of him going out with "her." Why am I so possesive?

Quite a few of my girl friends have the same feeling. We hate to see old boy friends with new girl friends. What can be done about it? — JUDY.

DEAR JUDY — It's the dog-in-the-manger in you coming out. If you felt surer of your charms, you wouldn't have to cling so hard.

You draw friends by leaving them free; by growing in friendliness, as well as in a sense of self-worth. Possessiveness is just another word for selfishness — and it happens in people from 16 to 60!

DEAR DORIS — If a boy gave a girl a ring which is ten carat gold, should she ask where he got it, or should she keep it and ask no question? Especially when the girl hangs around with filthy boys. Her parents don't let her even talk to a boy. If she does, they slap her face. — IS IT PROPER?

DEAR IS IT PROPER — It's not proper to give an expensive ring casually, nor to accept it; it's not proper to ask the donor where he got it; it's not proper to hang around with filthy boys, nor for parents to correct a girl by slapping her face. Anything else?

CONFIDENTIAL TO WANTING TO BE WANTED — My guess is your mother still wants you — but is out of touch. What your stepmother expects of you is an imposition. Write to your mother or go to her. Or better still, talk to the worker at your local child care agency. In Belleville this is the Children's Aid Society of Belleville, Hastings County and Trenton, 63 Moira Street.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ASHAMED AND AFRAID — Now you have confessed, so absolve yourself. There is nothing for you to be afraid of. To help you with your own understanding of such things, write again enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will give you the names of some fine books on the subject.

(Doris cannot begin to answer all your questions in the column. To make sure of your private reply, enclose a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope with your letter.)

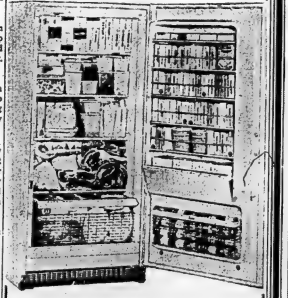
Dental Treatment Women's Work in New Zealand

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — For most New Zealand school children, dental treatment is women's work.

In contrast to practice in Canada where a youngster rarely encounters a woman dentist, practically all treatment in New Zealand schools for children from 2½ to 16 is performed by dental nurses.

The treatment is free and the nurses work in modern clinics attached to schools or in mobile units travelling around remote country areas.

New Zealand was the first country to train nurses for dental work and its free school service was the world's first. Suggested to the government by the New Zealand Dental Association in 1905, it was set up in 1921 and the first trained nurses were at work in schools in 1922.



Today there are more than 900 dental nurses working in 981 treatment centres. The nurses train for two years at centres in Wellington, Auckland and Christchurch and there now are about 400 in training.

Each child is examined at intervals of six months. The nurse does all fillings and most extractions, leaving only complicated cases for a dental surgeon.

Each training centre has a large clinic attached to it and here nurses gain practical experience under supervision of dentists and tutor sisters. Junior trainees do their first work on dummy jaws filled with extracted teeth.

The success of the program has aroused interest in other countries. Girls from Ceylon, Malaya, Thailand, North Borneo and Sarawak have trained here under the Colombo Plan, and experienced New Zealand nurses and dental officers have been sent to Ceylon, Malaya and North Borneo to help set up similar services there.

000 cost of deepening the canal between Lakes Ontario and Erie to seaway standards. Before that the Welland had been toll free, although a service charge was levied.

Last July, the government knocked off the tolls and prepared to pick up the annual tab for amortization payments on the Welland improvements. Seaway tolls were not touched.

In the U.S., the National Waterways Conference, on which business and shippers are represented, is fighting to keep U.S. inland canals toll-free and to lift the tolls on the seaway.

However, American railroads and ports in the U.S. southeast are opposed to abolition of seaway tolls. If anything, they want tolls increased to ensure the 50-year payoff target is met.

SEE COURSES

Sources here see three possible courses of action in the tolls controversy:

1. A recommendation to raise tolls.

2. A recommendation to extend the amortization period to 75 or 100 years from the present 50.

3. A recommendation to keep tolls as they are, with a further review perhaps 10 years later.

R. J. Rankin, president of the Canadian Seaway Authority, has warned against upsetting traffic costs to meet an arbitrary target.

A ship travelling through the seaway from Montreal to Lake Ontario pays a toll of four cents a gross registered ton, plus 45 cents a ton on bulk cargo and 90 cents a ton on general cargo.

EDT Wednesday night. Cooper slept through the 12th, 13th and 14th orbits while tracking stations on the ground kept silent.

And then at 6:26 a.m.—midway through orbit 14—from out of space high over Australia, trackers "heard a familiar voice," Lt.-Col. John A. Powers reported. Powers, the voice of Mercury Control at Cape Canaveral, said Cooper called the ground station at Muchea, Australia, on his own initiative.

The astronaut reported that he slept "pretty good."

"He did have some discomfort with the suit during the night," Powers said, "but he said it was nothing serious and he corrected it."

Powers said Cooper reported that "as far as he was concerned everything on the spacecraft was normal."

HOLDS U.S. RECORD

The astronaut, new holder of the U.S. record for space flight, will try for the full 22 orbits of his assigned mission.

During the 18th orbit, Mercury Control evaluated the condition if the astronaut and spacecraft systems and then waved Cooper's Faith 7 past a go-no-go decision point over Australia.

"Roger, very good," was Cooper's reaction when the tracking station at Muchea, Australia, relayed the good word.

Control centre officials reported the pilot was "in excellent condition."

"He is strong, his attitude is good and he is managing his systems excellently."

If all goes as planned, Cooper's Faith 7 spacecraft will parachute into the Pacific during the 22nd orbit, landing at 7:25 p.m. tonight, some 80 miles southeast of Midway Island near the aircraft carrier Kearsarge.

Early in the flight, and while Cooper chatted his way from unset to sunset as if he did that sort of thing every day, the earthbound technicians and scientists were jubilant.

After describing the operation as a "textbook flight," "perfect" and "beautiful," they described themselves as "overjoyed"—and then ran out of adjectives.

As for Cooper, he dined—sort of—around 6 p.m., some nine hours after he blasted aloft with a rumble and a flash from Cape Canaveral atop a 360,000-pound-thrust Atlas rocket.

For food he had some bite-sized protein packed cubes and some squeeze tube stuff.

QUITS WORK

During the ninth orbit—about 9:45 p.m.—the 147-pound Cooper reported he was knocking off work for a while.

With this word, the ground communications stations hung a verbal "Do Not Disturb" sign on the Faith 7.

However, when the spacecraft passed over the command ship Coastal Sentry off the coast of Japan, Cooper checked in with astronaut John Glenn.

Said Glenn: "We had a message out around the range to keep things quiet."

Cooper: "Roger."

Glenn: "Did you say you were asleep just before this pass?"

Cooper: "I was daydreaming, looking out the window."

At this point, Glenn said he knew Cooper wanted to get some slumber and "we'll tell everyone to go away and leave you alone. Okay?"

The "Roger" reply was a sleepy one.

During the 11th orbit there was a moment when doctors thought the astronaut was dreaming. His heartbeat jumped suddenly to 100 beats a minute, and then dropped back to a steady 58 to 60 beats.

GETS TOO WARM

After a study of telemetry data, however, the space monitors said Cooper's spacesuit temperature had risen 20 degrees. He apparently awoke suddenly—causing the latter heartbeat—reset the temperature and went back to sleep.

During the day, he passed South Africa, Australia, India, Indo-China and mainland China.

On the seventh orbit Cooper had gone into drifting flight, which meant the spacecraft was rotating aimlessly through the trajectory remained fixed.

But it didn't make any difference to Cooper since he was weightless anyway and couldn't tell up from down.

Cooper was so completely unawed by his experience that he took an unscheduled doze during his second orbit—which was Japan-China time since he had been up since 3:50 a.m. Wednesday.

At one point early in the flight, the Cape Canaveral capsule communicator, astronaut Walter Schirra, asked Cooper, "Great sport, isn't it?"

Cooper's answer: "Yeah."

Schirra was the holder of the previous U.S. record of nine hours and 13 minutes, set Oct. 3, 1962.

The world record is held by a Russian, Andrian Nikolayev, who began a 94-hour-36-minute flight across 1,632,000 miles Aug. 11, 1962. Cooper will go 600,000 miles at most.

Over South Africa he tested the ability of an astronaut to sight 3,000,000 - candlepower lights on the ground.

If he gives a favorable report, such lights probably will be placed around the world to guide future astronauts back from trips to the moon.

This flight started at 9:04 a.m. Wednesday when Cooper blasted off launch pad 14 here. He went into a true orbit over Bermuda at 17,546 miles an hour.

More

Bermuda thus became the first low point on his flight—100.2 miles—while he reached a maximum altitude of 163.8 miles initially over Australia. The elapsed time from low point to low point was 88 minutes, 45 seconds.

In the course of his flight, Cooper became the first American astronaut to pass over Communist China. He was to make six passes over mainland China.

KENNEDY WATCHES

The attempt to beam live television to Europe, however, was a flop because of a mixup that sent meaningless pictures and sound across the Atlantic via the Relay I communications satellite There was better reception later.

During his pre-rest period operations, Cooper became the first known astronaut to launch another satellite from a spaceship in orbit.

This was a flashing, xenon gas beacon — the kind used to warn motorists at roadsides — which was to be used by Cooper to determine how well he could measure distance in space.

He also carried out a number of radiation measurements, but his attempt to expel a tethered balloon to measure atmospheric drag in space was a failure. The balloon ejection equipment wouldn't operate.

Cooper had 19 tracking stations around the world to which he could — and did — talk. It wasn't all business.

Over Guaymas, Mexico, for example, the ground communicator was astronaut Virgil Grissom. Said Grissom: "... Everything looks good down here and we are giving you a go for seven more . . ."

Deadpan, Cooper asked, "Thirty how many?"

Grissom: "As many as you want."

As the television monitors scanned Cooper as he soared through space, Alan Shepard, America's first man in space, observed to Cooper:

"We are starting to pick up a picture now. You look pretty casual."

"I am," said Cooper.

INTO THE CAPSULE — Astronaut Gordon Cooper climbs into his space capsule, Faith 7, for his scheduled 22-orbit space flight. Directly behind him with hands on Cooper's shoulder is suit technician Joe Schmidt.

work is being done on legislation to establish a contributory portable pension plan, designated as a priority measure for the opening session.

TO SET ZONE

The government also is moving toward establishing a 12-mile coastal fishing zone to protect fisheries and has promised an independent commission to redraw the map of electoral districts.

A federal - provincial conference to work out a program of fisheries development and establishment of a capital fund for the Atlantic Development Board also are expected to be part of its program.

The governing Liberals are under one obvious handicap.

With 129 members they are four short of a majority in the 265-seat chamber. Progressive Conservatives have 95, Social Credit 23 and New Democrats 17. There is one independent Social Credit MP, Dr. Guy Marcoux.

Some of the issues which divide the parties already are out in the open. The government is going ahead with plans to acquire nuclear weapons, a question which divided the parties in the last Parliament.

Two former prime ministers —Mr. Diefenbaker and Louis St. Laurent, Liberal prime minister from 1948 until 1957—were on hand for the opening. Mr. St. Laurent as a guest and not a particpant.

NATO inter-allied force is talk-ed-made for Canada's needs, at least.

The eight-squadron RCAF air division in Europe will be the fourth largest nuclear force in the world until the West German force is completed in early 1963.

The French "force de frappe" will have only about one-quarter the firepower of the Canadian air division.

It will have some 80 Mirage bombers each carrying a bomb of seven kilotons, three times more powerful than the 1945 Hiroshima bomb.

The RCAF air division by the end of this year will have 200 CF-104 low-level jet bombers, of much shorter range than the Mirage and each carrying a nuclear bomb.

Earlier statements that the CF-104 would carry a one-megaton bomb, 80 times more powerful than the Hiroshima bomb, have since been denied by authoritative sources. The size now is estimated at a maximum of 60 kilotons.

lence and to head off a large-scale white boycott. The spokesman said "only a few" of the 77 did not participate in the committee's efforts. They were not designated.

ACCUSES KENNEDY

Meanwhile, Governor George C. Wallace, an avid segregationist, accused President Kennedy of setting up a military dictatorship by sending special troops into Alabama for possible use in Birmingham. The governor promised to file a suit in federal court to test the legality of the president's order.

At a press conference, he issued a prepared statement which said:

"We must preserve liberty and freedom in Alabama, and in the nation. This military dictatorship must be nipped in the bud. These federal troops must be removed from Alabama at once if free government is to continue."

Kennedy ordered 3,000 troops to Alabama bases for possible use in Birmingham after bloody rioting erupted in the city last weekend. He said they would not be used unless further major violence occurred and state and local authorities did not suppress it.

There were these other developments:

The Alabama Supreme Court planned to hear during the day a suit to determine when Birmingham's newly elected mayor and city council will take office. The old city commission members have refused to step down.

The Alabama Supreme Court ruled that integration leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and 10 other Negro ministers could remain free under $1,000 bonds pending review of their appeal of court contempt convictions. They were sentenced in state court here April 26 for defying an injunction against demonstrations.

Pay Increases

tween their income and those of lawyers in the public service.

Size of these allowances was not announced. But similar ones already granted to doctors and dentists in uniform ranged from $100 to $250 a month.

GIVE EXAMPLES

Some examples of increases in basic military pay — not counting progressive pay, or marriage, subsistence or other allowances:

Monthly basic pay is raised to about $138 a month from $134 for a first-class private, an able seaman, and a standard-group leading aircraftsman.

Basic pay is increased to $341 from $321 a month for a navy sub-lieutenant, an army lieutenant, and a flying officer.

A navy lieutenant, an army captain and a flight lieutenant will get raises of $38 a month to a basic $428.

An increase of $70 a month to $708 goes to the navy commander, the lieutenant - colonel and the wing commander.

At the top of the scale, an $84-a-month raise will bring the rear admiral, the major - general and air vice marshal up to $1,349 a month.

RESTORE MONUMENT

QUEBEC (CP) — The Wolfe monument will be restored by the end of June on the Plains of Abraham, the Battlefields National Park Commission decided Wednesday. The monument was toppled in the dead of night March 31. To protect it against further vandalism, the plaque will be patrolled 24 hours daily and its monuments illuminated.

agree on any action against him.

Despite the opposition, the 34-year-old strongman exuded self-confidence as he appealed for better relations with the United States but made plain he would not tolerate outside interference in his land.

An investigating committee of the Organization of American States was due here today to inquire further into the Haitian crisis, but Duvalier has no intention of letting it probe charges of repression inside the country.

If the OAS was competent to probe such matters, it should already have intervened in the racial strife in Birmingham, Ala., he said.

NO 'SHEDDLING'

"The Haitian government certainly cannot permit and needling by any 'state' or 'superstate' in its internal affairs.

"I have already said that it would be unfriendly that any nation might want to reproach a chief of state for defending his government — born of national sovereignty — against armed subversion, against aggressive forces and against subversive actions.

"Were a chief of state so lax as not to defend his country thus, he would have betrayed his mission to govern."

Haiti's position ostensibly still is working to end the crisis that nearly touched off war with neighboring Dominican Republic, but that crisis has largely evaporated. Dominican President Juan Bosch mobilized troops two weeks ago to bolster demands for safety of Haitian political refugees in the Dominican Embassy. Bosch later pulled back his troops.

U.S. Personnel to Mount Guard on Nuclear Warheads Stored in Canada--Pearson

OTTAWA (CP) — American military personnel will mount a close guard on U.S. nuclear warheads stored on Canadian bases, Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday.

The bases will have a so-called "outside security" guard of Canadian troops, he added.

He emphasized that the American personnel will be small in numbers—"I wouldn't like to say troops, because troops, gives the impression of formations."

Mr. Pearson made the statement at the luncheon break of a day-long cabinet meeting on the eve of today's ceremonial opening of the 26th Parliament.

In other comments, Mr. Pearson said:

1. The government is worried about "the very grave possible deterioration" of the Italian situation and the number of Canadians—mostly mission aries—still there.

STUDY PROCEDURES

2. The government is currently studying the best procedures in negotiations with British Columbia and the United States on revision of the Columbia River treaty.

3. Letters are being mailed to provincial governments suggesting places for federal government's royal commission enquiry into bilingualism and bi-culturalism.

Mr. Pearson said negotiations have not yet started between Canadian and American officials on the political agreement between the two countries which must precede Canadian acquisition of nuclear warheads for the Bomarc and CF-101 Voodoo jet interceptors, and F-104 strike reconnaissance aircraft.

"They will be starting in a day or so," the prime minister said. They awaited the return from Washington of U.S. Ambassador Walton Butterworth, who a c c o m panied President Kennedy at Hyannis Port, Mass., last weekend when Mr. Pearson visited him.

Mr. Pearson was asked about American "t r o o p s" guarding the w e a p o n s at Canadian bases. He said that under the U.S. agreements with other NATO countries, including the United Kingdom, the warheads remain in the custody of the United States.

"If it were a Canadian base, the security outside the particular area where they are stored would be a Canadian responsibility," he said.

There would be American military personnel there but they would have the responsibility for the immediate custody."

Kennedy's Science Council Contends Pesticides Kill 150 Persons in U.S. Every Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy's science advisory committee contends that every year 150 persons in the United States—half of them children—are killed through misuse of powerful chemical pesticides.

To protect humanity and wildlife the committee urges strong "limitations on the use" of chemical p e s t i c i d e s, including a strengthening of federal laws relating to control of their marketing and use.

The report was issued late Wednesday by the White House with this accompanying word from the president:

"I have already requested the responsible agencies to implement the recommendations in the report, including the preparation of legislative and technical proposals which I shall submit to the congress."

Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman said he welcomes recommendations which will strengthen his agency in "its continuing efforts to ensure the proper use of pesticides, to decrease the efficiency of our production and to assure the fruitful and wholesome food supply for all."

WORKERS GET SICK

Among the highlights of the report, prepared by a panel of experts appointed by the science adviser to the president:

1. The number of non-fatal poisonings can only be estimated, but in California, the biggest user of chemical pesticides, 1,000 persons were sickened by agricultural chemicals in 1959.

2. Substantial mortalities among birds and other wildlife have resulted from many kinds of insect control programs using pesticides.

3. Deaths among birds have approached 80 per cent in areas heavily treated with DDT for Dutch elm disease control.

4. An entire year's production of young salmon was nearly eliminated in one brunswick in two different years as a result of insecticide applications to fight spruce budworm.

The survey was largely generated by the discussion and controversy touched off by the book Silent Spring. In it, author Rachel Carson, a biologist by profession, criticized what she t e r m e d the "indiscriminate" use of chemical pesticides.

In Ottawa, Fisheries Canada said Wednesday night that the pesticides report is "a strong and objective one" and that it is "a vindication of my principal contentions."

Striped Plants Complacency Irks Laborites

LONDON (AP)—Patrick Gordon Walker—an intellectual and a tennis-playing suburbanite—expects to succeed the Earl of Home as British foreign secretary by this time next year.

To get the post—where he intends to war on some of the striped pants complacency in diplomacy — the Labor party must win the next general election, a victory they are convinced is in the wind.

Gordon Walker, getting ready to come to grips with British overseas policy, believes diplomats need to rethink basic concepts.

It is not good enough, he says, to regard the Western-Soviet rivalry in terms of conditions eight years ago.

If you do, you tend to mislead the public "on the growing division between the world's rich and poor countries which cuts across the old pattern in places."

HELPED FORTUNES

Gordon Walker also professes to see a lot of humbug in the Conservatives claim of a special relationship with the United States.

He says Prime Minister Macmillan elaborated this theme to bolster Conservative party fortunes.

In the end this created tension inside the North Atlantic alliance—with Dr. Erench, West Germans, Italians and others getting to feel like second-class members of NATO.

"We don't want a special or privileged relationship with Washington," Gordon Walker told an interviewer. "Naturally we expect a close understanding to exist."

Britain's nuclear future may be a big issue in the election, due sometime before October, 1964.

Gordon Walker's stand on this issue is:

"We are prepared to accept the United States as the nuclear power in the West with a monopoly of weapons if the American government will give a proper degree of sharing in the deployment and target of such weapons."

TO CLOSE BASES

OTTAWA (CP)—Two of the four American air tanker bases in Canada will be closed by July 1, External Affairs Minister Paul Martin announced Wednesday. The bases to be closed are at Frobisher on Baffin Island and Fort Churchill, Man. The other two are at Cold Lake and Namao in Alberta.

Ceremonial in Many Phases Older Than Canada Itself

OTTAWA (CP)—Some of the faces will be new and many of the old faces will be set in new roles, but the opening of Parliament will follow a ceremonial that in many phases is older than Canada itself.

Highlight will be the reading of the speech from the throne, the still-secret outline of the government's legislative plans, by Chief Justice Tascherea. He holds a formal appointment as Administrator from noon until 6 p.m. EDT today, conferring on him the full powers of the Governor-General for that period. Gen. Vanier still is confined to his residence recovering from a mild heart attack he suffered last month.

The chief justice will step from a horse-drawn carriage to inspect a guard of honor drawn up in front of the building. He then will proceed to the Senate in the middle of a 25-man procession which will include Mr. Pearson and the chiefs of staff of the three armed services.

Poor Burglar Breaks Leg Wins Freedom

CROYDON, England (AP) A ham-handed burglar who broke a leg trying to carry away a safe was placed on probation for two years by a kindly court Wednesday.

Michael Barr, 22, said he was wheeling the safe out of an office on a hand truck when it fell off and broke his leg. He pleaded guilty to breaking into the office to declare the cause of his summoning the present Parliament of Canada" until they elected a Speaker.

Thus admonished, the MPs are told to come back at 3 p.m. EDT when the Governor-General returns to the Commons where Alan MacNaughton, Liberal MP for Montreal Mount Royal, will be nominated as speaker by Prime Minister Pearson. His election is considered a formality.

At 2:30 p.m. the pageantry will start to mount in the Senate.

Outside the Parliament Building a 21-gun salute will begin to boom out with the arrival of Chief Justice Taschereau. He holds a formal appointment as Administrator from noon until 6 p.m. EDT today, conferring on him the full powers of the Governor-General for that period. Gen. Vanier still is confined to his residence recovering from a mild heart attack he suffered last month.

The chief justice will step from a horse-drawn carriage to inspect a guard of honor drawn up in front of the building. He then will proceed to the Senate in the middle of a 25-man procession which will include Mr. Pearson and the chiefs of staff of the three armed services.

Queen Fabiola-Fabiolous Description Given by Papers

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fabiola—fabiolous.

That's how one London newspaper describes Queen Fabiola, now in Britain with King Baudouin on a four-day state visit, and it seems an appropriately unrestrained comment on an unusually happy occasion.

For the royal visitors are serving as a symbol of the reconciliation between the royal families of Britain and Belgium, whose relations have been strained since ex-king Leopold's wartime surrender to the Germans.

Now London is seeing for itself the growing self-assurance of young Baudouin, who reluctantly succeeded the father he idolized, and attributing the change largely to the unassuming woman at his side.

WINNING PRAISE

British columnists observe that the couple often hold hands in public. Since their marriage in 1960, they have grown steadily in the affection of a Belgian people that has long looked upon its monarchy with suspicion. They have been, as a London paper notes, generally praised for their "niceness, sincerity and goodness of heart."

Somehow the king and queen have humanized one of the most rigid courts in Europe. Fabiola is Belgium's first queen to revive a position a lady-in-waiting.

The jinx that hung over the monarchy has been banished. Baudouin had a tragic childhood shadowed by the death of his grandfather Albert and by the motor-car accident that killed his mother, the beloved Queen Astrid. Exile and controversy stalked the family.

A shy, bespectacled youth, worshipping his g l a m o r o u s father, Baudouin mounted the throne hesitantly. Now he and Fabiola are a popular pair, and the once unlikely monarchy has become the most cohesive factor in a country in which Walloon and Fleming are divided over language and religion.

A GOOD TEAM

French papers say Baudouin and Fabiola are "more a team than a couple." Yet the 34-year-old queen had no easy road to popularity. As one of six children of an aristocratic and wealthy Spanish family, the former Dona Fabiola de Mora y Aragon was known as a deeply religious person. She had to overcome much suspicion in Belgium's anti-clerical circles.

The success that was to be Fabiola's was foreshadowed for this reason when her invitation to Madrid three years ago with La Condesa de la Valdene, betrothed to Baudouin's personal runner-up to Helen Wills Moody in the centre court of Wimbledon.

When she heard that Fabiola was to marry Baudouin she said: "Fabiola has an exquisiteness of soul. The fact that she should be selected by Baudouin instead of a film star is very thrilling to me."

Medicare May Be Main Issue In Election

TORONTO (CP)—A universal medical insurance plan for Ontario will be the main issue in the coming provincial election, George Hogan of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, said Wednesday night.

The choice, he told the inaugural meeting of the Scarborough North PC Association, is simply between a plan that will work and others that will not.

Mr. Hogan said the plan outlined by the Progressive Conservative government will work "in the future as in the past" by using of the medical profession, because it will provide a prepaid service to those who are at present excluded from insurance plans and because the government will not.

He said nobody knows whether the Liberal plan will work because nobody knows clearly what it is.

Showdown in Social Credit Internal Struggle Will Be Seen at National Council

OTTAWA (CP)—An effort to bring a final showdown in Social Credit's internal struggle and to point the party in a new direction is to be made at a special national council meeting.

A reliable informant said Wednesday night that national leader Robert Thompson has requested that national president Martin Kells of Regina call a special session of the national council, governing body of the organization between conventions.

The showdown is to be pegged for the resignation of Dr. Guy Marcoux, MP for Quebec-Montmorency who quit Quebec Social Credit party last weekend and gave up his post as party whip. He plans to sit in Parliament as an independent Social Credit MP.

His resignation was regarded here as an episode in the unsteady double leadership of Mr. Thompson and deputy leader Real Caouette, who also heads the party's Quebec wing. They have been rivals for control of the national leadership at the 1961 federal convention.

In addition, Dr. Marcoux voiced, after his resignation, dissatisfaction with the Quebec wing's manner of presenting Social Credit to the public, particularly in the 1962 election campaign. He suggested the Quebec c a m p a i g n departed from Social Credit principles which had been more accurately expounded by the western elements.

SEE STRUGGLE

Ever since the 1962 election at which Social Credit elected an unprecedented 26 MPs from Quebec to Parliament, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Caouette have been spectured in a power struggle.

In the April election, Social Credit strength was cut to 24 members. The four western MPs were unhorsed but Mr. Caouette's Quebec wing lost eight seats and gained two others for a net loss of six.

The Social Credit MPs, both the defeated and elected, met in caucus April 10 and 11. It was still uncertain whether the conservatives would turn the government over to the Liberals.

Mr. Thompson has said that the meeting d e c i d e d unanimously not to participate in any negotiations to form a coalition of the two major parties.

Within a few days, a notarized statement over the names of six Social Credit MPs was sent to Governor-General Vanier promising support for a Liberal government. The six later withdrew the statement.

Mr. Thompson named Dr. Marcoux to investigate the action of the six. Later, he said four had acted "in good faith" in signing. Three were disciplined and the matter was declared closed by Mr. Caouette.

Then Dr. Marcoux burned in his resignation at a closed meeting of the Quebec wing last weekend. He said later the caucus dealt too lightly with the men responsible for the pledge of support to the Liberals.

Three—he declined to name them—remained on the Quebec executive and he did not want to be associated with them.

Meanwhile, Mr. Caouette said the unusual step of the six MPs was taken to forestall an attempt to keep the Conservatives in power through Social Credit and New Democratic Party support.

DENT CLAIM

The New Democrats denied this and Mr. Thompson described such a suggestion as "a fabrication of somebody's imagination." Conservative leader John Diefenbaker declined comment. So did Prime Minister Pearson and Liberals had come to power.

When the Social Credit MPs met Wednesday for their regular pre - session caucus, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Caouette were absent. Invitees for an hour, conferring, they said, on caucus officers in Mr. Thompson's office.

One of the six who signed the pledge—Robert Beaule (Quebec East) — became caucus chairman, part of a slate which one MP said was submitted by Mr. Thompson and Mr. Caouette and endorsed by the MPs.

The others — Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester), Gerard Perron (B e a u c e), Raymond Langlois (Megantic), Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) and Lucien Plourde (Quebec West) — also attended.

It is against this background that the national council is to meet, probably during the third week in June. The move appeared to be an attempt to meet the deadline demanded of the action of the six MPs and the conduct of the 1963 Quebec campaign under Mr. Caouette.

Campaign control in 1963 was avoided, the Quebec wing being responsible for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces and the national office handling Ontario and western Canada.

It was in Quebec's area of responsibility that the party's losses occurred and Dr. Marcoux has suggested there was failure to recruit good candidates and to stick to Social Credit principles.

The result, he says, was losses in areas which had voted heavily for Social Credit in 1962 and had become disillusioned. Gains in areas such as Montreal where the campaign was concentrated failed to balance the losses.

French Canada Has Reached State of Passive Resistance To Confederation--Johnson

QUEBEC (CP)—French Canada has reached a state of passive resistance to Confederation, Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson told the legislative assembly Wednesday.

"Analyze the results of the latest federal election, he said. "Probe the depths of the Social Credit phenomenon. You will find that all of French Canada is already in a state of passive resistance towards Confederation and the federal parties that embody it."

Mr. Johnson, speaking in a debate on Confederation, said that if French-Canadians didn't have anything else in Confederation, they once believed they had "a certain political reason."

But this last illusion—that any party needed Quebec support to form a government in Ottawa —went out the window in the 1958 federal election when the Conservatives took 208 seats.

"Why then be surprised at the feeling of uneasiness and insecurity that exists in Quebec towards Confederation?" he asked.

Mr. Johnson said today's youth do not want to be a minority "in a country that their ancestors discovered and civilized 300 years ago."

"They no longer have faith in the present Confederation because it tends to make them an eternal minority, backward colonials in a century that is supposed to have put an end to all forms of colonialism.

DOUGLAS WAS RIGHT

He said that T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, found the right description in saying Quebec's feelings now are "an iceberg of discontent."

"What we see on the surface," the Union Nationale leader said, "is only a small part compared with what remains hidden in the depths. The resurgence of separatism, in a form much more coherent and structured than ever before, is only one manifestation among many others of this phenomenon."

Mr. Johnson said it would be a mistake to believe that the only separatists in Quebec could be found within organized separatist movements. He went on:

"More numerous still are those citizens of our province who feel hope for a new constitution but who do not intend to hope indefinitely. In fact they constitute the immense majority of the Quebec population.

"Separatism is not their first choice, but it would be their ultimate recourse if they find it impossible to conclude a new alliance within which the two nations would have equal chances of growing according to their particular aspirations."

Among the many benevolent causes in this city assisted by the Elks' Purple Cross Fund is the local school for retarded children. Since the school was opened some five years ago, this fund has paid for the gasoline used in the school bus. In the above picture Gordon Young, secretary of Belleville Lodge No. 325 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is shown presenting a cheque for gasoline to President Dondale of the Retarded Children's Association, on the right, while Past President Parkhurst, centre, looks on. The Elks were among the first to assist the retarded children's school, in its early stages, before any government grants were received. All children from the schools for retarded here and in Trenton will be special guests at the Elks' big picnic on Zwick's Island in June.

"Foreign-Influence" Sweep Is Hurting West in Burma

By PETER ARNETT

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Neutralist Burma's once friendly face toward the West is reflecting doubt and suspicion now.

The Burmese strongman, Gen. Ne Win, is systematically reeling out all foreign influences within his country, but the West is bearing the most.

His most recent move was to ban all embassies from showing propaganda films outside Rangoon. The distribution of foreign - language publications printed outside Burma also has been banned.

Earlier this year, Ne Win virtually eliminated foreign business interests through nationalization.

Burma has a straggling 1,300-mile frontier with Communist China that compels her to tread a careful neutralist path in foreign affairs, diplomats here say.

But they fear that Ne Win, trying hard to unite his country after 14 stormy years of independence, may use the bogey of an imperialistic West to bring this about. He feels he can afford to upset the West, but not China.

SUSPICION GROWS

Burma tended to be oriental toward the West after Britain gave her independence gracefully in 1948. However, with the rise of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization in neighboring Thailand, Burmese leaders have tended to withdraw into their traditional suspicion of foreigners.

Remnants of the Nationalist Chinese army that moved into Burma in retreat from the Communists have stayed to plague the border areas. Only last year, a riot nearly developed in front of the U.S. Embassy in Rangoon because of alleged American support for these elements.

The Communist Chinese have been playing a careful role with Burma over the years, culminating in the signing of a border agreement beneficial to Burma in 1961.

Subtle Chinese influences continue in Burma, with occasional goodwill visits. Even Ne Win's ruthless suppression of the warring Communist parties within his country, and the nationalization of two Communist Chinese banks, have failed to ruffle the Chinese.

The West, on the other hand, feels itself increasingly out of favor.

RAP WESTERN PRESS

Burma's reaction to foreign press criticism of its socialistic policies has been sharp. Government publications have chastised the Western press, and dozens of visas applied for by Western reporters are being held up in the foreign ministry.

Western newspaper men continue to visit Rangoon, but on tourist or transit visas. Once in the country, they are not troubled by the authorities.

Western observers believe that while Ne Win is genuinely concerned about keeping his country completely neutral, he must eventually turn somewhat toward Communist China in international posture.

The creation of a Marxist state within Burma, which Ne Win has promised to do quickly, will meet with suspicion and criticism from the West. This could turn Ne Win further toward the Communists than he plans to go.

No 40-Hour Week in Sight For Mothers With Infants

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail.

It has been estimated the mother of an infant child works up to 90 hours a week. . . . Incidentally, the average baby cries 118 minutes a day.

Oldtime medicine: It once was thought you could cure a toothache by running three times around a church without thinking about a fox. (You think this is easy? Now that you've been told, see if you can do it.)

Prosperity note: The 1,500 Cabana Club here posts this sign: "Money bills not permitted in the pool."

Our quotable notables: "The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel." — George Bernard Shaw.

Real welcome mat: Soviet Russia is making a bid for the international tourist trade. . . . It had 800,000 visitors last year, including 30,000 Frenchmen, 19,000 Britons and 17,000 Americans.

Odd legislation: A New Jersey town once made it a misdemeanor for a dog to bark after 10 o'clock at night. . . . In St. Louis, Mo., it is illegal to sit on a curb and drink beer from a bucket. . . . And there was a time when you could be arrested in Washington, D.C., if caught fishing while seated on a horse.

Our crowded planet: By 1975 or 1980 China may become the world's first nation to have 1,000,000,000 people.

Don't worry too much if your small child frequently repeats words. . . . It's normal, and all children do. . . . But only seven out of every 1,000 children become stutterers.

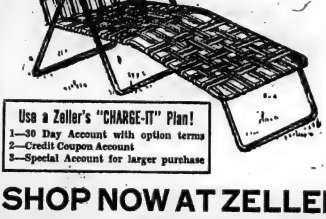
NUCLEAR SHIPS IDLE



WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. nuclear ship Savannah will be idle for the next four to six months because of a labor dispute which makes it necessary to train new engineers, Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges said Tuesday. At a press conference, the secretary criticized the 80 engineers whose labor dispute has kept the world's first nuclear-powered merchant vessel tied up at Galveston, Tex., since February.

Fewer Farms--But More Food

OTTAWA (CP) — There are fewer farms and farmers in Canada than before the Second World War but the farms are bigger and their productivity is substantially higher.

What's more, the average Canadian is eating more of what the farmer produces.

Changes in the agricultural economy have been traced by A. H. Turner, director of the economics division of the federal agriculture department.

He reports that before the Second World War one farm worker fed 10 persons; by 1960, he was feeding 26.

The farm labor force dwindled from the pre-war 1,200,000 to fewer than 700,000 in 1960.

There were more than 700,000 farms in 1941 and the average size was 240 acres. In 1961 there were 481,000 farms averaging 360 acres.

Output per acre in 1960 had risen 25 to 30 per cent from the level of pre-war production.

WE'RE EATING MORE

Before the war Canadians annually ate an average of 430 pounds of dairy products, 150 pounds of fruit, 120 pounds of meat and 90 pounds of vegetables other than potatoes.

By 1960 the average was 440 pounds of dairy products, 243 pounds of fruit, almost 150 pounds of meat and 110 pounds of vegetables.

Further, if consumers had purchased the same food basket in the immediate pre-war period as they bought in 1960, they would have spent 25 per cent of their income compared with less than 15 per cent required in 1960.

About one-third of the Canadian labor force depends on agriculture for jobs if account is taken of supplies for farms, processing and marketing as well as simply growing crops and livestock.

In 1960, the farmer's share of the consumer dollar was 37 cents in beef against 70 cents in 1926; 37 cents for broiler chicken against 65 cents; 53 cents for fluid milk against 97, and 11 cents for bread as against 22½ cents in 1950.

Where in 1930 the average cow yielded 4,043 pounds of milk a year, the 1960 average was 5,946 pounds. And the average hen laid 141 eggs annually in 1941 compared with 195 in 1960.

Montreal Teenagers Tour Mental Hospital in Scores

By REFORD MacDOUGALL

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal teen-agers are jumping by the hundreds at a chance to visit a mental hospital.

In the last three months, more than 500 high school students have visited the Verdun Protestant Hospital, the largest mental hospital serving the English-speaking population in Quebec.

So many requests to visit the hospital now are coming in from high schools that a school just a few blocks away has found itself on the waiting list.

A tour of the hospital starts with a short lecture on mental illness by a psychiatrist. Then in small groups students visit various wards and chat with patients.

After the tour, students are asked if anything they have seen has alarmed them. So far no one has answered "yes."

Dr. C. A. Roberts, medical superintendent of the hospital, says the tours are good for both patients and teen-agers.

'ADOPT' PATIENTS

"Patients enjoy the open-minded and relaxed attitude of the young—in particular the fact they have no preconceived notions of mental illness.

"On the other hand teen-agers, often over-protected and unaware of realities of life, have contact with sick and dependent people and see that such people can be helped."

So far teen-agers visiting the hospital have "adopted" 25 mental patients, which means these patients will be visited regularly and brought small presents.

Dr. Roberts says there is nothing like regular contact to help mental patients. "Many of their problems stem from a need for warm relationships with people."

What are some of the reactions of teen-agers?

PAY RETURN VISITS

In explaining what her group is doing with an adopted patient, Cathie Parsons, 17, said:

"The point is to make the patient feel someone outside cares about her. We'll visit occasionally, send magazines, food and maybe greeting cards just to let her know we are thinking of her."

Paul Leblanc, 19, described the reactions of some teen-age friends from Loyola College who visited the hospital.

"At first they were shy but almost to a man they felt this was a tremendous thing. If you checked, I think you'd find everyone has been back."

Kathie Booth, a Grade 11 student, found it "very surprising to see how much freedom patients have."

She, along with others, had expected locked doors, cells and a kind of prison atmosphere.

"Almost everyone was apprehensive until they saw it was just like another hospital. Now some of us are interested in working this summer as nurses' aides."

Liberals Expected to Place Stress at Every Opportunity On An Atlantic Community

OTTAWA (CP)—Differences of opinion over how much emphasis Canada should place on an Atlantic community may become more sharply defined in the new Parliament opening Thursday.

The Liberals are expected to place heavy stress at every opportunity on the concept of an Atlantic community.

Prime Minister Pearson said April 30 in Toronto in his only public speech so far since he became head of the government:

"One of my most cherished dreams for a long time has been to see one day an Atlantic community linked by so many influences spiritual, moral, social and economic bonds that its common life will have a paramount influence, not only on the lives of its member peoples, but on the hopes of all peoples for peace and human brotherhood."

Mr. Pearson said "a first objective" of his government will be "to create and maintain the greatest possible unity" among the Commonwealth and NATO nations for security, peace and prosperity.

HAMILTON DIFFERS

On the other hand, former Conservative agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton said in a statement Friday:

". . . Liberal leaders must reverse their attitude of sneering at new governments in other lands.

"Their goodwill is important just as the goodwill of older countries is necessary if we are to build up our place as a world trader as opposed to a concentration of interest on the Atlantic nations."

Mr. Hamilton was dealing specifically with Canadian wheat sales to Communist China.

He said Mr. Pearson "must make clear to our friends and allies that we intend to trade with all countries regardless of race or politics." The prime minister should stop making "social calls" and "get down to the practical problems of building and building the markets the Conservatives have opened and developed."

Mr. Pearson's and Mr. Hamilton's remarks show a divergence of opinion on how close Canada should stick to its Western allies. This difference was also shown, of course, in the approach of the Conservative and Liberal governments to the nuclear arms question.

Synod Asked To Take Stand Against Writings

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London psychiatrist Dr. Idris Griffiths called on the synod of the Anglican diocese of Huron Tuesday night to take a stand against writers and broadcasters who say that "sexual immorality" is natural to teen-agers.

Dr. Griffiths, associated with the Children's Psychiatric Research Institute here, said there is a danger Christians in Canada gradually will be softened by these views on sex.

"I think we in the synod can boldly assert that premarital chastity is still one of the most precious of Christian virtues and that a generation of clean-living young men could make our country great," said Dr. Griffiths, a lay delegate from St. Anne's church in nearby Byron.

He made specific reference to Maclean's Magazine, which he said recently printed "the third of three poisonous articles."

Pierre Berton, in an article, "says 9,600 persons, 4,600 of them under the age of 16, are attending psychiatric out-patients' clinics because of mental strain due to our puritanical attitude towards sex. As a psychiatrist, I can say this belief was dropped 25 years ago."

BEING BRAINWASHED

Berton suggests "that we drop the idea of virginity and asserts that teen-age sex has come to stay. This is one of the ideas we are being brainwashed with today."

The synod must "stand up to those people on radio, television, press and magazines whose are out to lead us into moral decadence."

Rt. Rev. George N. Luxton, Bishop of Huron, appointed a committee, which includes Dr. Griffiths, to draft a resolution on the matter.

Famed Warship Retired by RCN

HALIFAX (CP) — HMCS Huron, one of eight tribal class destroyers built for the Royal Canadian Navy, has been officially retired after 20 years and two wars.

Huron was paid off April 30 and after several weeks at the naval dockyard here being prepared for operational reserve she was to join HMCS Iroquois, Canada's first tribal, which was retired last October and now is at Point Edward Naval Base, Sydney, N.S.

The tribals, built as destroyers and later converted to destroyer escorts, were named after North American Indian tribes.

Retirement of the Huron is part of the navy's long-range program of gradually replacing older warships with nuclear-age vessels.

Of the original eight tribals, five remain in the fleet. They are Nootka, Micmac, Cayuga, Athabaskan and Haida.

Huron, an anti-submarine destroyer escort, had been attached to the Third Canadian Escort Squadron based here.

WAR SERVICES

She was commissioned in Britain in 1943, the third tribal to come into service. In her first year she escorted convoys to the Soviet Union and took part in operations along the Norwegian coast.

Huron was with the convoy that lured the German battle cruiser Scharnhorst to her destruction by HMS Duke of York off Norway's North Cape in December, 1943.

From 1944 on, she was engaged in offensive operations in the Bay of Biscay and English Channel.

When the war in Europe ended in May 1945 plans were made for Canadian ships, including Huron, to participate in operations against Japan. Huron returned to Halifax for refit but when Japan surrendered in August she was paid off and entered maintenance reserve.

After extensive alterations Huron was recommissioned in 1950 and the following January sailed for Korean waters. She had three tours of duty during the Korean War, returning to Canada in March 1955.

Huron displaces 2,700 tons, is 377 feet long and has a 37-foot beam. Her normal complement was 200 officers and men.

Good Chance for Sub Crew To Escape if Boat Is Less Than 300 Feet From Surface

By ED WALTERS

HALIFAX (CP) — There's a good chance the crew of a sunken submarine can escape—if the submarine is less than 300 feet from the surface. At greater depths, it's much more difficult.

Canadian personnel being trained by the Royal Navy to man Canada's future submarine fleet learn, among other things, how to reach the surface by "free ascent" from the bottom of 100-foot tanks at HMS Dolphin, a naval shore establishment near Portsmouth, England.

Commander K. Vause of the British 6th submarine division, based on Halifax, says chances are good that most of the crew of a sunken submarine could safely reach the surface by free ascent from depths of 300 feet or less.

But at greater depths a rescue bell would be necessary. The bell is lowered to the submarine's escape hatch and locked to it.

NO ACCIDENTS

So far, only test escapes by experts have been carried out in the open sea. There have been no accidents in training, Cmdr. Vause said.

Canadian sailors, with only one submarine of their own, are learning undersea warfare in British submarines, and a few Canadians also are being trained in U.S. Navy submarines.

The only submarine so far owned by Canada and manned entirely by Canadians is the Grilse, operating out of Esquimalt, B.C.

Canadian officers and men for submarine duty, also volunteers, begin their training at Dolphin. Each British submarine now operational carries a small percentage of Canadians, perhaps five or six men in a crew of about 65. The initial five-year stint can be extended.

These Canadians, although receiving Canadian rates of pay, become to all intents and purposes an integral part of the Royal Navy. Some have risen to command submarines.

SPECIAL CLASS

The cramped life aboard the submarines requires certain characteristics including patience and the ability to get along well with others in the confined quarters.

The modern submarine, although an improvement over those of the Second World War, still is not blessed with excess elbow room.

Typical is the A-class Auriga, one of three posted to the 6th submarine division. This 265-foot craft was described by Cmdr. Vause as a "submarine-hunter-killer" whose prime purpose in event of war is to destroy enemy submarines.

Auriga is designed mainly for underwater cruising. Her liared bow is the only apparent concession to surface cruising.

With her "snort mast" Auriga can remain just below the surface blowing out fumes from the diesel engines while charging batteries and drawing in fresh air. Old-time submarines had to surface to charge their batteries.

"In fact," said Cmdr. Vause, "the filtered air aboard a modern submarine is more pure than that aboard some surface ships."

POST-WAR DESIGN

Because submarines now are designed for underwater cruising the "crash dive" is no longer of prime importance. And with the crash dive has gone the low conning tower, now replaced by a high, streamlined "fin."

Auriga's skipper has a cabin in the fin, Lt.-Cmdr. M. Wilson said he welcomed the privacy—even though he can't stand up straight in it.

Immediately below him is the control room, from which small doors lead fore and aft.

The submarine was on her way to nearby Bedford Basin for a practice shoot before proceeding to sea for exercises.

"Dive," ordered Lt. - Cmdr. Wilson.

Auriga gently tipped forward. As the hands on the depth gauges moved to 40 feet she levelled, warmed on a bit, then steadied.

"Up scope," said the skipper.

QUICK LOOK

After a quick look through the observation periscope he ordered the submarine deeper.

The forward torpedo room reported "ready," and the order became: "Fire one, fire two."

There was a barely perceptible recoil as compressed air forced two unarmed torpedoes from the bow tubes. They knifed through the water for several thousand yards, to be picked up by a recovery vessel.

The order to surface was followed immediately by a nerve-scraping roar as compressed air blasted water from the ballast tanks. The depth gauge rewound, and Auriga broke surface.

Then she proceeded to sea, to play the role of the hunted in a game of hide-and-seek with the RCAF and the navy.

In the exercise, Lt. - Cmdr. Wilson would use all his ingenuity to outwit the pilots and surface sailors, thereby helping to train them in anti-submarine warfare.

Wheat Board Must Carry Ball on Sales

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government has underlined its determination to let the Canadian wheat board carry the ball on grain export sales.

But the next sale to Red China under the expiring 2½ - year agreement may require direct government intervention.

There are signs that Red Chinese bargaining terms, stiffening when the current deal was negotiated, will be tougher than ever. The current contract—the seventh—should be cleared up by June 30 and negotiations for the eighth should begin any time now.

It is learned on good authority here that the former Progressive Conservative cabinet had actually approved the admittance of about $3,500,000 worth of mainland China goods including textiles in an effort to reduce the trade imbalance between the two countries. This approval became void after the April 8 election victory by the Liberals.

While the textile imports would have raised opposition from the Canadian industry, sources concede, special measures were approved to pacify Japan, which has accepted voluntary quotas on many textiles sold to this country.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVEN, Sports Editor

Gambling, Girls and Drugs. Sounds like a script for "The Roaring Twenties" or "The Untouchables." It is pretty hard to believe it could be a true trilogy of excerpts from the National Football League.

They would be nice things to forget if Junior asks you: "What do professional football stars do in their spare time, Dad?"

Football buffs both sides of the border were rocked recently when it was announced that the Green Bay Packers Golden Boy, Paul Hornung, and Detroit Lions star Alex Karris were suspended for backing their victory opinion with coin of the realm with gentlemen of shady character. . .

Another Green Bay Packer, Boyd Dowler, found himself in the clutches of the law when a sweet young college undergrad complained about him being on the third floor of the dormitory where she resided.

Another mental block-buster followed on the heels of these stories when "Big Daddy" Lisconbe, man mountain of the Pittsburgh Steelers, died from an overdose of sarcedics after a night on the town with a friend and two young women.

And closer to home, as a "chaser" to these jolts, is the former pride of the Toronto Argonauts, "Cookie" Gilchrist, in trouble after a fracas with the police over car business. Cookie carried four opposing "cop" Hunnuses over the jail-cell touchdown line before the whistle blew.

"Football develops character," the good books tell you. A writer amends that to "characters."

Television broadcasters of professional football games during the introduction preliminaries never let you forget that the players have university backgrounds. "Joe Shaker, of Southern Jaw, Arkansas, all-American fullback from Ole Miss." And so on down the line.

These fine, clean-living young men are living proof of the sociologists' claim that man is shaped by his environment. Of course that goes for Sonny Liston, Big Daddy Lipscombe, and others who were graduates of Back Alley High and Hoodlum Prep.

A recent story on Lipscombe's family background reveals the fact he was left an orphan at 11 when his mother was stabbed to death. At schoolboy age he worked in Detroit in a steel mill from midnight to 7 a.m.

As a youngster he stole some whisky from his grandfather and for that was tied to a bed, stripped and beaten.

Later, established as a potential football star he signed with the Los Angeles Rams. He was expecting a cheque for $200 and mistakenly got one for $2,000. He bought himself a used car with part of the money in the bank and hid the rest in his apartment.

He said later that he thought it was a "bonus for playing such a good game."

Silent "in peace" but "violent" in football war Big Daddy had his own sense of humor. He told reporters once that he was married—and divorced—three times. "I didn't mind losing that second wife so much as losing the 1956 Mercury to her. I loved that car."

He was devastating as a defensive tackle. He said it was quite simple. "I just reach out and grab an armful of players from the other team and peel them off until I find the one with the ball."

As one columnist puts it, "In the entertainment business and surely that includes pro sport, successful professional lives and loused-up personal lives seem,to go hand-in-hand to a far greater degree than in any other line of endeavor. Sociologists no doubt have an explanation for this, too."

15 Boats Inaugurate Season

Hydroplane Races Sunday

The Quinte Hydroplane Racing Club will make its racing debut as part of the local holiday weekend sports program, this Sunday afternoon.

Opening races will be held, from 1.00 to 4.00 p.m. in Bay of Quinte waters, just off Victoria Park.

Fifteen hydroplanes and runabouts, including eight or nine stealkas, will take part in three classes. Four races will be held with boats from Belleville and Rosamore participating.

Speeds of from 35 to 55 miles per hour are expected to be reached by boats sporting motors in the 7½ to 40 horsepower brackets.

Members of the Yacht Club are presently busy laying out a one-half mile triangular course, designed for exciting races and to give spectators a good view of the entire race.

Racing Club president Doug Storey disclosed these plans following a meeting last night, and also announced the club's official executive. President Storey will be aided in his duties by Bill Boulter, vice-president, Homer Rivet, secretary-treasurer, and Herb Seamon, race co-ordinator.

The club plans to hold a number of meets over the summer months.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Free Trial, a three - year - old brown filly owned by Ed Seedhouse of Toronto, closed rapidly in the stretch to overtake and defeat J. Louis Levesque's Maple Jan by a half length Wednesday in the Arvida purse, an allowance event for three-year-old fillies at Greenwood.

Addison Hall Stable's Rahan finished third.

The winner was claimed for $7,500 by his owner last December at Pimlico race track in Maryland.

The quinella race was won by Free Trial, owned by E. B. Seedhouse and ridden by Jim Fitzsimmons. In second place was Maple Jan, owned by J. L. Levesque and ridden by Dick Armstrong and the combination of Nos. 1 and 4 paid $36.00.

WINGS QUIT

SEATTLE (AP)—Detroit Red Wings coach Sid Abel advised the Western Hockey League Wednesday his National Hockey League team is withdrawing all support from the Edmonton-Exhibition Association, leaving Edmonton with a WHL franchise but no players.

BY BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was a tough day for Los Angeles Angels first they were routed out of their hotel by a fire, then routed out of Fenway Park by a fiery first baseman.

Dick Stuart, who says he's worried about his hitting, drove in seven runs on two homers—one a grand slam—and led Boston Red Sox to a doubleheader sweep of Angels, 9-3 and 7-6 Wednesday night.

Stuart's heroics propelled the surprising Red Sox into second place in the American League, one game back of Chicago White Sox who scored a 7-4 victory over Detroit Tigers.

Mudcat Grant blanked Kansas City Athletics on a two-hitter for Cleveland Indians and Baltimore Orioles whipped Washington Senators 7-1 on Milt Pappas' three-hitter in other night games. New York Yankees edged Minnesota Twins 4-3 in the only day game.

A three-alarm fire in the Hotel Somerset in Boston chased Angels from their rooms in the early morning hours and the slugging Stuart finished the rout at Fenway Park.

HITS GRAND-SLAMMER

His grand slam in the third inning of the first game put it out of reach. He had a three-run homer in the nightcap, and scored the deciding run in the eighth inning on Russ Nixon's double.

Stuart, an off-season trade acquisition by Red Sox who were looking for some right-handed power, lifted his total batted in total to 24 and increased his home run production to seven, both marks among the league leaders.

But Stuart, hitting only .250, says he isn't satisfied.

"Even if I drive in 100 runs and hit 30 homers, I wouldn't be happy if I hit for the same average I have right now," he said.

Bill Monbouquette went the distance for the first game victory, beating Bo Belinsky. Dick Radatz won the second in relief.

Grant allowed only a double by Wayne Causey and a single by Chuck Essegian and retired 13 in a row over one stretch in his outstanding effort against Kansas City. Vito Francona drove in both Indian runs with a first inning single.

LOSES SHUTOUT

Pappas, 3-0 for the season, retired 16 Senators in order at one stretch in his three-hitter. He lost his shutout when Ken Hetzer hit an eighth inning homer. Jim Gentile, Jackie Brandt and Jerry Adair had homers for Orioles.

Ron Hansen keyed a five-run fifth inning for White Sox with a bases-loaded single and Dave Nicholson stroked a two-run homer in the victory over Detroit. Juan Pizarro won his third without a loss decision help from Jim Brosnan in the eighth.

Elston Howard's eighth inning single drove in the decisive run for Yankees, who handed the stumbling Twins their 11th loss in their last 14 games. Mickey Mantle had a two-run homer in the sixth for Yanks who were behind 3-0 at the time.

Merry Mets Have Yanks Worried

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—The fan frenzy sweeping this city over the underdog New York Mets even has the Yankees talking to themselves.

Yankee officials are saying nothing publicly. Behind closed doors it is something else again.

The proud Yankees, winners of 12 American League pennants in the last 14 years, are disturbed and not a little angry. They dare not come right out and say so but they feel the New York fans—at least a great many of them—are unappreciative, ungrateful and unrealistic.

"They (the fans) have short memories," a Yankee official said in an interview Wednesday. "Maybe someone should remind them that we, the Yankees, were the only team in New York that didn't desert them."

The sparse crowd of 7,013 that visited Yankee Stadium to see the Yankees beat Minnesota Twins 4-3 Wednesday did little to assuage their feelings.

METS OUTDRAW

The Yankees, in nine home dates, have drawn 173,069 paid admissions. The National League Mets have attracted 286,684 in 9 home appearances.

Yankee general manager Ralph Hamey declined to be drawn into any controversy regarding the fans' loyalty or disloyalty but he couldn't hide a trace of disappointment.

"I don't see anything to be alarmed about," he said. "I am glad to see such an interest in baseball and I wish the Mets luck.

"The only thing that really irritates me in all this is the reference being made to the Yankees by certain radio commentators as 'that other team.'

"That other team,' for their information, is the one which has given the fans the highest quality of baseball ever witnessed anywhere in the world."

HAS FAST FALL

MILWAUKEE (AP)—At the age of 42, Warren Spahn may not be able to throw as hard as in years long gone by, but the Milwaukee southpaw still has a pretty fair fast ball. "Del Crandall resurrected my fast ball," Spahn said in praising his old batterymate after a 4-3 victory over St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night.

Gardens Seek Expansion

Plan Extra 4,000 Seats

TORONTO (CP)—A plan for a $2,000,000 expansion to provide 4,000 extra seats in Maple Leaf Gardens was presented to city council's works committee Wednesday.

Harold Ballard, vice - president of the gardens, told the committee the project was proposed to increase the seating capacity to 18,400.

He said there is a waiting list of about 9,000 applications for season's tickets for National Hockey League games played in the arena by the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Preliminary sketches of two additions, at either end of the gardens, indicated the structures will protrude in air space over Carleton Street and Wood Street from 18 to 22 feet.

The committee learned from John Dearon, an assistant city solicitor, that the city has no legal power to grant the request for encroachments on the street or the air space above them. He said this is prohibited by provincial legislation.

Mr. Ballard said construction of one addition could be completed for the opening of the hockey season in the fall if work could get underway soon.

Alderman Horace Brown warned the matter might take weeks to be resolved, and perhaps months if provincial legislation is required.

Works Commissioner Douglas Ford said the proposal would have to go to the building and development committee for zoning considerations.

Leafs Whip Top-Spot Bisons 4-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs may run into considerable trouble against most clubs in the International League, but don't count Buffalo Bisons among them—yet.

Bisons are waltzing along in first place in the northern division, five games in front of the last-place Leafs. But when the Leafs stumble, it's usually not against Buffalo.

Toronto whipped Buffalo 10 times in 21 meetings last year and came up with another victory Wednesday night, belting the Bisons 4-1 with three-hit pitching and three home runs.

Meanwhile, Atlanta Crackers downed Jacksonville Suns 3-2, Columbus Jets defeated Rochester Red Wings 4-1 and Syracuse Chiefs defeated Indianapolis Indians 5-2.

STILL LAST

The Leaf triumph may have been impressive, but it wasn't enough to boost them out of the division cellar. They are half a g. me behind both Syracuse and Richmond and 2½ off Rochester's pace.

Right-hander Cecil Butler and Russ Heman combined to choke off the Buffalo power hitters before 906 fans at Buffalo, the largest crowd there this week.

Heman contributed to the run production, smashing a round-tripper in the seventh inning. Frank Leja and Lou Jackson also hit homers for the winners.

Phil Gagliano's two-run homer highlighted a three-run sixth inning as Crackers came from behind to nip Suns.

Jets got three base hits—from Gary Rushing, Orlando McFarlane and Manny Mota—and turned them all into homers against Red Wings.

Willie Smith struck out 11 men and scattered eight hits for the Indianapolis win. Chiefs got only six hits off Herb Score but bunched them efficiently and tagged the hard-luck left-hander with his third loss without a victory this season.

Jim Koranda homered for Indians in the first inning.

Nothing Gone Right

'Lousy Year for Me'-Maris

NEW YORK (AP)—Discouraged by repeated ailments that have kept him inactive for a large part of the young American League season, Roger Maris says nothing has gone right this year.

Benched again, this time because of a back ailment, the New York Yankee slugger spent Wednesday afternoon in the clubhouse undergoing heat treatments while his teammates played Minnesota Twins.

"Everything points to a lousy year for me." Maris said dejectedly. "Everything went wrong for me right from the start."

Maris' latest injury is described as a muscle spasm in the sacroiliac region which gives him pain whenever he attempts to straighten up.

"I don't know how in the heck I got it. All I know is I woke up with it Monday morning and it has been bothering me ever since."

Maris, who has missed 12 of the Yankees' 27 games, is hopeful that he will return to the lineup Friday night.

He is batting .246 with four home runs and eight runs batted in.

Breaks Record

TORONTO (CP)—Ed Malayny of Toronto Fairdale Collegiate broke the Canadian high school hop, step and jump record Wednesday with 43 feet 10½ inches.

In leading his school to its second consecutive Toronto Secondary School Athletic Association track and field championship, Malayny, 19, broke the old mark of 44 feet 7¼ inches, set in 1961 by Andy Birrell of Thistletown.

Edmonton May Quit West League

SEATTLE (AP)—Edmonton Flyers, who lost their National Hockey League support in a surprise move Wednesday, joined Calgary Stampeders in excusing themselves from the Western Hockey League meeting here.

The two Canadian teams told the other six league members at the league's three-day meeting they needed more time to discuss whether or not they would withdraw from the league. They said their decision would be given by the end of the month.

Earlier, Sid Abel of the Detroit Red Wings advised the WHL his team was withdrawing all support from the Edmonton Exhibition Association, leaving the city with a league franchise but no players.

Edmonton and Calgary representatives huddled and then decided not to participate in further talks. They said they were returning home to see what could be done at the local level about remaining in the loop.

Batting—Dick Stuart, Boston Red Sox, drove in seven runs in 9-3, 7-6 doubleheader sweep over Los Angeles Angels. He hit a grand-slam homer in the first game and hit a three-run homer in the nightcap before scoring winning run in the eighth inning.

Pitching—Bob Hendley, Milwaukee Braves, pitched no-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings before Curt Flood tripled. He wound up with a three-hitter and a 5-1 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

"Big Daddy" Killed By Heroin

BALTIMORE (AP) — The medical examiner made it official Wednesday — Gene (Big Daddy) Lipscomb was killed by an overdose of heroin.

Dr. Russell Fisher, Maryland's chief medical examiner, said toxicology tests turned up a trace of heroin under a needle mark on Lipscomb's right arm.

In addition, traces of morphine, a heroin component, were found in the bile and urine, Dr. Fisher said.

The giant defensive tackle for Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League died on the way to Lutheran Hospital early last Friday after he was found unconscious in a west Baltimore apartment.

Flyers Are 'Banquet' Champions

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Niagara Falls Flyers failed to win the Memorial Cup in Edmonton last week but Niagara Falls fans don't seem to mind.

The largest testimonial dinner ever held here paid homage to the eastern Canada junior champions Wednesday night, as 800 people filled a hotel ballroom.

The previous night, fans cheered them through the streets as the Flyers returned home.

The fans were with the team all season. The Flyers attracted an average of more than 3,000 fans to each of their 35 home games.

Wednesday night, Mayor Franklin Miller led the parade of fans who lavished praise on the Flyers and presented them with gifts.

Flyers lost 4-2 in the best-of-seven series against Edmonton Oil Kings for the Canadian junior hockey championship.

'Bull' Wins By Knockout

Chretien weighed 134, Carruthers 143.

It was the fifth straight knockout this year for Chretien, who has won 16, lost two and finished in a draw twice.

Misses By Two-Outs Against Cards

Braves' Hendley Flirts With No-Hitter

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Milwaukee Braves' Bob Hendley made like Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Koufax didn't.

While Koufax was making his first appearance since pitching a no-hitter against San Francisco Giants, Hendley stole the spotlight by hurling the Braves to a 9-3 triumph over St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night and coming within two outs of matching Koufax' four-day-old masterpiece.

Hendley got Julian Javier on a grounder to open the ninth, but pinch hitter George Altman reached first when Frank Bolling booted his grounder. That seemed to unsettle Hendley, who was then tagged for a triple to right centre by Curt Flood for the first St. Louis hit.

Before Hendley regained his composure, the Cardinals had two more hits and three runs. But nothing could dim the performance of the 24-year-old lefthander, who pitched probably the finest game in his three seasons in the majors.

WINS FOUR STRAIGHT

Koufax, meanwhile, was touched for 11 hits, but struck out 12 and won his fourth in a row when Ron Fairly drove in the decisive run with a two-out single in the 12th inning and gave the Dodgers a 3-2 triumph over Philadelphia Phillies.

In other National League action, first-place San Francisco scored four runs on one hit in the fifth inning and edged Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3, Cincinnati Reds belted Chicago Cubs 10-2 and New York Mets dumped Houston 7-4, ending the Colts' winning streak at six.

Hendley was 5-7 with the Braves in 1961, 11-13 last year and now is 4-2 after posting his fourth complete game with his second three-hitter of the season.

After Flood's triple got things started for the Cards, Dick Groat followed with a single, Charley James was safe on an error by Denny Menke and Groat scored the third run on Ken Boyer's single before Hendley worked out of the jam. Menke homered for the first Braves' run in the third inning and Milwaukee continued to pound Curt Simmons, who lost his first after five victories.

LEADS IN RBI

Fairly's run-producing single gave him a league-leading 22 by runs batted in and gave Koufax his fifth victory in six decisions. The Dodger southpaw had been lifted for a pinch hitter at the start of the inning after striking out 10 or more in a game for the 43rd time. Jim Gilliam scored the winning run after singling and moving to second on a passed ball. The loss went to Johnny Klippstein, 1-3.

The Giants broke a scoreless tie against loser Don Cardwell in the fifth after Orlando Cepeda led off with the inning's only hit, a pop fly that dropped in short centre. Cardwell, now 1-5, walked winning pitcher Juan Marichal to force in one run and hit Felipa Alou to force in another before Bob Bailey bobbled Willie Mays' grounder and let in two more runs. Marichal brought his record to 5-3 with Bob Bolin's relief help.

Frank Robinson led the Reds, collecting a single, double and triple, driving in three runs and stealing a base. Rookie Pete Rose also stroked three hits as Cincinnati put together a 15-hit attack and ran up the most runs scored against Chicago pitching this season. Jim Maloney, 5-1, was the winner, Glen Hobbie, 3-4, the loser.

Al Jackson sparked two rallies with singles and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly as he won his fourth against three losses for the Mets. Jackson scattered six hits and had allowed only an unearned run when John Bateman brought the Colts close in the ninth with three-run homer.

'Dont Bury Him Yet' Says Lema

'Palmer Greatest In World'

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — "Arnold Palmer is the greatest golfer in the world—don't bury him yet."

This word of caution was passed along Wednesday by Tony Lema, young hotshot of the professional tour, on the sport's latest guessing game: has Jack Nicklaus overtaken Palmer as the No. 1 man in tournament golf?

"Not at all," insisted Lema, runner-up to Nicklaus in both the Masters and the Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas.

"I'm getting a little fed up with this talk that Arnie is a has-been, and you've been hearing more and more of it lately.

"It just happens that Palmer is tired and in a temporary slump and Nicklaus is riding a hot streak. But Arnie will snap back—mark my words. He's still the best."

Lema, 29, was here Wednesday for a practice tour of the Westchester Country Club, site of the $100,000 Thunderbird Classic June 13-16.

"I'll admit Palmer has looked tired in recent tournaments," Tony added, "but that's because he's been awfully busy both with his golf and his outside commitments. Everybody's entitled to a letdown. Arnie is having his now. With a little rest, he'll be back strong as ever.

"He's one out there and didn't take a full windup before throwing at any time," said Ken Twigg of Toronto, manager of Canada's track and field team, on his return this week. "When the Americans saw this they were frightened to death of her and we number 1. It was a real good psychological manoeuvre."

Nancy who had never competed outside Canada before, also won the women's shot-put.

Then there was 16-year-old Abigail Hoffman of Toronto, who finished a well-beaten last in the 1962 British Empire Games half-mile at Perth, Australia. This time she won the 800 metres.

"One day, while walking in the athletes' village," recounted Twigg, "Abby saw Leah Ferris of the U.S., the girl she had to beat in the half. Abby didn't say a word. She just stared and glared at this girl and the American became so flustered and confused she walked into a lamp post.

"That was one way of getting her number and Abby did it. The American knew right then and there that Abby was not afraid of her and that she told her more vividly than words that Abby was going to run her into the ground."

The two girls had posted times of about two minutes 10 seconds in previous races. When the big one came along, Abby won it easily in 2:10.2, two seconds faster than the American who took the second-place silver.

"Our athletes seldom have performed up to their best in post-war international competition because athletes of other countries have got to them," Twigg says. "This time we worked on the others and it paid off."

The track and field team won five gold medals, the best Canada has done in international competition since the 1938 British Empire Games at Sydney, Australia, when eight gold medals were panned.

Surprised?

"Are you kidding?" answered Twigg. "You'd have to be a nut to figure on more than two or three with the Americans in there."

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

It isn't new for track and field athletes to win events before meeting the official starting gun. They've done it simply by waging psychological warfare on their opponents.

Possibly, the most outrageous case occurred in the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome when the Russians "psyched" American high jumper John Thomas out of a gold medal.

Soviet coaches watched Thomas work out and expressed amusement and admiration when he cleared the seven-foot mark. They told him he was a cinch for the gold medal and that, indeed, he was the world's finest high jumper.

The Soviets had a couple of seven-foot men in their stable —Robert Shavlakadze and Valeri Brumel — but they weren't clearing the seven-foot barrier in pre-Olympic training.

Thomas the invincible was a certain winner. But when the time came to pass out the medals, he got a third-place bronze. Shavlakadze and Brumel finished one-two with leaps of seven feet one inch. The impressionable Thomas, who had the world record of seven feet 9¼ inches, failed in three tries at seven-foot-one.

There have been many other cases, perpetrated by men and women who have ice water running through their veins after experiencing the hard knocks of international competition. They employ various methods — staring out opponents, telling them they are the greatest, or sneering at them.

Another is to awe your opponent by some unorthodox training.

So, it comes as a surprise to hear of a couple of teen-aged Canadian girls—one in her first shot at international competition, the other her second—working the old confidence game. They applied different techniques.

Nancy McCredie, the 18-year-old wiz from Brampton, Ont., and the only track and field double gold medal winner in the Pan-American Games at Brazil this year, did a masterful job in the women's discus, which she won handily.

In practice before the event, she worked out with Americans and others and threw from a standing throw. Her distance was just about equal to that of the American women who had made the full turn before letting go.

Worst Over In Fight Against Virus

MONTREAL (CP) — Track president Paul Dansereau of Richelieu Raceway says the worst seems over in the fight against a cough-inducing virus afflicting horses in tracks across North America.

He said Wednesday night, "Things have taken a turn for the better." He said the climax was Monday night, when about 10 per cent of the horses at the east-end track were suffering from the virus.

There had been as many as three scratches a race Monday night, but Wednesday there were only five scratches on the 10-race program.

Otto Preminger Tosses Big Party for Soviet Directors

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Leave it to Otto Preminger to enliven the social scene with a swinging capitalist affair for a couple of Communists.

The producer tossed an elegant party for Hollywood's smart set. The guests of honor: Ivan Pyriev, president of the Soviet Film Makers Association, and Lev Julitkanov, a prominent Soviet director.

As an incidental matter, the party also satisfied the end of filming of Preminger's latest movie, The Cardinal.

The Russians should have much to tell their fellow workers when they get back to Moscow. The meal was elegant: from Polynesian appetizers with cocktails to the dessert of giant strawberries, served with silk dishes of sour cream and brown sugar.

Glenn Ford, who was born in Portneuf, Que., and Rhonda Fleming were twisting, oblivious to all around them. Tom Tryon, who had the title role in The Cardinal, lingered it coolly with Angie Dickinson. A warm duet on the dance floor was Jill St. John and Nicolai Sultzak, making a rare visit to the old Hollywood haunts.

Other returnees from their Swiss havens were the David Nivens, Niven back to co-star with Marlon Brando in King of the Mountain, and Norman Kasna with his wife. They were at a literary table with William Inge and George Axelrod.

ROMANOFF SHOWS UP

During the cocktail hour, host Preminger spied Michael Romanoff, retired restaurateur and reported (by himself) Russian nobleman. "This is the moment of truth!" exclaimed Preminger, and he rushed Romanoff to meet the guests of honor.

Romanoff merely greeted them in English, and Preminger retired sulkily.

"I know enough Russian to get by with," Romanoff confided afterward. "I did quite well when I was in Russia two years ago. I was interviewed by Pravda and Izvestia. They treated me excellently.

"I had to go to Russia to find believers."

CLAUDE KING

Capsule Launching Grips Millions of TV Viewers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — As the seconds ticked away, one could feel the tension mounting at Cape Canaveral.

And it was inside the millions of people who for 24 hours had waited and watched to see the Faith 7 and its human cargo boosted into space.

Later, in the continuing reviews and recaps, on all three major television networks, through the afternoon and evening, it was mostly interesting to see—once again—a huge missile roar into the sky.

By then we knew that the launching had been practically perfect and the capsule was in, as they said, "the textbook orbit." But watching it live was something else entirely, even after the other shoots. The viewers palms were moist, his breath was short at the critical moment.

Unfortunately, the television broadcast from the tiny, slow-scan camera inside the capsule was so fuzzy that the uninitiated could identify little if anything. One gathered that it was the helmet and head of the astronaut at the upper left of the picture but it could have been any object. Maybe it will be better next time.

MOVES FAST

CBS moved fast Wednesday, chopping approximately to half a scheduled hour-long ("CBS Reports") and adding a quick postscript to its recent treatment of Rachel Carson's book Silent Spring. It was broadcast within hours after release of a federal report on insecticides urging more study of their use and effects.

Miss Carson and her book were credited by commentator Eric Severeid with starting the sharp controversy over the effects of modern chemical killers on the balance of nature and mankind itself. On the program, Miss Carson said she felt vindicated by the report. A spokesman for the chemical industry was given an opportunity to restate its position—that the insecticides are safe if used as directed.

It was smart, alert journalism. And it didn't hurt to edit a dull and meandering exploration of the pros and cons of federal farm subsidies.

PASTRANO TRAINS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Boxer Willie Pastrano is in Las Vegas to train for his June 7 title fight with light heavyweight champion Harold Johnson. Trainer Lou Duva arrived with Pastrano Tuesday, said his fighter weighs about 182 pounds. The limit for the division is 175.

WILLS WILL LEARN

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Maury Wills, baseball's champion base stealer, says the latest amendment of the balk rule is requiring him to make up a complete new book on opposing pitchers. Pitchers have been told they no longer are required to come to a full one-second halt when throwing from a set position. Says Wills, Los Angeles Dodger shortstop who stole 140 bases last year: "I'll have to throw away my book on pitchers and start a new one. It will take six weeks or so of study to learn how each pitcher pauses."

GETTING MONOTONOUS

MOSCOW (AP) — The 20th game in the world chess championship was called a draw Wednesday after 22 moves. Tigran Petrosian, the challenger, suggested a draw and Mikhail Botvinnik, defending champion, accepted. Petrosian now leads 11½-9½ in points. He has won five, Botvinnik two and 13 games have been drawn. The first game, with Petrosian playing the white pieces, will start Saturday.

Nicklaus Heads for Loot Record

And a brief look at the Professional Golfers' Association records show Nicklaus is only $3,000 behind Palmer's total this time last year when he set the record by ending the season with more than $80,000.

Nicklaus stands at $56,215 for the season compared with Palmer's $59,308 this time last year. The difference is that Palmer had won six out of 14 tournaments last year while Nicklaus has won only three of 12.

This week's PGA standings, announced Wednesday, show Nicklaus at the top of the heap, almost $20,000 ahead of second-place Gary Player.

Player has won $36,765 so far this year. Tony Lema is third with $33,296 and Palmer is fourth with $31,845. Julius Boros is fifth with $27,525.

Commonwealth to View TV At Montreal Idea Sessions

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The desire of Commonwealth countries to set up television services—and the problems they'll face doing it—will come to the fore when broadcasters of 15 Commonwealth countries meet in Canada this spring.

The three-week meeting will be the fifth session of the Commonwealth Broadcasting Conference, and the first to be held in Canada.

The conference, begun in 1945, is a loosely knit association of publicly owned broadcasting organizations formed to exchange ideas, technical information and programs.

This process will continue in the field of radio broadcasting. However, since the conference last met in India in 1960 the younger, developing nations of the Commonwealth have been moving closer to the day they can jump into the exciting challenging and expensive field of television.

William Armstrong, a CBC official who is conference secretary, says this will likely be one of the major areas of discussion at the meetings of the conference which will open May 27 at Montreal, switch to Toronto June 9 and end at Banff, Alta., June 13-16.

MEETING PRIVATE

Conference membership is restricted to publicly owned broadcasting bodies in Independent Commonwealth nations. This excludes Trinidad and Tobago, where broadcasting is by private stations.

But most if not all of the others are expected to attend. The list includes India, Australia, Britain, Cyprus, Ghana, Jamaica, New Zealand, Nigeria, Ceylon, Malaya, Pakistan, Uganda, Sierra Leone and Tanganyika.

The meetings won't be large, however. The chief executive and perhaps also the chief engineer, will represent each national broadcasting service. Sessions will be private and closed to the press.

Mr. Armstrong, who has been working for a year in preparation, said in an interview that the conference will make no policy decisions.

"It's a very loosely knit organization, with no constitution, laws or anything else," he said.

But it already had done a great deal in the way of exchanging technical information, program ideas and technical help through the lending of experts.

One example is Canada's Farm Radio Forum—a technique of stimulating farm community discussions and spreading information of value to farmers. The idea was picked up by India's radio system as a means of improving the lot of its half-million rural villages.

But the co-operative idea was carried one step further. The Canadian Farm Radio Forum began a campaign to raise money to purchase radios for Indian villages, many of which had no radios at all. So far about 100 radios, costing $110 each, have been given so that Indian villagers can gather around loudspeakers for their forum discussions.

Now, television is the coming thing for many of the developing Commonwealth countries.

"The older Commonwealth members naturally have a great deal to contribute," Mr. Armstrong said.

TV engineering techniques is one area where help could be given. An exchange of TV programs was another possibility to meet the "simply tremendous" demand for programs to fill broadcasting time. The costs would be prohibitive if a small country had to do all its own programming.

SMOKED HEADS

New Zealand's Maoris once preserved the heads of their tribal chiefs by smoking them.

Can You Remember?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Time is a torrent that rushes us headlong in only one direction.

But by the magic gift of memory we can escape the turbulent now and row back to more placid waters. Some of us can remember when—

The thrill of a lifetime came when you bought your first pair of pearl-grey spats.

When you went for a Sunday drive, you figured on stopping at least twice to patch an inner tube.

You could ride on a street car for a nickel, get your shoes shined for a dime, and have a tooth filled for $2.

It made you feel real sinful to stay up late on Saturday night and go to the midnight movie.

In the throes of puppy love you stood on your head in front of your girl's house, hoping thereby to impress her in some mysterious way.

FRE ATTACHE CASE

It was widely believed that science could tell your mental traits by the bumps on your head.

College boys earned their summer spending money working as harvest hands in the fields. (Now they act as waiters in the big resorts.)

Most men carried their lunch in a metal lunch box, not hidden in a leather attache case.

You could see at least two dog fights a day in the average neighborhood.

When a man lost his job, he didn't apply for unemployment insurance. He asked his friends to support him for public office.

The biggest drama in a farmer's life was to go to town on Saturday and watch a courthouse trial.

The people who chewed tobacco looked down on those who smoked it as sissies.

ZIPPERLESS

The standard library in most rural homes consisted of two volumes — a worn family Bible and the latest edition of a mail-order catalogue.

The snicker-faced fellows who hung around street corners thought they had had a big day if they saw a pretty ankle—and that's about all they ever did see.

It was accepted as gospel truth that if you cut off a snake's head it wouldn't die until sundown.

Everything buttoned—nothing zippered.

You could always spot the biggest dude in town. He wore the brightest yellow shoes.

Remember?

Crofton

CROFTON — The W.A. met on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Val Squire. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Arthur Gayton in Picton.

The Good Neighbors held their club meeting at Mrs. Ted Hutson's home at Mountain View Airport, on Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hutson and Mrs. Lewis called on their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hutson, on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro and Keith spent Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Moran.

Mrs. Victor Bongard attended Chapter at Ameliasburg on Thursday evening.

Mr. W. Salisbury and Mrs. Charles Haight, of Belleville, were Sunday guests of their sister, Mrs. E. Crook.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro and Keith spent Sunday evening with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vangesen, at Glenora.

Mr. George Hutson spent the weekend with his daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Sharp, Mr. Sharp and Dennis at Roslin.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray of Deseronto and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Gray were dinner guests at Maple Inn, Bloomfield, on Sunday, and called on Mr. and Mrs. Art Casmay, at Carrying Place.

BFG Silvertowns have extra rubber on their edges, where tires work most, wear most

It puts the rubber where the wear is

BFG puts more rubber where the wear is to give you more miles for your money. Tires wear first on the edges (a look at any worn-out tire proves this). So, it stands to reason, the tire with the Big Edge will give you the Big Edge in mileage.

Of course there's more to a tire than mileage. That's why BFG has taken comfort and safety into consideration and developed a special "soft" rubber that smothers bumps but doesn't bounce. BUILT FOR 8 FEED — A 2.1-mile auto the St. Lawrence River where the 1967 Montreal racing track with accommodation for 75,000 World's Fair will be held. Promoters hope to spectators is to be built on St. Helen's Island in operating next year. (CP Photo)

Montreal Rival For Mosport

MONTREAL (CP) — An auto racing track to rival Ontario's Mosport, largest in Canada, now is a certainty for Montreal.

Site of the 2.1-mile track, with accommodation for 75,000 fans, is St. Helen's Island, a municipal park in the St. Lawrence River where the 1967 Montreal World's Fair is to be held.

The track will be built by Grand Prix de Montreal Inc., a syndicate headed by businessman Hubert Rapaglia, a former film producer. Directors are lawyer Willibrord Gauthier, publisher Norman Namerow and broadcaster Jacques Duval.

They plan to start construction early next year with the first race, the Grand Prix de Montreal, tentatively scheduled for September, 1964.

Promoters had hoped to stage a meet this fall. But there wasn't time to obtain legislative approval of a traffic law amendment to overcome the 15 m.p.h. speed limit on the island. An amendment would be required to remove the speed limit on the day of the race.

Luigi Chinetti of Italy, a top international driver, took a look at the St. Helen's site and said, "It's beautiful, the best I've seen in North America."

Chinetti, who came here to offer advice to track promoters, has won the Le Mans 24-hour endurance race in France three times. He has committed himself to enter Ferraris in the Grand Prix de Montreal.

CLOSE TO CITY

"There is no track in the world that is so suitably situated so close to a city and as safe for spectators," Chinetti said.

Unlike Le Mans, the Montreal track will put spectators in stands six feet above the track and out of danger from spinning cars.

Promoters hope to make the Grand Prix one of the leading races, enhancing an Eastern circuit that embraces established meets at Bridgehampton and Watkins Glen, both in New York state, and Mosport.

It may be the means of attracting more of Europe's drivers who have been reluctant to compete in North America because of a scarcity of meets.

Mosport, 60 miles northeast of Toronto, is Canada's leading track for international motor racing, attracting an average of 30,000 fans. The Montreal syndicate's aim is to top Mosport's highest purse of $10,000, making the Grand Prix the biggest of Canada's auto races.

Final plans for the layout haven't been completed, but it will generally follow a twisting course around the island using existing paved roads with some minor changes.

The road is to be widened in some places and corners will be cambered for safety. Stands will be erected inside the track where the ground is not high enough to provide natural hill-side bleachers. Steel barricades will parallel the track.

Namerow says average speed on the track will probably be about 85 m.p.h. for the 200-mile race in 1964. Top speed is likely to be about 130 m.p.h.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

FOR MAY 17

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Good for "mending fences" in broadest sense. Get the feel of events around you. Discover what associates are thinking. There is activity, action. Find out . . . and profit!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): May be third person involved. Your side could be under attack, without your knowledge. To avoid misunderstanding, make position crystal-clear. Permit others to know you.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Key is responsibility. In celebrating tonight, remember appointments and promises made. In other words, use common sense. Don't go to extremes and have regrets.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Be introduced to new ideas, persons. Spread influence, contacts. Finish projects. Keep promises. Permit charm, warmth, loyalty to shine through. Memorable day if you make it so!

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21): Strive for the new, for greater originality. Money matters require attention, but should be no cause for brooding. You get almost anything . . . if you turn on Leo charm!

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Obtain what you want through indirect approach. With usual methods, doors can open. Don't make issue out of minor problems. Stress patience, humor. Time on your side!

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Avoid scattering forces. Don't try to be everywhere at once. Key is creative effort. Expand, dine, attend theatre . . . dine out. Benefit through giving and receiving pleasures.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Self-expression is key to fulfillment. If you want to contradict even a close friend . . . do so! Let creativity flow. Be fair and let chips fall where they may.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Fine day for piecing together "loose ends." Be dynamic, positive. Do what must be done. No time to permit maudlin sentimentality to have control. Take "rough" road. You'll feel stronger, better for doing what is right.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 20): Harmony is spotlighted. Be true to yourself. Don't allow convenient, easy paths to lure you into admirers by sticking to beliefs.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Give proper amount of time to thinking about investments. Means take care where future security is concerned. Temptation is to be concerned with only the immediate.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Cycle high. You can achieve much. But self-confidence is necessary ingredient. Fight tendencies toward self-doubt.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"They live on the next block and they're here to pay a neighborly call."

Be firm. Make up your mind. Drive toward truth, integrity.

If Today is Your Birthday . . . You are blessed with sense of right and wrong which you apply to daily life.

* * *

General Tendencies: Lunar cycle high for Aquarius, Pisces, Aries. A word to Virgo: Be willing to wait with joy and confidence.

Federal Govt. Eases Watch On Tense Birmingham Scene

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—The federal government shows signs of relaxing its vigil in Birmingham's racial situation and Attorney-General Kennedy's adviser on civil rights has returned to Washington.

Sheriff Melvin Bailey said, however, that authorities are apprehensive about the weekend. A 24-hour guard, has been posted throughout the area of last week's rioting. About 200 state patrolmen and conservation department officers are patrolling a 24-square block area.

"It's an uneasy quiet," Bailey said, "The weekend will cause more concern. It will be a critical period."

Assistant Attorney - General Burke Marshall, who went back to Washington Thursday, said he has no plans to return to this racially troubled city immediately. He said he believes the situation will be calmed through the co-operation of Birmingham people.

The headquarters unit of the Army, which at one time included between 25 and 30 men, has been reduced to a watchdog group of about five men, Marshall said.

About 1,000 soldiers are standing by at bases in Alabama, where they were ordered by President Kennedy after bloody rioting in Birmingham last weekend.

BLASTS ROCK QUIET SUBURB OF WESTMOUNT

Church Windows Broken by Explosion

MONTREAL (CP)—A bomb exploded today seriously injuring an army sergeant — major who was dismantling it after removing it from a public mail box in suburban Westmount.

The explosion occurred at the corner of Lansdowne Avenue and Westmount Boulevard.

The force of the blast rocketed a mail box high into the air.

It was the sixth blast in Westmount mail boxes since early morning. The first five explosions occurred in the dead of night and injured no one.

Police recovered two other bombs from mail boxes and dismantled them. They were found at the corner of Claremont Avenue and Sherbrooke Street, and at Ste. Catherine and Clark Avenue.

Identity of the army man who was injured was not immediately available.

An eye-witness said the bomb, found at Claremont Avenue and Sherbrooke Street and dismantled successfully, contained four sticks of dynamite. The other at Ste. Catherine and Clark was reported to have contained two sticks of dynamite.

Westmount police said the five early morning explosions at scattered points in the quiet west-central residential district occurred between 3 a.m. and 3:20 a.m. They destroyed the mail boxes and caused slight damage to neighboring buildings.

One explosion, in a box within a stone's throw of the police station broke stained - glass windows and tore open the door of St.-Matthias Anglican Church at Cote St. Antoine Road and Churchill Avenue. Windows of some nearby houses were shattered.

Another explosion, which police said appeared to be the most powerful, caused heavy damage to a telephone booth beside the box and broke nearby windows.

Police said the explosions were caused by dynamite.

There was no immediate indication the explosions were the work of Le Front de Liberation Quebecois.

Forced To Use Manual Controls Condition Good

Flight May Hasten Day When Man Is on Moon

ABOARD USS KEARSARGE (CP-AP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper's 22-orbit flight into space and his pinpoint return may have hastened the day when man lands on the moon.

Cooper — who landed less than five miles from this recovery ship in the Pacific's vastness after 34 hours aloft — expressed confidence Thursday that "we have learned a lot from this mission for future, more extended space operations."

The spaceman's perilous descent to fix exactly-predicted impact point 96 miles southeast of Midway Island Thursday afternoon was full of drama. He had to use manual controls when the automatic guidance system for re-entry developed trouble, and he performed the hand operation magnificently.

But his physical condition was what most pleased space agency doctors examining him today.

Ben James, National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman aboard this 41,000-ton aircraft carrier, said the medical men were "very happy with Cooper's condition."

"In layman's language, you would say his condition is normal. The only thing he did experience was about 15 seconds of being woozy after he stepped out of his Faith 7 capsule. This was normal and expected."

HOT TOO GOOD!

"Dick, it don't feel too good," he told Dr. Richard Pollard as he stood up for the first time in 34 hours.

Dr. Pollard and Dr. Charles Upp put their hands under Cooper's arms and supported him until the dizzy spell passed, then helped him to the ship's dispensary for rest and examination.

He quickly drank four glasses of pineapple juice and called for a dinner of steak, green salad and fruit. He ate several hours later.

A space agency spokesman said Cooper was somewhat dehydrated after his 560,000-mile trip but otherwise showed few effects of his adventure.

The tests will continue until Cooper is flown to Honolulu Saturday afternoon for a parade and public reception.

Their results will require long evaluation, but optimism was evident that the main stated objective of this longest U.S. space journey had been reached.

This was: "Study the effects of approximately one day in an orbital flight on the astronaut; verify that man can function in space as a systems monitor aboard the spacecraft for an extended period of time, and evaluate the combined performance of the astronaut with a Mercury spacecraft."

Parliament At a Glance

Chief Justice Robert Taschereau, Administrator of Canada, read the speech from the throne opening the 26th Parliament.

Alan Macnaughton, Liberal MP for Montreal Mount Royal, was chosen unanimously as Speaker of the House of Commons.

Maurice Bourget, former Liberal MP for Lotbiniere, was sworn in as a senator and presented his commission as Speaker of the Senate.

Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker exchanged subtle political digs in a day otherwise devoted to political accord.

SUBTLE TOUCH OF ACRIMONY IN SITTING

Just Gentle Hint Of Debates Ahead

OTTAWA (CP) — A subtle touch of political acrimony was injected into Thursday's first Commons sitting of the 26th Parliament, a gentle hint of the bitter debates ahead.

The first barb in a sitting that otherwise followed the opening day tradition of sweetness and accord came from Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker.

Supporting the nomination of Alan Macnaughton, MP for Montreal Mount Royal, as Speaker of the new Commons, Mr. Diefenbaker noted that Speakers of the British House of Commons enjoy immunity from income tax. Such was not the case in Canada.

"But in these '60 days of decision', the Speaker who-is chosen may live in the hope that this will be included in the benevolence of those who hold office," the Progressive Conservative leader added.

The remark was a sly dig at the Liberals' proclaimed "60 days of decision" in which, they said, their government would Glorious Splashdown!

'Magnificent Piloting' Thrills TV Viewers

LONDON (Reuters) — American astronaut Gordon Cooper's magnificent piloting thrilled Western Europe early today as millions of television viewers stayed glued to their TV sets until he was safely aboard the aircraft carrier Kearsarge.

The 22-orbit flight of his space ship Faith 7 filled the front pages of British newspapers this morning with the mass-circulation Daily Mirror expressing Britain's urge to cheer for a man in trouble in its headline:

"Rocket control goes wrong, but Gordon does it by the seat of his pants."

"Glorious splashdown!" The Daily Herald said in its headline.

"All by himself!" ran a Daily Mail banner.

In cities and towns across Western Europe, Europeans followed the thrilling story on radio and television links with Cape Canaveral and the carrier Kearsarge.

Russian Premier Khrushchev and other world leaders sent congratulations on Cooper's space flight to the United States.

Khrushchev said in a telegram to President Kennedy quoted by the Soviet news agency Tass:

"Esteemed Mr. President, accept our cordial congratulations on the occasion of cosmonaut G. Cooper's successful flight in the cosmic ship Faith 7 which has made a new contribution to the exploration of the outer space.

"The Soviet people send the courageous American cosmonaut Gordon Cooper their congratulations and best wishes."

Television viewers in Britain and 10 European nations saw pictures from Cape Canaveral via the Telstar II satellite, and heard a play-by-play account of the spaceman's hazardous re-entry into the earth's atmosphere.

Viewers here heard Cooper talking to astronaut John Glenn after firing his retro-rockets, and watched filmed pictures of the ships as a commentator aboard the Kearsarge described how the satellite was hooked successfully and lifted on deck with Cooper inside.

Canada Backs Action Program For Poor Lands

GENEVA (CP)—Canada today threw its support to an "action" program of new scope and urgency designed to help the growth and development of the poorer countries.

Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp, addressing history's biggest trade meeting, said:

"We intend to play our full part in making the action program a success.

"In our view, a test of the success of this ministerial meeting will be whether we can reach agreement here and now on substantial progress in carrying forward the action program proposed by the less-developed countries."

The program was drawn up last year by delegates of the developing countries, with Nigeria playing a leading part. It includes duty-free entry everywhere for tropical products by 1965 at the latest.

Felt Giddy When He Quit Capsule But Cooper Soon Regains Bounce

ABOARD USS KEARSARGE (AP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper, who felt giddy when he crawled rear - first from his space capsule, was in bouncy physical shape by the time he had finished his first two-hour medical examination — a preliminary to others which will follow.

When told he could dress, he did a little jig and said: "Okay, I am all set to go."

Dr. Richard L. Pollard said Cooper's heart showed three flights of stairs "almost faster than I could." Pollard is 30 years old. Cooper is 36.

Pollard described Cooper as being "tired, as you can well expect," but in high spirits. The astronaut's weight / 1 from 148 to 141 pounds but this was considered normal.

Cooper indicated that in flight he had only nibbled at his prepared food and had some trouble drinking out of the nozzle of his water flask.

As soon as he reached this recovery ship's dispensary, the astronaut drank four glasses of

Cooper's Flight May Be Last Of Single-Man U.S. Space Trips

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Will it be another 18 months before the United States again sends a man into space.

The man who ought to know, D. Brainerd Holmes, says there is better than a 50-50 chance that it will be at least that long before a U.S. astronaut again thrills the world.

Holmes, director of the manned space flight program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, was asked at a press conference Thursday night if another Mercury flight will follow Gordon Cooper's 34-hour mission.

He said he stood by his recent congressional testimony that there was less than a 50-percent chance that there would be another Mercury flight.

"But a decision must wait until we analyze data from Gordon Cooper's flight. We must determine what we learned from the flight, what questions were asked, and are they important enough to know before we move on into Gemini."

Because of troubles involving the development of the Titan II booster rocket, spacecraft systems and finances, the first manned flight of the two-man Gemini capsule has slipped about a year to late 1964.

Gemini is an important bridge between Mercury and the Apollo manned moon landing program. It is to subject men to periods of weightlessness of up to two weeks and test techniques of having vehicles rendezvous in space. Later in the program one of the two pilots will step outside the craft to see what it's like more than 100 miles up.

All these things must be learned before man can venture forth to the moon in Apollo.

Construction Safety Award Won by Local Employee

Witnesses Will Hold Convention At Moira School

Mr. Laurier Saumur, a native of Quebec province and supervisor of ministers for Jehovah's Witnesses in this area, arrived yesterday to take charge of the convention planned for this weekend at Moira Secondary School on Farley Avenue.

Mr. Saumur has had a colorful career with Jehovah's Witnesses. Arrested more than one hundred times for carrying on door-to-door ministry in the Provinces of Quebec, his cases were fought to a successful finish before the Supreme Court of Canada. Accompanied by his wife he now visits different groups of Witness congregations in eastern Ontario and Quebec and is the featured speaker at each semi-annual convention.

More than 600 are expected at the gathering which opens Friday night.

REASSURE MOTHERS

The Japanese telephone company gives anxious mothers regular reports on the whereabouts and welfare of children away on school excursions.

Mr. J. H. Boyle, employee of the Lightfoot Construction Co. of this city, has been presented with a $50 cash prize and a brand new pair of safety boots for submitting the name "Happy Hoofer" in a name-the-club contest sponsored by the Construction Safety Group.

The name-the-club contest was part of a program by the Construction Safety Group to promote the wearing of safety footwear among construction workers.

In Belleville yesterday for the presentation was W. Foley, president of Foley Construction Ltd. of Kingston, and members of the executive council of the Construction Safety Associations of Ontario.

RECALLS ANOTHER CLUB

Mr. Foley recalled the success of the Gladhatters' Club, which had similar beginnings four and a half years ago and now boasts a membership of 160, and a province-wide association. He said the safety hatband as an integral part of construction men's apparel. ..

Membership in the Happy Hoofers' Club is open to all construction workers involved in some job lasting but spared serious foot injuries because wearers were wearing safety boots.

The Construction Safety Associations of Ontario, authorized under Section 117 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, responsible for the safety education of almost 20,000 firms in the province's construction industry, foresees the Happy Hoofers Club as the beginning of a campaign that will eventually see safety boot as much a status symbol of the construction industry as the safety helmet.

Mr. Foley said that more than $2,000,000 or enough money to buy a pair of the best safety footwear for every construction worker in Ontario was spent on injuries to the feet, toes and ankles during 1962.

New Angling Licences Are Now Available

A new three-day non-resident angling licence is now available at licence issuers throughout the province.

This three-day licence will permit non-residents to angle in any waters in the province five days for the fee of $3.25 where formerly non-residents were required to obtain a licence for the whole season at the cost of $6.50, regardless of the length of time the non-resident spent angling in the province.

This new licence will be of special benefit to non-residents who make only one fishing trip to Ontario each year.

The terms of this licence will permit non-residents to fish three consecutive days and only on the dates specified on the licence by the issuer at the time of issue. It is essential that these dates be entered by the issuer in all cases.

The three consecutive days for which the licence is valid need not include the date of issue unless the angler wishes to fish that day.

Non-residents who attempt to use this licence to angle in Ontario prior to, or after the dates shown on the licence will be subject to prosecution.

The three-day non-resident angling licence cannot be exchanged or used for credit on a regular non-resident angling licence, nor can a regular non-resident angling licence be exchanged or offered for credit for a non-resident three-day licence.

Native Tyendinaga Reserve Teacher Traces History of Indians to Historical Society

The Hastings County Historical Society held its sixth annual meeting Monday evening in the Corby Library Auditorium, with more than 50 members and friends present.

Guest speaker was Lewis Claus, a teacher on the Mohawk Reserve near Deseronto. A native of the Tyendinaga Reserve, Mr. Claus took his high school training at Deseronto and Napanee and later attended Toronto Teachers' College.

Mr. Claus was introduced by Hastings County Warden Charles Long, Reeve of Tyendinaga Township. Warden Long outlined Mr. Claus's accomplishments in education and other areas and paid tribute to the loyalty of the Mohawk Indians.

The topic was "Past and Present Conditions on the Tyendinaga Reserve," and Mr. Claus proved himself to be an excellent speaker. Not only did he have an excellent command of his subject, but he also revealed a fine sense of humor which to the delight of the audience.

Mr. Claus began by stating that the Iroquois Indians living on the Tyendinaga Mohawk Reserve should be more dignified with the United Empire Loyalists because of their actions in the war of American Revolution when they remained loyal to the British cause.

Prior to the American Revolution, the Mohawks lived in the prosperous Mohawk Valley in New York State and had very good lands, lands equal in value to those of their white neighbors. Then, when they have continued to adopt many of the ways of the white man so that an association factor to the Tyendinaga Reserve has been known to stand in the middle of the Mohawk era and where the Indians were.

When the Mohawks came to Canada they were compensated more than they had been in their former lands. This was a good policy on the part of the government, since it meant that the Indian suffered a loss of freedom. Nonetheless, Mr. Claus ventured to say that in no other country are the aborigines treated as well as they are in Canada.

PARTS SOLD OFF

Originally the Mohawks held all of Tyendinaga township, but the northern sections were sold off in three sections in 1820, 1835, and 1843.

On May 27, 1784, the Mohawks received the first land area. Although many continued on to the Grand River, some Indians remained behind about a mile west of Deseronto, and, using an upturned canoe as an altar, gave thanks to God for bringing them safely to their new homeland. (This ceremony was the first recorded again this weekend.)

That act of worship showed the religious nature of the Mohawks, and they very early built a church on the Reserve. The Indians are proud of their church buildings and now there are three Anglican churches and one Pentecostal church on the Reserve.

One of their greatest possessions is the Queen Anne silver given to the Mohawks early in the 18th century by the ruling British monarch.

The Indians have remained loyal to the British Crown and the British Crown. They have fought on the British side in several important wars, including the last two World Wars. It is said that, per capita, the Mohawks had the largest enrollment of any group in Canada in the armed forces in the First War.

Mr. Claus then explained that there are approximately 1900 Indians belonging to the local band, however, less than half of that number actually reside on the Tyendinaga Reserve.

ALWAYS HAS HOME

One of the most important privileges of belonging to an Indian band is that the Indian has a home "as long as the grass grows and the rivers runs" or until the government might decide to expropriate the land. (However, Canadian governments have been very fair in their treatment of the Indians).

Another privilege of bond membership is that there is no property tax to be paid, nor is there any income tax, as long as the Indian works on the reserve. Certain fishing rights are also held by the Indians, and education is paid for by the federal government.

On the other hand there are a number of disadvantages to band membership. The most significant of these would seem to be that the Indian can sell his property only to another Indian. This can create a serious economic difficulty. Also, since the land is actually Crown land and since it therefore cannot be seized by an Indian's creditor for default of payment, no loans or mortgages can be obtained legally.

Nevertheless, Mr. Claus stressed that the Indians had established a very good reputation for payment of their bills.

MODEL RESERVE

Mr. Claus further noted that the main consideration of the Indians is not money, but rather how he stands in the eyes of his fellow Indians.

The Tyendinaga Reserve is regarded as a model reserve by the government. Therefore, it was the first band in Canada to receive power to control its own funds and to submit annually an annual budget and this council of five looks after the various expenses of the reserve in much the fashion as does a village or township council.

The reserve is also employed a number of articles including a turtle-shell rattle used for religious ceremonies, ventured were by Dr. Oronyateka and his daughter, and a snow-snake used in an old winter game.

This display was followed by a number of colored slides showing ceremonies, activities and people of the reserve, as well as views of their former lands in the New York State. Of particular interest were the pictures of the ceremony commemorating the first landing near Deseronto and the first religious service, the Queen Anne silver, and the project for duck propagation made possible by Ducks Unlimited of Winnipeg.

As a school teacher on the reserve, Mr. Claus appropriately stressed the importance of education. Not only should the Indians learn more of the ways of the White Man, but he insisted that the White Man would try to learn more of the ways of the Indian also.

In expressing the appreciation of the meeting to Mr. Claus for his fine address, Mr. T. S. Ransom noted that those present had certainly learned many things of interest concerning their neighbors — the Mohawks of the Tyendinaga Reserve.

SLATE OF OFFICERS

Earlier in the evening the annual business meeting approved a slate of officers for 1963-64 including: Past President, T. G. Whittemore; president, G. E. Boyce; vice-president, T. S. Ransom; recording secretary, Mrs. G. A. Bennett; membership secretary, C. F. Bishop; treasurer, T. D. Martin; and Council members, Roy Bush of R.R. 4, Stirling, Mrs. J. English of Melrose, Miss Hazel Preston of Trenton, Miss Jane Gay of R.R. 4, Stirling, Mrs. John Haig and Rodger Greig.

T. S. Ransom will head up the museum committee; Mrs. J. Bennett will be in charge of the program committee; and Mrs. J. Sargent and Mrs. F. H. Bedell will head up the social committee.

It was decided that a letter of appreciation should go to the Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce for providing space for a museum display at the recent Quinte Home and Sport Show. A letter of appreciation also will go to Belleville City Council for permission to display a portion of the City's Coulders Collection at the Show. The display at the show was designed by R. Greig, T. S. Ransom and G. E. Boyce and staffed by volunteers enlisted by Mrs. J. Sargent.

Two requests for information were received, one concerning the possible historical importance of the pump on Pinnacle Street near the Glen Roy Creamery, and the other a request for data on Zwick's Island.

For the last two years the Society has arranged tours to Upper Canada Village and that June it is planning to visit the Black Creek Pioneer Village near Toronto.

In August, it is proposed to take in the Museum of Art Centre for a meeting and tour of that area.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served, several recent pamphlets published by the historical society were offered for sale and those present had the opportunity to chat with the guest speaker and to view his interesting collection of Indian materials.

IN MEMORIAM

DOW — In loving memory of Jessie Dow, who passed away May 17th, 1962.
Time cannot dim the years we have been
Death cannot take the gloom, its shadow cast.
With our sweet memories, where all remained right.
And left us as a shining light.
We must think that and ever will.
That God in His wisdom called her home.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain
For up in heaven, we will meet again.
—Lovingly remembered by wife, sons and daughters and grandchildren.

HAYTER — In loving memory of Mary Hayter, who passed away May 17th, 1958.

Sons of Masonic Members Meet Team of Golden Hawks At Banquet Held at Temple

It was a big moment in the lives of about 30 youngsters Thursday evening as they accompanied their fathers to a Father and Son banquet sponsored by The Belleville Lodge, A.F. and A.M. No. 123 in the Masonic Temple on Foster Avenue.

Present for the memorable occasion were two members from the Golden Hawks Squadron from RCAF Station Trenton: Wing Commander Frank Hatten and Flt. Lt. Bill Griff.

Fathers and their sons were welcomed by Eugene Harrison, and after grace was given by Rev. Douglas Dunning, of Belleville, the group sat down to a delicious pot luck supper.

Following the dinner, Wing Commander F. Hatten gave a brief talk on the "Golden Hawks". He said the group would be leaving for Windsor on Friday to start their summer shows in Canada and the United States. From Windsor, the Golden Hawks will fly to Sarnia, Peterborough and then back to Trenton on June 14, where they will perform. After the Trenton show he said the Golden Hawks would be going to Ottawa and from there to the east coast.

Wing Commander Hatten said Flt. Lt. Griff flies second solo and 7th in formation. He has flown in other aerobatics teams in Europe.

"The team was formed in 1959," he said, and the purpose was to celebrate the golden anniversary of flight. He said the RCAF thought they would be performing for just the one year, but, he said, it became so popular, it has continued ever since.

VERY SIMPLE

Wing Commander Hatten said it was a pretty cut and dried operation. He said the year that it was difficult in forming the aerobatics formation. "It is," he said, "it is all very simple."

Ten different shows are performed by the "Golden Hawks," he said, each show depends on the depth of the clouds and the height of the cloud base.

There are seven pilots, members of the Golden Hawks, and 17 officers. The pilots join for a two-year term and the leader serves for three. This gives him a year's training said the Wing Commander, plus a year as leader of the group. He said the pilots were trained on Vamp 5's.

During the shows, said Wing Commander Hatten, the pilots fly Sabre 6's. "During the winter," he said, "these planes are completely stripped and overhauled, to make sure they are in a top working performance."

Following the Wing Commander's brief outline, a film was made by the CBC was shown. The film began at the home base of the Golden Hawks, Chatham, New Brunswick.

After the film a question period was held and aspects of the film were explained by the two Hawk members. One thing Wing Commander Hatten stressed was that up in the air during a show, it wasn't as rosey as would appear from the ground.

From the ground, he said, it would appear the planes were perfectly still and that they are trouble keeping formation.

CRAFT ALWAYS ROCKING

"This is not true," he said, "as could be seen from the film." The air craft are constantly rocking and rolling. Wing Commander Hatten explained that it was because of the high wind currents plus the turbulence caused by other aircraft in the formation. He said the pilots had to work at the controls constantly to keep in a perfect formation.

A total of 30 service men accompany the Golden Hawks, to keep their aircraft in perfect working condition. A painter also accompanies them. The weather is hard on the golden paint and he has to constantly re-paint the plane's body.

Before each show, each pilot personally checks out his own air craft, even though several mechanics have covered it from end to end.

One question asked was, "how far apart are the wings of each plane from each other?" Flt. Lt. Griff replied, "from four to six feet". "How do you feel as you walk toward your plane to do a show," was another. "It's just like starting to do another day's work", he replied.

HELMETS VERY HARD

Then there are always those who look to the more serious side. "What would you do if you were forced to bail out and the cockpit canopy wouldn't open?" Flt. Lt. said he'd hit the canopy was made of plexiglass and if necessary the pilot could eject through it. He said their helmets were very hard.

Junior Warden of the lodge, Harold McNish made a presentation to the two Hawk members on behalf of the lodge in appreciation for their coming to speak.

The two guests were thanked by Raymond Gunsolus.

To conclude a somewhat exciting evening for the young stars a color, play-by-play film of the Stanley Cup playoff was shown, between the Chicago Black Hawks and the Toronto Maple Leafs.

NEW ADVENTURES AHEAD—The Gateway to the Trent Waterways was opened to navigation this week with Trenton boatmen Bob Brown left, and Don Page, right, aboard their 39-foot houseboat "The Scrooge," passing through No. 1 lock. Surplus of P.U.C. Spent On Capital Works Answer To Request of Council

TRENTON — Has Trenton council bitten off more than it can chew?

The Trenton Public Utilities Commission think it has. Council has asked the commission to turn over $30,000 listed in the commission's audit report as "surplus revenue," and has called on Section 26 of the Public Utilities Act (which states in effect that any municipality may ask a commission for funds representing the difference between revenue and operating costs) to back up the request.

At a commission meeting yesterday, commission chairman Clifford A. Baker and Commissioner Charles Hilton brought out the following information: (1) The $39,000 figure is just that . . . a figure in the auditor's report; (2) The money has been spent already for capital works; (3) Under Section 41 of the Act, a commission has the right to ask a council to foot the bill for capital works. The only redress council has is to appeal to the department of municipal affairs if it (council) thinks the works aren't indicated. And a deputy minister of municipal affairs was quoted as saying that such a situation had never come before his department.

"The council hasn't read far enough and long enough in the Act," commented Mr. Hilton.

"They've bought something reduced for quick sale," said Chairman Baker.

Mr. Baker explained that it has been the custom for the commission to depend on a "so called surplus" to pay for capital works. "Debenturing for capital expenditures," he said "would be much more expensive to the taxpayer."

"If there's something wrong with economizing, then we're wrong," he said.

REQUEST NOT HONORED

Mr. Baker said that the commission had offered to sit down with council and explain its policy concerning "surplus revenue," but that the request had not been honored.

Commission auditor, Peter Held, asked to comment, said that it was his impression that the affairs of the commission were very well run indeed, and that the commissioners tried to keep their debenture debt as low as possible. He said that the commission's system of channelling surplus revenue into public works' expenditure was the most economical way of doing things and that in doing so, the commission had the best interests of the people of Trenton at heart.

"On the hot seat," at yesterday's meeting was Councillor C. V. Graham, acting mayor.

"Do you think its a good idea for council to ask us for our surplus revenue?" Mr. Graham was asked.

"I thought so when it was voted on," said the councillor, "I'm not so sure now."

Councillor Graham said that all council was trying to do was get the mill rate down. He said that council had had a "lot of criticism" about the rise in the mill rate this year.

"We're no cash by hand over to council now," said Mr. Baker, "at what point are we supposed to start handing over a surplus to council?"

Mr. Graham didn't know.

Mr. Held was asked if he would go before council and explain the commission's stand in the matter and he said he would . . . if asked to do so by council.

Recreation Highlights

R. Jarvah, Assistant Director

Upon the completion of final exams in June, many high school students will be making plans for the coming summer months. Some will probably include water skiing, swimming and camping on their list of "want to do's" while others will be preparing to head north up to such summer resort areas as those in the Muskoka district to begin work at lodges and private resorts.

However, during this time, a select group of local high school students will be preparing for a special field of summer employment, that of a supervisor on a municipal playground.

The 25 local playground supervisors who will supervise Belleville's 21 playground areas were carefully selected from a record total of over 70 applicants.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

Being a supervisor on a municipal playground is a job which carries with it opportunity for self-expression and self-satisfaction. However, at the same time, it is a position which carries a large amount of responsibility.

On a playground, supervisors may be dealing with children from any different social backgrounds. The supervisor has to learn to appreciate and understand the other fellow's viewpoint and to encourage good standards of conduct, but to do so with tact and understanding.

In order to accomplish these and the countless other tasks of a playground supervisor, these high school students will attend the East Central Ontario Playground Leadership Training Course, which this year is being held at Camp-Quin-Mo-Lac, Moira Lake, May 23-28 inclusive.

One common misconception about this week of special training is that since it is held at a camp, that the six days spent there are six days of fun, play and relaxation.

However, course attendants soon learn that this is not the case.

"Each day is divided into approximately seven periods with the working day beginning at 8:45 a.m. and not concluding until 9:30 p.m.

During this time, supervisors, who are divided into five groups — A, B, C, D and E, take lectures on such subjects as leadership, program planning and behaviour problems. Active participation periods are spent with such courses as singing games, sports, special events, and arts and crafts being taught. These are only a few of the 20 different topics that will be covered during the seemingly short six days on course.

DAY CAMP COURSE

Beginning this year and, being held in conjunction with the Playground Training Course, is a "Day Camp Course" for Day Camp counsellors and instructors. Day Camp counsellors will attend the separate classes and work sessions, but will take part with the rest of the camp in other activities such as games night and duty details. Among the subjects expected to be covered in this course participants are day camp philosophy, special events, camp craft, nature lore, and day camp administration.

COMMITTEE MANAGEMENT

The administration of the whole project is under the management of a District Playground Training Course Committee made up of recreation directors and assistants from the various participating municipalities.

Minister Will Present Cheque To Association

The Hastings and Land O' Lakes Tourist Region will be $5,000 richer next Thursday evening when it will be presented with a cheque for $5,000 from the Ontario government by Hon. Byran L. Cathcart.

The presentation will be made at a Regional council dinner to be held in the Pinnacle Room at the Hotel Quinte. Prior to the dinner a reception is being held in honor of Mr. Cathcart.

Grants of $600 Each Made to Authorities

Ontario government grants of $600 each for the O'Hara Mill Conservation Area northwest of Madoc, and the Price Conservation Area at Actinolite have been announced by Clarke T. Rollins, M.L.A. for Hastings East.

Both conservation areas are owned by the Moira River Conservation Authority which this year at O'Hara's will enlarge the parking area, extend a roadway and construct a nature trail.

At the Price Area the Authority will construct a footbridge over the Skootamatta River and enlarge the picnic and play areas.

Another municipalities of the Authority share in the development cost with the Ontario government subsidizing cost of the work by 50 per cent.

cipalities.

The highly-skilled staff is selected from among the municipal recreation directors, community programs branch staff, and others whose particular talents make a valuable contribution to this training course.

Association For Retarded Hears Reports

An interested group of parents and friends attended the May meeting of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children at their school on John street. The main portion of the meeting was devoted to the highlights of the Ontario Association Conference attended by the delegates. This 10th annual meeting of 82 associations across Ontario saw 300 delegates representing 54 schools for the mentally retarded, gathered at Kingston to hear the progress of the work and to plan new ideas. There are over 3,000 pupils being taught in the province by teachers. Thirty-four locals are now promoting services for adults.

The Institutions Committee of the Association recently arranged a visit to the Ontario Hospital School at Smiths Falls for several parents from this city to see their children and the children sponsored by the Association. The Provincial Minister of Health and Welfare, Dr. Starr, addressed almost 400 parents and friends in the auditorium.

It was announced by the Campaign Chairman, Mrs. Robert Harper, that the returns from the bills are nearing 94-700.

The Education Committee will be in charge of the June meeting and the school pupils will take part in the program.

Voice From The Sky

In this day and age, youth is almost universally equated with a feeling of well-being.

One of the strides of a weary lot of present-day clichés is the assertion "You are as young as you feel," which, interpreted, means that one's capacity for enjoyment depends on one's mental outlook.

There can hardly be a greater contrast than that between an earth-bound cliche and a sky-borne exclamation, emanating from Faith 7 as it circled the world on Wednesday.

Yet one of Astronaut Gordon Cooper's remarks is best interpreted in the light of "You are as young as you feel."

"It feels good, buddy," he declared elatedly on his first orbit.

Here is an example of the triumph of mind over matter, if there ever was one.

Even if we grant that the strange physical experience of weightlessness might not only fail to qualify as a discomfort but might actually be pleasurable, Cooper was surrounded by a host of circumstances which might be expected to generate a feeling of disquiet.

Here this man was, cut off from all but vocal contact with his fellowmen, whirling through space at a terrifying speed, high above his native earth. Ahead of him, if things went well, were hours of boredom. If any of a hundred or more things were wrong, his isolation could end abruptly, but only to plunge him into the still more mysterious state of death. He could burn up, or gasp for life-giving air in a virtual vacuum, or drown in any of the earth's oceans, or be pulped in a tremendous crash into the unyielding rock of mighty mountain ranges.

Yet all these factors counted for nothing, because he was filled with the spirit of achievement. The dream, built on the painstaking calculations of hundreds of men many of whom he had never seen, fashioned out of many weary hours of his own careful study and rigorous training, had come alive in all its glory. He was where so few men have been, charting the path where so many others of his kind will follow. His spirit lifted and all the unaccustomed circumstances and the unpleasant possibilities counted as naught.

"It feels good, buddy."

If youth is indeed equated with a feeling of well-being, then Astronaut Gordon Cooper was new-born.

GATT At Their Heads

Some of the poorer countries are complaining that the economically-advanced lands are holding a GATT at their economic heads.

Industrially developed lands depend upon processing a wide variety of raw materials, many of which they draw from the four corners of the globe, and on selling the processed products around the world. For them, except under special circumstances, the reduction of tariffs to promote the free flow of trade makes good economic sense.

They have a tendency to forget, though, that the new lands which are just attaining their independence have no desire to continue indefinitely being merely hewers of wood and drawers of ore for the industrial giants. They want to build their own industries, to supply the home markets. For them, tariffs may be an essential protection during the early years of new enterprises.

Thus GATT, the General Agreement on Tarrifs and Trade, faces some stormy weather at the Geneva meeting now scheduled.

A "world in which nations can trade unhampered by tariff barriers, with each producing what its natural resources, the skills of its people and its proximity to markets enables it to provide most cheaply, appears desirable eventually. But the varying degrees of economic development make the attainment of such an ideal impractical at present, if there is ever to be any reduction in the great spread between standards of living in different countries.

Canada, as an industrialized nation which yet is still concerned with the drawbacks of more highly developed areas treating it as a source for raw materials, has an unique opportunity to seek to reconcile the opposing interests of the rich and the poor, or undeveloped, lands.

To subtract from our own sovereignty in favor of a friend is much wiser than losing it all to an enemy.—Sir Robert Menzies.

I sometimes get the impression Senator Goldwater thinks our enemy is not Khrushchev or Mao Tse-tung or Castro, but John F. Kennedy.—Senator Morris K. Udal.

Those who would treat politics and morality apart will never understand the one or the other. —John Viscount Morley.

Strictly Personal
Thought Habit Can Be Too Enslaving

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If you are normally a right-handed person, try a little experiment for a half-hour or so: do with your left hand everything that you usually do with your right.

The most simple and obvious acts will become complicated and cumbersome. You will hardly be able to waste or cut or eat your food, and you will quickly become baffled, frustrated and exasperated.

Now imagine this top-sided process intensified a thousandfold, and you may have some idea of how painful and difficult it is to think " " with the left hand" — that is, to reverse our customary process of thought.

Why has science made such enormous strides in knowledge and development, while human affairs still remain largely as they were in the days of the Assyrian Empire? Largely because every advance in science is gained by reversing the spool of habit — by thinking in a way that is opposite to the traditional and customary ways.

Of all the habits of mankind, the habits of thought are the most persistent, the most tenacious, the most unconscious. We put on an idea in the morning as we put on a shoe, left or right first, unconsciously and without ever varying the procedure by a fraction.

And our resistance against changing our habits of thought is immense and unrelenting. If we try to think in a new way, seeing and unrewarding as writing a letter with the left hand. What we are used to seeing as "natural" what is comfortable is good; and what is not — and this is the unspoken belief of almost all people everywhere.

When a man thinks, however, tackles a problem that has hitherto seemed insoluble, he abandons all old assumptions, and all the preconceptions, of the past. Only when he begins to question the basic assumptions he has always held can he make an utterly fresh start, unencumbered by the dead intellectual baggage of the past.

I am not suggesting that knowledge of the past is not useful, or that history and tradition have little value. They have, but they must be used as tools, not as points of departure. Our thinking about them must involve a painful revaluation of our most cherished ideas and ideals.

Not one person in a thousand is willing — although many are able — to think left-handed for more than a few minutes at a time. Yet every important discovery has been made in this way, from Harvey on circulation of the blood to Freud on the role of the unconscious. And we know what derision and abuse such men as these originally had to endure in order to bring to violate the right-handedness of their times.

Panties Show Yens of Reds

Montreal Star

"Give us time and we shall produce panties for your wives in colors which cannot be seen anywhere else," Mao told us for the time being we do not make such things as well as they do abroad, because we direct our main efforts on the development of the means of production." — Premier Khrushchev.

Nothing that Mr. Khrushchev says from the public platform can be dismissed as without some significance, even when the above reply to Soviet writers who have been abroad and who, he says, "change a class point of view for a philistine one" and come home sighing: "Oh, wonderful America, they make better panties than us."

For one thing it confirms that Mr. K. has a sense of humor (if an earthy one) which, for all his present attacks on the Westernization of Soviet intellectual life, has changed the mood of the Soviet Union, probably irreversibly, from the sullen menace of Stalin's time.

For another thing it shows, perhaps unwittingly, that obsession of the Russian people with consumer goods — a yearning for better (and panties) which demands to be satisfied if too much productive capacity is directed to armament.

Military menace may not quite be inversely proportional to the Canadian undergarment trade. But it is comforting to think there is some relationship.

Despite inclement weather which saw rain fall throughout most of the morning and afternoon, contributions to the Minerva Chapter O.E.S. tag day amounted to approximately $225, it was stated by chapter officials. Held for the purpose of raising funds to purchase a mobile kitchen for use overseas, response to the tag day was extremely gratifying to chapter officials who expressed their appreciation to taggers and to the public for their generous contributions.

Boat captains of cargo carriers traversing the Bay of Quinte are wearing satisfied smiles these days and all because the depth of water over the main ship channel level in the bay is the greatest recorded in many years. At the present time the water level in the bay is approximately two feet higher than normal.

Judge Book Ere Reading

Brantford Expositor

Many persons, who are scrupulously careful not to soil their minds by reading it, are most vociferous in their condemnation of the novel "Lady Chatterley's Lover" and insistent in their demands that it be banned once again.

D. H. Lawrence's 35-year-old work has, no doubt, a certain salacious attraction for some, but any attempt to censor anything it is hopelessly inadequate. That is has serious literary merit should not be denied, but it is he's frank — who reads it on the latter account?

A book of entirely different character is now arousing controversy (and enjoying mounting sales in consequence) in Britain. It is by Rt. Rev. John A. T. Robinson, Suffragan Bishop of Woolwich, and its title is "Honest to God."

The bishop has long been a controversial figure because of the unorthodoxy of some of his views, theological and otherwise. The only relationship between him and "Lady Chatterley" is that he appeared as a witness for the defence when the publishers who re-issued D. H. Lawrence item were charged with peddling obscene literature. The case was decided in favor of the publishers and "Lady Chatterley's Lover" sales skyrocketed out of all proportion to real literary merit.

Of course, Bishop Robinson has in hot water in some quarters. Even the Archbishop of Canterbury went so far as to say that his views were "mistaken in getting into the affair. But the bishop is a man of ordained prestige as well as good humor and unlikely to be deterred by criticism, misunderstanding or abuse. He is both gentleman and scholar, for he was one of the translators of the New English Bible: New Testament."

Despite its rather flippant title, the book is not primarily about God. It is definitely not run-of-the-mill stuff. Some of the bishop's views may appear positively scandalized by it, but immediate reader-interest has made it an unexpected best-seller.

Not having read it (but with a copy on order), we offer no opinion as to its contents. In this we are joined by Miss Kay Taylor, former president of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce, who accuses Bishop Robinson of blasphemy. Yet, interviewed by the periodical Time and Tide, the sophisticated lady admitted: "No, I can't say I've read it, but I read an-article about it in News of the World."

That surely settles it — in favor of the bishop's book!

The Real Danger

Windsor Star

The Communist - type dictatorship of Fidel Castro in Cuba is a threat to the whole hemisphere. The real danger posed by Castro is not particularly with this island country. But with the conditions of poverty and degradation among the masses in other Latin American countries. People now under the dictatorship of the right might be very apt to to opt for a dictatorship of the left if it promised them betterment. And even ineffective democracy is no strong bulwark against communism.

Build Liner To Ship Sheep

BBC London Letter

Alfred Holt & Co. (Blue Funnel Line), Liverpool, in Britain, are building a new 8,000 gross tonn passenger - cargo liner, "Centaur," due for launching at the Glasgow shipyards of John Brown and Co., Ltd., on June 20. It will go into the Blue Funnel Lines fortnightly - Western Australia service in spring, 1964, replacing two ships, the "Charon" and the "Gorgon," both built in the 1930's.

"Centaur" will be a highly specialised ship. The special requirements called for her in her design include:

1. Speed of 20 knots to enable her to provide schedule three-weekly sailings;

2. Restricted dimensions and draught to meet conditions demanded by some ports of call;

3. Specially-designed hull to enable the ship to rest on the harbor bed — at the bottom — owing to tidal conditions in certain ports;

4. Fully air - conditioned, luxury accommodation for 200 passengers to enable potential business and holiday traffic to be exploited;

5. Space for 4,500 sheep or 700 cattle and 50 dairy cattle;

6. Dry and refrigerated cargo space with power - operated hatches, deck cranes (as distinct from derricks) and cargo equipment to speed turnaround time in ports.

Of special interest are the facilities for livestock, which will be accommodated in Nos. 2, 3 and 4 holds, each being in all directions and jittering.

It is entirely true that children remember for these conditions for a year or two, and sometimes for considerably longer periods without harm.

However, I do not think that you, the teacher, or I should take this attitude. The psychiatrist should, or at all events a physician.

Medicatives should not be given and then forgotten. They do not act entirely alike in all individuals. Watching for any unwanted effects is a vital part of what we do when we say drugs should be used "under supervision."

It is important to see whether this lad's symptoms (loss of weight, appetite, rest and comfort) are eased by the medication. If so, perhaps the dose or drugs should be changed. There are entirely different ones used for the same essential purpose. One of the psychic energizers might be better and cause less trouble.

Don't argue with the teacher.

Language Row in India

Ottawa Citizen

Compared with what is happening in India's Parliament, the language problem in Canada is almost simple, as a glance at the record of the first five years should make evident. A government bill to continue the use of English as an "associate" language for another 10 years has led to demonstrations outside the Parliament.

When the constitution of republican India went into effect in 1950, Hindi was adopted as the official language, but English remained operative for carrying out the subcontinent and in common use by professional classes. Originally it was to be recognized for 15 years.

That period is nearly over.

The difficulties involved in establishing Hindi as the official language of India aren't small. It is the native tongue of less than 50 per cent of the population, largely concentrated in the north. It will be the chief language of a considerable part of the south, and there are a dozen other languages that could be described as major.

That does not mean dissatisfaction recently when President Radhakrishnan, a Tamil and a former professor of philosophy at Oxford, recently addressed Parliament in English. Some members walked out in protest.

It would seem that as a practical matter English may have to be continued as an "associate" language until such time as the educational system has dealt with a new generation of Indians. Whether English will be permitted to linger on indefinitely is, of course, a matter for all the peoples of India to decide.

At any rate, stresses within the region of a country are not a Canadian peculiarity.

To Your Good Health
Stimulant Pills Advised For Overactive Child

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is your opinion of administering stimulant pills to an active 6-year-old.

My first-grader is hyperactive and of normal intelligence, but he has difficulty "settling down" in class. A school psychiatrist prescribed a stimulant that somehow evens out his activity in the right place at the right time.

I have given them to him for three months. The objective was to set a behavior pattern, and his school work is greatly improved.

Now I wish to stop but his teacher is against it.

This worries me. He has lost weight, his appetite is poor, he complains of headaches and nausea, and his sleep is restless. The teacher says I am silly to worry and that if necessary my son could continue the medication for a year or two without ill effects. What do you think? The drug is dexedrine — O.M.

It may sound wrong to give a stimulant to a child who is hyperactive — unable to sit still, and always has to be doing something.

However, this is exactly what is being done. The treatment has been used by child psychiatrists for more than a decade now. It works, I can't explain how and I am not embarrassed to admit it.

What it does, however, is to channel or concentrate the youngster's energies into useful activity, instead of letting him meander from here to there in all directions and jittering.

It is entirely true that children remember for these conditions for a year or two, and sometimes for considerably longer periods without harm.

However, I do not think that you, the teacher, or I should take this attitude. The psychiatrist should, or at all events a physician.

Medicatives should not be given and then forgotten. They do not act entirely alike in all individuals. Watching for any unwanted effects is a vital part of what we do when we say drugs should be used "under supervision."

It is important to see whether this lad's symptoms (loss of weight, appetite, rest and comfort) are eased by the medication. If so, perhaps the dose or drugs should be changed. There are entirely different ones used for the same essential purpose. One of the psychic energizers might be better and cause less trouble.

Don't argue with the teacher. Talk to the psychiatrist and see whether he is prepared to follow through, or whether some other doctor should supervise.

This approach has helped the boy. Perhaps the general program should be continued, but not at the cost of making him physically upset.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 72 and retired but very active. About a year ago I began to lose my sense of taste, especially sweet. It quickly came to bitter. Is this common in people of my age? — W. W. P.

No sir. One question I would investigate first is whether, over the last year or two, you have been taking some medication regularly. Some drugs can cause this kind of trouble. It is not necessarily an automatic result of being in the 70's, but in some, the special senses may become less acute.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the difference between myitis and myositis? — Mrs. M. A.

Myositis means inflammation of a muscle myelitis is inflammation of th spinal cord, such as occurs with polio.

Next: take a chance on diabetes? For better understanding of this disease, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the booklet entitled "The Sneaky Disease." Please enclose a long, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents to cover cost of printing and handling.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

May 17, 1963 . . .

Edward Jenner, the English physician who originated vaccination, died here 214 years ago today—in 1749 —at Berkeley, Gloucestershire. Although he never passed a medical examination—which was not compulsory at that time—his life work was to lead to protection from the scourge of smallpox. His work started from the belief of the people of Gloucestershire that a person who had had cow pox was immune from smallpox. By 1800 vaccination of cow pox into human beings was practised throughout England.

1939—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth visited the United States.

1841—A rockfall from Cape Diamond took 32 lives in Quebec City.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

An important aspect of the popularity of golf, according to an enthusiastic golfer I encountered seated beside me on the plane the other day, is the wide variety of businessmen to be found in a golf club.

"There's a representative of practically every line of business you can think of," he said. "I haven't bought anything retail for the past five years. Appliances, clothing, drapes, furniture, you name it, today I got wholesale. See these shoes?"

He wriggled about to hold up a foot.

"Thirty dollars in any store you could find. I got 'em for $22.50."

On enquiring the line of business my seatmate was in, he turned out to be in real estate. Naturally, I was interested in what he could do in return for his fellow members.

Sticks to Ship

La Naissa, Florence

Eighteen months after the officers and crew of the Andianna abandoned their shipwrecked vessel off Spain, the 8,000-ton ship's dog still refuses to leave. Fishing boats bring him food, but invariably he swims for the yards to shore for a visit. Recently a sailor aboard a Panamanian ship tried to give him a new home there, but the dog couldn't adapt himself, ran away and swam back to his wreckage.

Novice Team, Driving a Volvo, Wins Rally

A novice team last night won the first Quinte Auto Sports Club "Rallye Petite". Doug Callow driving, and Stan Pritchard navigated a Volvo 544 in the 50-mile event with a loss of only 10.5 penalty points.

The "Rallye Petite"—a short rally — was held before the club's regular meeting. Next time, it covered a route between Belleville and Shannonville, next time, who knows? The event is planned as a regular club feature, preceding the club meeting on the first Thursday of the month. Normally, the winner of each "Rallye Petite" would set the course for the next month's event. However this month's winners are novices, the June rally will be set by Al Day and Jack Reddick, who took second place in last night's event, with six penalty points. They drove a Volvo Amazon Four.

Third place in last night's event went to George Grimson, Jr., driving George Grimson, Jr., in a Morris Oxford.

Membership cards in the Quinte Auto Sport Club were distributed last night to paid up members. A total of eighteen memberships, including singles and couples, have been paid up for a minimum period of six months.

Two Remanded Week After Guilty Plea

Two men in their early twenties today pleaded guilty to contributing to juvenile delinquency in an incident involving a teenage girl.

Charged were Joseph Morris King and Richard Tryon and they were remanded one week for sentence.

Detective Harold Reid said an offence occurred with the girl May 10th in a building forming part of the new expansion project at Quinte Secondary School in Belleville. King was employed by a construction company at the site.

King told Magistrate T. Y. Wills he had been in the reformatory before and blamed the recent incident on drink.

"I have got to have help from drink somehow," he said.

"In other words," rejoined the magistrate, "it is all the Demon Rum and the like button should be pushed and you turn out a nice boy."

He described King's attitude as "pure self-pity."

"There isn't any way you can be put through a machine and come out changed. You have got to do it (yourself)."

"I have no hesitation in remanding them at all," Magistrate Wills said, as he deferred sentence on both men.

"New" Anglican Church Now 50 Years Old

PICTON — One of the most beautiful churches in the district, partly made up of many memorial gifts, the "new" Church of St. Mary Magdalene (Anglican) is marking its 50th anniversary on Sunday.

It was 50 years ago this month that the congregation moved from the "old" church of St. Mary Magdalene on Bridge street to the new edifice on East Main. The "old" church still stands, well preserved with an annual service held this year. At the end of June a plaque is to be unveiled in memory of the first rector, Rev. William Macauley, who gave this town its name.

The original "new" church cost $23,000 and today is valued at $300,000, with stained glass windows alone worth $10,000. In the past eight years, $30,000 has been spent on renovations and additions.

Many Rectors have served the parish, though the average is less than many churches with nine Rectors in the 140 year history of the parish and eight during the last fifty years. The first Rector of the new church was Canon Jacques, but the church was built under Rev. William Armitage who was the Vicar, followed by Rev. Lucius Barber, who was Vicar for a time and later Rector after Canon Loucks retired; Rev. John Lyons followed him and later became Archbishop of the Province of Ontario and eight years later was followed by the Rev. Cecil Winter, Rural Dean of Prince Edward, followed by the Rev. J. E. Creeggan, who is now Archdeacon of Peterborough. He was followed by the Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, rector of Bartlefield, and the present Rector, Canon R. B. DeBois Wright, Rural Dean of Prince Edward.

Many musicians served faithfully over the years in this parish to make it the strength it is, today. Among them are Mrs. Jens who are in charge of the business of the parish and who with the Rector are the recognized governing body of the church by the Synod. At the present time no wardens have offered their services to God and to those of them who have passed into the nearer presence of God we commend them to God's gracious keeping.

P. E. Women Teachers Hold Banquet

PICTON — Women teachers of Prince Edward held their spring banquet at Wellington with more than one hundred in attendance.

Mrs. Clifford McPaul, president, welcomed the guests. Speaking briefly were Miss Mary Bailey, past president FWTAO; S. S. Dunmore, IPS of Hastings and Prince Edward No. 2; Norris Whitney, M.P.P.; Reeve Mark E. Willis, Ameliasburgh.

Musical numbers were given by Misses Carol Allison and Barbara Shortt, K. Barratt and Mrs. M. Davidson.

Mrs. Bernard Brooks introduced the guest speaker, Charles Mustard, Minister Assistant of Teacher Education, Ontario Department of Education.

SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS

After relating some of his humorous school experiences, Mr. Mustard in more serious vein told of facts regarding the teacher shortage in Ontario.

To have a qualified teacher in every school in Ontario, 4,600 students would have to graduate this year, but with only 4,100 attending the Teachers' Colleges there will be a shortage of 500 in September.

Mr. James Bird of Picton cogently thanked the speaker of the evening, after which Mrs. Molly Francombe expressed the appreciation of everyone for the delicious dinner so well served by the ladies of the Eastern Star. Miss Margaret Haight capably thanked all who participated in the musical numbers.

PRESENTATIONS

A pleasant part of the evening was the presentation of Federation spoons by Miss Mary Huff, Director, to four retiring teachers, Miss Viola Valleau, Mrs. Ruth Lancaster, Mrs. Marjorie Thompson and Mrs. P. McAuley, to which Mrs. Lancaster responded. Miss Viola Valleau, Miss M. Cooke and Mrs. Mabel Todd were the recipients of special certificates for members of FWTAO who retire after 25 years of service in the school.

Mrs. Eva Walker, past president, graciously presented Mrs. McPaul, retiring president with a Federation pin. Mrs. McPaul thanked her for her kind words and proffered her thanks to the members of the association and the executive for their co-operation during her two years of presidency.

OFFICERS

The report of the nominating committee was presented by Miss Ivil Stark, and seconded by Miss Margaret Haight.

Past president, Mrs. Gladys McFaul; president, Mrs. Marjorie Norton; first vice-president, Mrs. Edna Wolak; second vice-president, Miss Margaret Haight; secretary, Mrs. Mina Rabbitt; treasurer, Miss Mary Huff.

Conveners: Educational finance, Mrs. Eileen Shannon; educational studies, Miss Eileen McCalpin; superannuation, Mrs. Rae Shortt; status, Mrs. Keitha Gough; legislation, Mrs. Pat Culhane; goodwill, Mrs. Marjorie Palmer.

The singing of "O Canada" brought a most successful evening to a close.

Urge $100,000 Exemption From Death Duties

TORONTO (CP) — All death duties should be eliminated from estates valued at less than $100,000, the Estate Planning Council of Toronto suggested Thursday.

The council, comprised of trust officers, insurance underwriters, chartered accountants and lawyers, told the royal commission on taxation that estates valued at less than $100,000 account for 96 per cent of all taxable estates, yet produce only 7.7 per cent of death-duty revenue.

Since this is only .01 per cent of the national budget, the removal of these estates from taxable categories would mean "relatively little loss of revenue." It would result in "substantial assistance to the small businessman and proprietor, and a significant increase in the work of the (revenue) department."

The council said that "when the capital at death in fact becomes confiscatory, or requires a hasty liquidation at sacrifice prices of a business venture, serious problems result." It was one of the reasons why some taxpayers leave Canada and also why "control of much of our heritage is being sold to foreign investors."

It is of "critical importance" to allow Canadians to retain ownership in the country.

Sunday School Lesson

Courage for Long Pull

By ROY L. SMITH

Most of us manage somegrees with more or less success. It is the long pulls of life that wear us down. This week's Sunday school lesson is aimed at those who have shouldered loads without any promise of ever being able to lay them down.

If good religion can come to the aid of the one who has to climb the long hard hill, then it is worth knowing something about it. If my man's faith has been him through a succession of disasters, then I want to know its secret.

ASK THE OLD MAN

Once in Ireland some years ago a kindly old clergyman was showing me about a rural parish and at a certain point along the little narrow road we came to where a path led off into some deep woods.

"I met old Tim right here the other day, and he said some-thing very interesting," the rural cleric said. "He is an old man, well past eighty, bent heavily on a cane, and is one of our best men."

"As he came down out of the woods he was whistling or at least doing what an old man of 83 does when he tries to whistle. His eyes are not too good, and he did not recognize me until I called 'hello' to him. Then he stopped whistling, stood still, and looked in a most engaging way. 'Tim, you sound happy,' I said, just to get the conversation going. The old man cleared his throat, continued smiling and said, 'I am. Well, what makes you so happy?' And as he cleared his throat again, I knew I was going to get some wise reply, for I was not expecting the one he gave me. 'I'm a Christian,' the old man said, quite simply. 'Well, can't a person be happy unless he's a Christian?' I asked just to make conversation. The old man was very sober now, but he did not have to hunt about in the back of his mind for his answer. 'No sir, I'm quite soberly and then — 'not at my age.'"

It isn't the religious time at the night club, the first time we visit it. It is not the first excitement of the first time we hit the jackpot, and watch the nickels pour out. It is not the tingling of the nerves that comes with the adventurous first excursion into revelry.

The Uniform Sunday School lessons for May 29: "DELIVERANCE IN TROUBLE." Psalms 91; 107.

These are not the indexes by which life and recklessness are to be measured. The one sure guide is the man who has gone all the way in the direction of lust, appetite, dishonor.

Ask the slave how he enjoys his slavery. Ask the addict if he advises addiction. Inquire of the degenerates as to whether or not degeneracy really pays.

TAKE LORD YOUR REFUGE

The Hebrew psalmists had an archaic way of saying things, but as soon as we penetrate their ancient manner of speech, they seem to talk in strangely modern terms. This is where the scholars help us. They are able to strip away the encrustations of the years and get the warnings into modern terms.

What the old singer is saying in this psalm is very simple, very important, and very true. "Put your trust in decency," he says. "Trust the highest and the holiest you know. Be the kindest the circumstances will permit. Stick by the truth as long as you believe it to be true. Just as you would stand by the law of gravity. Trust your better instincts. Assemble your forces in the highest ground in sight. Align yourself with the most nig-minded people you can find. You may not find the place crowded, but it will be wonderful company.

"Don't be ashamed of your best self; stick by your conscience; trust the honorable and be merciful to justify themselves."

FORCES FIGHT FOR US

A certain person once said: "If I had been God, I would have made health contagious, instead of disease." As a matter of fact, that is exactly what God did.

There are a hundred forces battling for our health, for every one that is trying to infect us with disease. Of that there can be no doubt. It is not we who do, then the human race would have vanished long millenia ago.

The psalmist says: "He will give his angels charge of you to guard you." And that is exactly what He has done.

The deeper we probe into the mysteries of the universe, the more impressed we must be with the amazing balance that prevails in all of nature every force of which is served on the side of good management, good fortune and good living.

No man ever stands alone, when he stands for the right.

spacecraft modified for a full-day mission."

The Russians remained far ahead in orbits and flight lengths with a record of 64 and 48 revolutions last August. But they have divulged little of their cosmonauts' condition.

U.S. space agency doctors had expressed fears beforehand that Cooper might faint—or worse—when he came down. They obviously were delighted he did not.

President Kennedy, who congratulated the 36-year-old Oklahoma air force major by telephone a few minutes after he landed, said over radio and television that Cooper's feat "represents a great achievement for our society and a great achievement for free men and women."

"Peace has her victories as well as war, and this was one of the victories for the human spirit today."

Cooper's spirit did not falter when near the end of a "textbook" flight his capsule developed electrical difficulties.

He was in the 18th orbit when a light snapped on which was intended to do so only as he fired his reverse-rockets. The automatic control system was haywire in some inexplicable manner.

Tension mounted aboard this big ship and at the launch headquarters in Cape Canaveral, Fla., where Cooper had blasted off Wednesday morning.

Cooper would have to fire his rockets manually and also personally adjust the vital descent position of Faith 7.

John Glenn, Cooper's fellow astronaut and predecessor in space, undertook to talk him down. Glenn was aboard the tracking ship Coastal Sentry off southern Japan.

Manual re-entry was not a novel situation. Astronaut Scott Carpenter experienced similar trouble—but as a result landed well off target.

ERROR SERIOUS

A mistake of a single second in firing any of the three retro-rockets could mean a landing error of seven miles. A few seconds awry could spell disaster after 580,000 miles of smooth sailing.

Kearnarge, where a happy outlook had turned to tension, sent up her search and rescue planes. Imperturbably, Cooper fired his rockets as he soared over the Red China coast near Shanghai.

Soon, the Faith 7 popped into view almost dead ahead, dangling gently from its 63-foot red-and-white striped parachute.

Scorched by its fall through the atmosphere but solid and intact, it plumped into the five-foot waves. First official estimates put it at mere 7,000 yards off the port bow, but it finally was fixed at 4.4 nautical miles or 8,800 yards.

"I'm in fine shape," Cooper radioed. He had been aloft 34 hours, 20½ minutes.

A little later, he said: "I agree with the other fellows. Wow! Faith 7 did well. I had a few little problems but nothing major."

The next step is the Gemini program—two men in one vehicle—at least 18 months in the future. The next step after Gemini is a manned landing on the moon, predicted in this decade.

Ann Landers

Doctor's Wife Disagrees With Ann's Advice - -

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have wanted to write you on other occasions when I've disagreed with your advice, but somehow I never got around to it. A recent column however, was so stupid I can't put off writing any longer. I mean your insipid reply to the woman whose nutty husband locked up his personal belongings every night.

You told the wife to phone her doctor and he would "take it from there." It is obvious, Ann Landers, that you are not married to a doctor. Well, am, and if he got a call like that my husband would think the woman was nutty and perhaps her husband knew what he was doing.

Too many screwballs in the world are already phoning their doctors at all hours of the day and night to chat about ridiculous things and now you come along and encourage it!

Why didn't you print your husband's business telephone number and tell the crazy woman to call him? — AMAZED AT YOUR IGNORANCE.

DEAR AMAZED — I did not suggest that the woman phone her doctor at home and discuss the problem.

I did suggest that a husband who locks up his car keys, credit cards, loose change and cuff links, every night and pins the key in his pyjama pocket, needs professional help. This is what I meant by "have a talk with your doctor and he will take it from there."

DEAR ANN LANDERS — As the executive director of a home for unwed mothers I was interested in the letter from R.D., the woman who rejoiced that her 13-year-old daughter was going steady. She was in error beginning with her first sentence. The woman wrote: "I am a mother." She is a female baby sitter . . . and a poor one. A mother should have a measure of maturity. Referring to her 13-year-old daughter, she said, "It's a sad sight to see this child, teary-eyed and fretting, waiting for the telephone to ring."

Ask her, Ann, if she thinks it is pleasant to see a 13-year-old girl sitting teary-eyed and fretting . . . pregnant in a maternity home. We get some youngsters who are 11 years of age. I have seen them and I know what I'm talking about. These girls often tell us that going steady was the cause.

R.D. says things are different than when she was a girl. There she is right, Ann. Things are different. The unwed pregnancy rate is more than 30% higher. Five years ago we had empty beds. We added a unit recently and still we have room for only one out of four applicants. Many of the girls who come to us tell us Ann Landers sent them.

Please keep hammering away in your column about the dangers of going steady. From where I sit, things don't look good. — D. P. OF FAIRHAVEN HOME, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR D. P. — Thank you for your letter. Many teenagers are unhappy with me because of my firm and relentless stand against going steady. I intend to keep hammering away on this subject until my typewriter falls apart.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Most people get into trouble when they are awake. Not me. My problems begin when I fall asleep. I talk all night long . . . according to my husband.

He tells me I speak lovingly of every fellow I ever went with . . . except him that is. I even get mushy about the office manager whom I thoroughly dislike. Some of the things I'm supposed to have said to the butcher make me blush.

I can't understand this because I'm quite shy and am very much in love with my husband. I wouldn't think of being unfaithful.

Do people really say what is on their minds when they talk in their sleep? How can I stop it? I'm afraid to go to sleep.—TALKER.

DEAR TALKER — Most sleep-talk is fragmentary, jumbled and makes no sense. I suspect your husband is either needling you, pumping you . . . or both. Forget it and get some rest.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I have a hamburg problem and I was wondering if you would be kind and help me out. I can't seem to get any flavor of meat or seasonings at all other than chips from the wood pile. I buy a piece of round steak and have it ground while I wait at the meat counter. I've asked my neighbors for ideas and they seem to have given up when it comes to cooking hamburg — Lillian W.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Chilled Vegetable Juice; Stuffed Whitefish with Lemon Wedges or Crumbed Fried Smelts with Tartare Sauce; Duchess Potatoes; Broccoli; Rosy Stewed Rhubarb; Spice Cake; Coffee.

ANSWER:

Please see yesterday's column for a few new ingredients to add to hamburg meat cakes — called Victoria Day Burgers. But your trouble is that you are buying meat that has no fat in it. If you must have it ground while you wait buy chuck beef. To make meat patties for 4 people try this one: To 1½ lbs. ground chuck add 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 slice bread soaked in ¼ cup hot water or milk, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 or 2 teaspoons chopped onion, 1 teaspoon parsley flakes and a sprinkle of garlic powder. Make into 8 patties and broil — but be sure they are still pink and soft at centre. Never overcook as that gives them your "wood chip" flavor. Good luck.

QUESTION:

May I have the recipe for sweet-sour sauce that is used on Chinese Egg Rolls? — Mrs. G. F.

ANSWER:

SWEET SOUR SAUCE (for Chinese Egg Rolls and Chinese Eggs):

1-3 cup soy sauce, ⅓ cup water, ⅓ cup canned consommé (undiluted), 2 tablespoons vinegar, ⅓ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ clove garlic crushed, ⅛ teaspoon finely chopped crystalized ginger (optional but recommended).

Combine the soy sauce, water, consomme and vinegar. Mix sugar and cornstarch and stir in. Add garlic and ginger, if used. Cook over slowly, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Delicious with all types of Chinese food.

QUESTION:

. . . May I have your recipe for scrambled eggs made in a double boiler for ?? — Jean T.

ANSWER:

SCRAMBLED EGGS (double boiler)

NOTE:

I have made this with 8 eggs so it will be fine for your 7 but will not be half by readers who have 4 in their families.

8 fresh eggs, ½ cup cream or milk or water (this is in the ratio of 1 tablespoon per egg), 1 teaspoon salt, shake of white pepper, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine.

Break the eggs with a fork or beater with the liquid and salt and pepper just enough to blend. They should not be foamy. Melt butter in double boiler and pour in egg mixture. Cook, stirring slightly below and stir constantly until eggs are barely set. This mixture should be a soft mass, never set in big curds. Remove it from the heat just before it is all for it continues to cook a little.

Women Wear Colorful Garb At Opening

By EDNA BLAKELY

Sunny 70 - degree weather prompted women guests at the Senate ceremonial to wear their finest and most colorful gowns.

Veterans of parliamentary openings said it was the most spectacular since Queen Elizabeth officiated at the 1957 ceremony.

Few furs were worn by women guests. Mrs. Lester Pearson, wife of the prime minister, chose a white satin gown embroidered with red carnations with a matching stole lined with red satin. She wore pearls and a cornelian medal.

Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the opposition leader, who looked fetching in a new chic non hairdo at the opening, wore an emerald green gown embroidered at the bodice.

WEARS WHITE

Seated side by side for the Senate ceremony were other wives of cabinet ministers, including Mrs. Paul Martin, wife of the external affairs minister. She was in a white dress which shaded to turquois at the draped neckline and hem.

The women members of the Commons left the color and the floor-length gowns to the guests. Judy La Marsh, health minister in the Liberal cabinet, chose a two-piece navy blue crepe suit trimmed with white braid at the hipline.

Mrs. Jean Casselman, who represents Grenville-Dundas for the Conservatives, wore a full-skirted navy blue dress with a white organdy collar.

Red Cross Society Needs Sewing Aid

DESERONTO — The Deseronto Branch of the Red Cross Society met at the home of Mrs. Evelyn Stuart, Main St., recently with the president, Mrs. Gordon Walker, in charge. Mrs. Grace Martin was accepted as a new member and Mrs. Keitha Shea was a special guest.

Mrs. Walker presented Mrs. Borden Elliott with a Red Cross Service pin for her outstanding Junior Red Cross work in her school. Mrs. Elliott has been a teacher on the Reserve for 30 years and the presentation was made on behalf of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross.

Mrs. Elliott explained the work in her primary grades with emphasis on good health habits and the preparation for more formal organization of Junior Red Cross work in the upper grades.

MORE SEWERS NEEDED

The meeting was impressed with the need for more women to sew as the divisional tropical quota calls in part for 1800 pairs of boys' shorts, sizes 3 to 14, and only 723 pairs have been given out. Fabric is cut out and the completed pair included as well as written instructions given to those who volunteered to sew. Mrs. Walker has sewing materials for those who wish to help.

The Blood Donor Clinic, to be held in Napanee, on May 29, was also discussed. Mrs. Don Dawson, local chairman, with the energy of a bulldog, to-house canvass to compile the local donor list. There are 200 pints of blood needed.

HOME NURSING COURSE

The Home Nursing Course for women in the Deseronto Reserve has been extended to include the women of the town. The course will be conducted by Miss N. McAlpine of the Indian Health Clinic. Miss Elaine Jones, Divisional Nursunjeer Nursing Services, will confer with Miss McAlpine during the last week in May on last minute details for the classes.

Woman to Be Director Of Dental Hygiene School

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's only registered dental hygienist next fall gets a chance to help expand her profession in the province.

Mrs. Margery Forgay, a mother of three who holds a diploma in dental hygiene from the Eastman School in Rochester, N.Y., will be director of a school of dental hygiene opening at the University of Manitoba.

Because there are so few dental hygienists in Canada, Mrs. Forgay is inevitably asked what she does. Her description of a dental hygienist is a "person who has been specially trained to perform duties related to preventive dentistry."

Many dentists have assistants they have trained, she says, but these assistants are forbidden by law to work inside the mouth of a patient—work a registered dental hygienist may perform.

The new school, within the dental faculty, will be the fourth in Canada and will be financed by a $50,000 grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich. In 1956 the foundation has made 16 grants for establishment of similar schools in Canada and the United States.

DO MANY TASKS

Mrs. Forgay, who has a BA from the University of Saskatchewan says that when the first dental hygienist started in the United States, many of her main duties were scaling and polishing teeth.

Now the profession includes teaching dental habits in schools, community clubs and offices, planning the application of topical fluorides as part of programs for prevention of tooth decay, taking and processing x-rays, and performing other tasks that prove time-consuming for dentists.

During the two-year course, students in dental hygiene will study laboratory courses in dental students and take classes from some of the same instructors Mrs. Forgay will teach the remaining courses.

She says there is a need for trained dental hygienists in the public health field and would like to see the number of schools increased to provide their facilities to make possible national standards and examinations.

Mrs. Forgay says that while the profession primarily attracts women, psychology is that they can "come back to it" after taking time out to raise a family—it is also open to men.

TO DIRECT NEW SCHOOL

—Mrs. Margery Forgay, Manitoba's only dental hygienist, has been named director of a new school of dental hygiene opening next fall at the University of Manitoba. The course, expected to attract mainly women although it's also open to men, will prepare students for a career in preventive dentistry. (CP Photo)

When It's Visiting Time He Gets Ducks' Cousins

GRANITEVILLE, Que. (CP) — Clifford Rediker has switched from hunter to healer.

The 57-year-old mechanic lives on an acre of farmland beside a brook in this community on the Quebec-Vermont border 140 miles southeast of Montreal with his wife and 18-year-old son Dale.

His land is populated with five species of ducks and geese he raises, and is visited every migration season by wild cousins of his birds.

"In the old days I used to go up north and bring down the limit—20 birds," he says. "Now if I go out it's more likely to be with my binoculars and movie camera than with a shotgun."

He has also become a bird surgeon, patching up the injured birds that come to him from various sources — neighbors who know of his work, passing flocks that seem to sense that leaving their maimed members on the Rediker property is leaving them in safe hands.

"Last April 5, for example, a migrating flock of white snow geese alighted here leaving an injured goose," says Mrs. Rediker.

She fed it and it stayed several hours but was able to fly again and had gone before Mr. Rediker got home from work to try any repair work on it.

STITCHED WITH NYLON

An injured goose that landed last November, however, had its wing stitched up with nylon thread and is still here.

"I hope it feels equal to flying out on its own this summer," says Mr. Rediker.

The Redikers have mallard, wood and muscovy ducks and Canada and snow geese nesting on their property. Most were bought or hatched by birds that had been bought. Others arrived, tame or wild, injured or sound, and stayed.

"It is the resident birds on the ground or water that seem to attract such wild birds to land here," Mr. Rediker says.

The attraction is so strong, in fact, that he twice has had to sign a commitment to pay $300 if he ever uses his birds as decoys to draw wild ones into season range.

While the Redikers are careful not to take advantage of the situation, they do kill the odd one of their own birds, and Mrs. Rediker says duck eggs are excellent for cooking.

"They're richer than hen's eggs and I'm speaking from experience because I've raised chickens longer than I've raised ducks."

do more than any previous administration.

Prime Minister Pearson countered neatly a few minutes later.

Congratulating Speaker Macnaughton on his unanimous election, Mr. Pearson said he could not offer him any hope for income tax relief "because of the terrific deficits" the Liberals inherited from the Conservatives.

That barb was aimed at a sore spot for the Progressive Conservatives who ran up a string of budget deficits during their term of office, including one that was a peacetime record.

The rest of the Commons' sitting followed ancient ceremonial.

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas noted that Mr. Macnaughton would have to be "dragged" to the Speaker's chair as part of an ancient tradition dating to the early British parliaments when the Speaker, as spokesman for the Commons in dealings with the monarch, faced possible loss of his head. Sometimes the Commons irritated the king.

He said this show of reluctance by the Speaker might not be all pretence. There was a hardship involved in the job as well as great responsibility.

In other routine moves the House approved Mr. Pearson's nomination of Lucien Lamoureux (L—Stormont) as deputy Speaker and Herman M. Batten (C—Humber-St. Georges) as deputy chairman of house committees.

A striking committee was established to appoint standing committees. Members are Liberal Secretary J. W. Pickersgill, Alexis Caron (L—Hull), Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre), Eric Winkler (PC—Grey-Bruce), Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) and Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre).

pineapple juice. Several hours later, he ate a dinner of steak, green salad and milk in the admiral's cabin.

"He hadn't drunk all the water he wanted to during the flight," Pollard said, "and he was a little dehydrated. He had wanted to save as much as he could in case of an emergency after landing."

The physician reported: "Cooper said he found weightlessness quite enjoyable. He said it was easy to sleep in the capsule but after he had napped for a half hour to 45 minutes he would awaken quite rested."

Pollard estimated Cooper slept a total of 7½ hours in catnaps.

When Cooper first emerged from the Faith 7 capsule, Pollard said the astronaut told him "Dick, I don't feel too good" but the wooziness quickly passed.

Cooper's eyes were red and his voice was slightly hoarse. The doctor attributed this to "the constant breeze of 100-per-cent oxygen in his face."

Asked what the flight proved, Pollard told reporters: "There is no present indication from a cursory examination that this long period of weightlessness has caused any bad effects. If the problem had not presented itself by now, I cannot imagine anything serious developing.

"We've gone to 34 hours now without any apparent serious problems. I just cannot believe that anything serious will turn up later in Cooper's condition."

Successful Living

By DORIS CLARK

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Here's Help for the Forties

DEAR DORIS — I sure like the way you give out with the answers. The whole family reads your column.

Where could I get facts on the menopause? I'm in my early forties and don't know what to expect. I don't put much credit in the things I hear about it. Seems women like to make a big issue out of it. —HAYSEED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR HAYSEED — For some it is a big issue. Others are blessed with the health and disposition to take it in their stride.

Glandular changes and the aging process do upset equilibrium. There is little written about it except what the medicos write for one another. But I am sending you an article, written especially for women to read, about it; also the names of book-chapters containing facts about just what is happening and how to cope.

DEAR DORIS — My girl friend insists that I ask her brother to be my escort to our graduation dance. I intend to ask some one else whom she dislikes. I know I wouldn't have fun with her brother.

If I ask this other guy and not my girl friend's brother, she will be very angry and will probably never speak to me again. Should I go with her brother and keep her friendship or go with whom I please and have a good time? — GRADUATE.

DEAR GRADUATE — Since you know your own mind, go by it. If your friend can run you in this, it may turn into a bad habit.

CONFIDENTIAL TO IN LOVE AND ALONE — Don't go steady with either of them. You will do much better if you play the field.

(Don't just muddle along. A letter to Doris, a trained social worker, could be your first step towards Successful Living.)

TOWNSHIP OF SIDNEY

ANNUAL REPORT

AUDITORS REPORT

The Reeve,
Members of the Municipal Council, and Ratepayers,
The Corporation of
The Township of Sidney,
Ontario.

Gentlemen:

I have made an examination of the books of account and supporting records of The Corporation of the Township of Sidney and the consolidated Boards for the calendar year ended December 31, 1962. Financial transactions between the Township and the Boards and also between the individual Boards and I now present them together with my comments thereon.

COMMENTS

My examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as I considered necessary in the circumstances.

CAPITAL AND LOAN FUND SECTION:

I have requested, but to date have not received, the certification of the Township solicitor that the municipality has proper title to all property and that the property is registered in the names of the Township.

CORPORATION—REVENUE FUND SECTION:

Under date of October 27, 1961, I made a special report to the municipal council concerning arrears of taxes, which, in my opinion, required specific action, either to be collected or to be written off for cause, I note that subsequent to this time, some action has been taken in this regard, but the total arrears have increased from $24,000.00 as of April 15, 1961, I circulated all outstanding arrears of taxes. The replies and returns relative to this circumstance have been received and it would appear that considerable additional effort will be required to ascertain the present ownership of the properties in the whereabouts of some of the persons involved.

I recommend that your Treasurer issue duplicate, serially prenumbered receipts for all moneys received regardless of what form they come from.

When the plumbing inspector turns moneys over to your Treasurer, along with copies of the plumbing inspection permits, I recommend that your Treasurer issue a receipt for this money and that he retail the plumbing inspection permits pertaining thereto.

I suggest a bank account is presently maintained for Court Cross Road operations. This account should be used for such purposes at this time. I recommend that it be closed into the general account of the Corporation.

I recommend that the various amounts due to and from school boards be investigated and settled.

I recommend that your Treasurer write up his books of original entry every month as the transactions occur.

BATAWA PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD:

mic targets. Finance Minister Walker Gordon is expected to bring down a budget about mid-June.

The government is well along the road to setting up a royal commission on biculturalism as a forum for defining problems and recommending solutions in relations between French and English.

On the social welfare front, work is being done on legislation to establish a contributory portable pension plan, designated as a priority measure for the opening session.

TO SET ZONE

The government also is moving toward establishing a 12-mile coastal fishing zone to protect fisheries and has promised an independent commission to redrew the map of electoral districts.

A federal - provincial conference to work out a program of fisheries development and establishment of a capital fund for the Atlantic Development Board also are expected to be part of its program.

The governing Liberals are under one obvious handicap. With 129 members they are four short of a majority in the 265-seat chamber. Progressive Conservatives have 95, Social Credit 23 and New Democrats 17. There is one independent Social Credit MP, Dr. Guy Marcoux.

Some of the issues which divide the parties already are out in the open. The government is going ahead with plans to acquire nuclear weapons, a question which divided the parties in the last Parliament.

Two former prime ministers — Mr. Diefenbaker and Louis St. Laurent, Liberal prime minister from 1948 until 1957 — were on hand for the opening. Mr. St. Laurent as a guest and not a participant.

Batawa

BATAWA — Mr. Doug Armstrong of Toronto spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Blair spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. R. Row in Brockville.

Registration of Kindergarten pupils for next year in Batawa Public School will take place on May 18th, from 3 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. Children who reach their 5th birthday in 1963 are eligible.

Negotiations for sub-contract work by Bata Engineering Dept. for "Atom Energy of Canada Ltd., involving the supply of important parts has been concluded.

The latest hydraulic clickers designed and built by Batawa Engineering Division will be on exhibition at the forthcoming National Manufacturers' Show in Cincinatti, Ohio, May 16-19th.

On Sunday evening the Eastern Ontario String Quartet was enthusiastically acclaimed for a fine performance at Masaryk Hall, in Toronto.

Mrs. Olive Ames, Reg. N., Bata factory nurse, celebrated her birthday on Monday.

Those eligible for Batawa hospitalization insurance are advised on increased benefits which became effective on October 27th, 1962; which in some cases might make them eligible for further claims as these extra benefits are retroactive to that date. Anyone who feels they have a claim should discuss it with Mr. Ralph Armstrong, paymaster.

Several important guests visited Batawa on Tuesday. They were: Mr. J. T. Fitzgerald, marketing manager of Polyxar International S. A. Croydon, England; Mr. G. Bagley, liason officer Polymer Corporation, Sarnia, Ontario; Mr. Douglas Nelson, Polymer New Product Division and Mrs. J. Walker, senior chemist of Polymer Corporation.

Weather has delayed work on Batawa soccer field, but indications are that the area will dry quickly and the field will be put in order for a good season's play.

Mr. Joseph Hasma, of the Batawa Engineering, celebrated his birthday on Monday.

The Batawa Branch of the Czechoslovakian Association of Canada are sponsoring a big dance on May 31st in the Batawa Community Centre.

Batawa Engineering has just completed a unique machine to be used in conjunction with "Monoplax Production," in Baghdad.

Throne Speech Was Official Confirmation of What P. M. Has Been Saying for Weeks

OTTAWA (CP)—The new Liberal government set out Thursday to create an improved economic and political climate with a throne speech that was, in essence, a dignified official confirmation of what Prime Minister Pearson has been saying for weeks.

The accent was economic and the keynote was the oft-stated Pearson objective of "increasingly high confidence" in Canada's economy and currency, both at home and abroad. The speech warned that "new paths that will lead us surely forward" must be found.

MPs who gathered to hear the parliamentary stage - setting read by Chief Justice Robert Taschereau in the absence of ailing Governor - General Georges Vanier, heard nothing that surprised them.

High unemployment was labelled by the speech as Canada's most urgent domestic problem. The speech was bluntly imperative in offering the solution: "We must create new industries." All the key proposals seemed to be aimed at that target.

Among these are plans for the new department of industry; a capital fund for the Atlantic Development Board; creation of a municipal development and loan board; a Canada - development corporation to channel savings to new industry; establishment of an economic council; a program for national fishery development, and revival of the former Conservative government's "manpower adjustments" scheme.

MENTIONS MEASURES

Keeping the cloak of secrecy over the forthcoming budget proposals, the throne speech added that "other measures will be put before you to assist in increasing production and employment in Canada."

The budget has been promised within the much-heralded "60 days of decision." Thursday was the 25th day since the Liberals took office.

The budget will outline the cash side of several of the economic proposals. Meanwhile, a government spokesman said it would be "not unreasonable" to speculate that the municipal board will have capital of around $50,000,000, and the Atlantic Development Board about $100,000,000.

It remains to be seen how the business and investment community will respond to the throne speech proposals. The stock market, meanwhile, was turbulent.

SAY INDECISIVE

Conservative, Social Credit, and New Democratic Party spokesmen said the new speech was indecisive, was empty of solutions to current problems and of small consequence.

In the non-economic sphere, the throne speech attached heavy emphasis to Mr. Pearson's plan for the commission to study "thoroughly, but urgently, how the fundamentally bicultural character of Canada may best be assured and the contributions of other cultures recognized."

"The greater Canada that is to be shall not and must not be built not on uniformity but on continuing diversity, and partnership is the basic relationship of English-speaking and French - speaking people. My ministers are determined that the partnership shall be truly equal."

Good Number Of Promises Not in Speech

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—The throne speech opening Parliament was just as interesting for what it left unsaid as for what it said. A goodly list of items promised by the Liberals in their successful campaign for the April 8 election did not show up in the speech's outline of legislation for the first session of the 26th Parliament.

Some, of course, could still be introduced. The speech from the throne is not necessarily all-inclusive.

Probably the two pledges most noticeable absent were those for a national scholarship plan to send needy students to university and the restoration of the equalization principle in taxation sharing with the provinces.

SCHOLARSHIP PLAN

During the campaign Prime Minister Pearson outlined a plan for the 10,000 annual scholarships of $1,000 each to able but needy students. He suggested that, as a private policy item, the kind of thing "we cannot afford not to do."

EQUALIZE TAXES

On tax-sharing, the Liberal program called for restoration of the principle of equalization payments developed under the previous Liberal government, designed to ensure poorer provinces would get per-capita revenues from personal and corporation taxes equal to the income of the richest ones.

Other missing items include:

1. Measures to enable farmers to establish national marketing boards for their products, apparently requiring provincial co-operation.

2. Payment of family allowances for children past age 16 if they remain in school.

3. Amendments to the federal labor code to provide a $1.25 hourly minimum wage, 40-hour work week, two-week annual vacations and seven paid holidays for all workers under federal jurisdiction or working on federal contracts.

4. A distinctive national flag. (The Liberals said this would be done within two years.)

MEET THE SPEAKER — Home and School Council past-president Mrs. B. Stenson, right, introduces her successors, Mrs. Eleanor Jourard, vice-president and Mrs. Elizabeth Fort, new president, to guest speaker Lloyd Dennis at annual meeting in Belleville last night.

Veteran Leader In Office for Another 4 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Hall, veteran leader of Canada's 100,000 non - operating railway employees, will remain in office for at least another four years, it was learned here Thursday night.

Mr. Hall, 69, had been facing compulsory retirement because of his age.

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks (CLC), of which he is vice-president in Canada, has a rule calling for retirement of all officers at age 70.

It was learned, however, the union has decided at its international convention in Los Angeles to appoint Mr. Hall to a new post of executive assistant with responsibility and authority for Canada.

Parliamentary Notebook

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Talk of a permanent Speaker for Canada's House of Commons cropped up afresh on Thursday as the Commons chose Alan Macnaughton as its presiding officer.

The suggestion of a permanent speaker was revived by Conservative Leader Diefenbaker who remarked that he had tried unsuccessfully to make such an appointment. Prime Minister Pearson, his son, who had spoken in favor of a permanent Speakership when in opposition, might now have a change.

However, observers drew the conclusion that Mr. Diefenbaker's remarks and those of Mr. Pearson proposed Mr. Macnaughton as a permanent appointee.

Their reasoning was based on comments by informed sources that Mr. Diefenbaker didn't reply to a letter from Mr. Pearson saying he planned to back Macnaughton's nomination as speaker and inviting the Conservative leader's comments.

When Mr. Pearson first announced his intention of nominating the 64-year-old Mr. Macnaughton's nomination as speaker and inviting the Conservative leader's comments. Montreal Mount Royal, there was some speculation that his long-sought rise into some form of permanent Speakership. Usual procedure now is that a Speaker holds the office for the life of a Parliament.

RECALL TWO OTHERS

Two former Speakers in recent years—Hon. Rene Beaudoin and Hon. Roland Michener—remained the Speaker through under circumstances which led many to anticipate one of them might receive a permanent appointee.

Mr. Michener's nomination by Mr. Diefenbaker, then prime minister, was seconded by Mr. Pearson who then was Opposition leader. Mr. Beaudoin was nominated by Louis St. Laurent as prime minister and seconded by the Opposition leader, Hon. George Drew.

Mr. Beaudoin fell from opposition favor during the bitter parliamentary pipeline debate of 1956 and became the object of a censure motion moved by Mr. Drew.

Mr. Michener, who was particularly popular with the opposition Liberals in the 24th Parliament and is a personal friend of Mr. Pearson, was defeated in the 1962 general election.

Latest Capsule Is Beautiful Baby Girl

TORONTO (CP)—A proud new father in Toronto was really swept up in enthusiasm over Gordon Cooper's space flight.

He placed the following birth notice in Thursday's Telegram and in The Star:

Ward—Well I see Cooper finally went into orbit yesterday. So what. Nora and I have gone through this countdown procedure seven times already and each one has been all go. Our latest capsule is a beautiful 8 lb. 14 oz. Venus model named Shawn Erica, launched 9:13 a.m., Tuesday, May 14, at Women's College Hospital. She follows five Venus and one Atlas type capsules now in a state of semi-controlled flight. I now retire from further research in this line. Eric.

The Telegram reprinted the birth notice on the front page alongside its dispatches of the astronaut's flight.

SEES A WEAKNESS

MONTREAL (CP) — The fourth annual labor - management seminar has decided that one of Canada's weaknesses is disunity of both management and labor. The seminar, one of a series initiated by the National Productivity Council, ended a two - day Montreal meeting Thursday with 150 delegates agreeing on the need for closer labor - management-government co-operation, but unsure how it can be got.

Parents Cannot Resign Process of Rearing Children To Agencies Council Told

Character development of offspring is failing victim to the push - button processes of contemporary society, a group of parents were warned here last night, by a prominent High School principal.

"Life is so automatic we may tend to believe development of children is equally so," Lloyd Dennis, principal of Deer Park Senior School, told the annual meeting of the Belleville and District Home and School Council.

"We do not push buttons yet to do everything — and rearing a child is one of them.

"(Child development) takes a great deal of skill that, I would suggest, we are losing in this modern age."

And, stressed the school principal, parents cannot resign the intricate process of rearing their children to outside agencies, whether school or church.

School teachers may be necessary to the life of children "but are secondary to you", he told the parents."

The home "is the greatest institute of love and learning the world has ever introduced and you are its teachers."

His lengthy address explored many aspects of home life which will eventually reflect on the child's character when it is grown to maturity.

DO NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY

He warned that a danger in contemporary home life was posed by the decline of the "father image" in favor of a single - parent family - mother influence.

Today, the father at home "has declined to a ridiculous position — if any position at all."

"We laugh at dad. We don't take dad seriously any more," said Mr. Dennis.

It was not material to accept the argument that the mother should rules slipping almost single-handed.

Discipline was basic to upbringing, but it is also a prime necessity to infuse the child with a sense of values — and again was too often left to outside groups.

"Talk about children not having any (values)," said Mr. Dennis. "We don't have any.

"The game of life has certain rules by which we play and we determine the rules by the goals we wish to score," and these values must be discussed with the family.

"Does your son and daughter have any idea of the goals you wish to achieve?" he asked the assembly. "Do you help them understand we live and establish real rules because we established goals?"

"Your child will find his own if you don't establish them, perhaps," he warned.

Change is the perpetual process of society, yet parents' social attitudes become more and more inflexible as life goes on. Particularly so today when the rate of change is so great, parents are in danger of being submerged by it, and give up attempting to understand it or pass that understanding along to their children.

GREATER ELASTICITY

Children must be prepared for the intangible phenomenon of change and this calls for a greater elasticity in parental attitudes.

"Some of the ruts that you and I establish for ourselves are unworthy of that establishment. They do not fit the lives of our children.

Finding the proper solution to personal and social problems must also be taught the child, said Mr. Dennis. And again, this will be reflected by parental attitudes to similar situations.

"It isn't that we don't solve our problems. It is, perhaps, we don't find the solution that is best for our society or best for us."

As an institute of learning, the home must have a recognized curriculum. And the most important subjects should be adequacy and security "for your children. Let's see that we give it to them," he advised the parents.

Last night's meeting, which assembled nearly 100 parents of Home and School groups in Belleville area also formally returned a new executive. They are: Mrs. Elizabeth Fort, president; Mrs. Eleanor Jourard, vice-president; Mrs. Pauline Cahill, recording secretary; Mrs. Helen Savage, corresponding secretary, and John Welch, treasurer.

Rising Price of Sugar Will Likely Reflect at Grocery Store Level for Many Items

NEW YORK (AP)—The rising price of sugar reverberated in the stock market Thursday.

And new signs arose that wholesale markups in the United States soon will be reflected at the grocery store level in higher prices for candy, preserves, soft drinks, ice cream, syrups and other sugar-using items.

They may even lead to smaller packs of chewing gum, one producer said. But nothing was in sight to match the doubling of retail prices that has hit some commodities in Brazil, and severe dislocations in some other countries.

(The wholesale price of sugar at Canadian refineries rose 25 cents for 100 pounds Thursday, bringing the Toronto price to $8.35. The increases this week total $1.60. Prices in Montreal, Toronto supermarket chains and most other stores held for 10 pounds to 83 from 79 cents.)

In the background is a tight tilting of the world sugar supply rooted in crop failures, the harvest difficulties in Europe, Cuba and other growing areas.

STOCKS RISE

The shortage sent sugar issues spiraling Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. American Crystal Sugar jumped $3 to $53.50 a share. Central Aguirre Sugar rose $1.88 a share.

A wholesale price increase by major New York refiners earlier earlier this week was the 12th of the year, lifting one key grade to $14.25 from $13.50.

The level was the highest since the world - wide sugar shortage following the First World War when prices skyrocketed to roughly twice the present level, then abruptly collapsed.

Some experts predict a continued climb until fall when growers in the U.S. and Europe begin harvesting sugar beets, a cheaper substitute for the scarce variety produced from cane.

Several candymakers have reported rises in wholesale prices, and some—including the Walter H. Johnson Candy Company of Chicago—say they are considering a reduction in the size of bars.

Opposition Not Happy With Speech Content

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen heralded a "business as usual" line with the new Liberal government in their expressions of disappointment in the throne speech of Thursday's throne speech.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker Churchill said the legislative plans outlined were platitudinous and uninspiring. "Only a brave new world and new frontiers had been expected.

"Like so many things in life, expectation exceeds realization," he said. "We were expecting a brave new world and new frontiers. We heard instead platitudes and nothing that was inspiring except the manner in which re-introduced the good legislation we proposed to the last Parliament."

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said the speech promises "that matters of detail will be taken care of."

ILLS REMAIN

"Our basic, underlying economic problems will continue without change."

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said "the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse." There were some helpful proposals if, on closer examination, they were not found to be hedged about with qualifications and restrictions.

There were "serious omissions"—no provision for a national health insurance program or for "the large-scale public works and housing which are necessary if we are to grapple with unemployment."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who launched the opposition attack in the throne speech debate exit Monday, avoided reporters and cameramen who had asked earlier that he be available for comment. He left by a rear entrance of the Commons chamber, possibly intent on saving his criticisms for Monday.

Had No Right To Fire Gun Says Magistrate

WALTON, Ont. (CP)—Harold Weise, 33, of Milton, previously acquitted on a charge of wounding a 13-year-old girl trespassing on his farm, was fined $150 Thursday when tried again for the same offence.

Magistrate A. D. Barron said Weise had "absolutely no right to fire a gun" to stop Patsy Cook, 13, and her brother John, 13, both of Milton, as they fled his farm last November.

"We all get upset at vandalism by children and we all have to expect this as a part of growing up," the magistrate said.

The Ontario Court of Appeal ordered a new trial last December when it was argued that Magistrate E. M. Langdon had acquitted Weise without hearing defence evidence. Magistrate Langdon held that Weise had not used excessive force to stop the children.

Weise testified he shouted "stop or I'll shoot" before firing twice while chasing the children.

U.S., Canada Move Quickly On Warheads

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States have moved quickly to eliminate military negotiations to provide Canada with nuclear warheads.

U.S. informants estimated Thursday the stockpile agreement should be completed in a month.

The informant said negotiations have been opened both here and at Ottawa and that discussions so far are satisfactory. But there are, he said, time-consuming details involved, each requiring a certain amount of bargaining.

At his meeting with President Kennedy at Hyannis Port, Mass. last weekend, Prime Minister Pearson confirmed his government's intention to initiate discussions with the U.S. government, "leading without delay to the early fulfilment of Canada's existing defence commitments in North America and Europe, consistent with Canadian parliamentary procedures."

The informant said the present phase of ironing out the long - standing nuclear difficulties in their expressions of disappointment in the throne speech of Thursday's throne speech.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker Churchill said the legislative plans outlined were platitudinous and uninspiring. "Only a brave new world and new frontiers had been expected.

"Like so many things in life, expectation exceeds realization," he said. "We were expecting a brave new world and new frontiers. We heard instead platitudes and nothing that was inspiring except the manner in which re-introduced the good legislation we proposed to the last Parliament."

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said the speech promises "that matters of detail will be taken care of."

ILLS REMAIN

"Our basic, underlying economic problems will continue without change."

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said "the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse." There were some helpful proposals if, on closer examination, they were not found to be hedged about with qualifications and restrictions.

There were "serious omissions"—no provision for a national health insurance program or for "the large-scale public works and housing which are necessary if we are to grapple with unemployment."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who launched the opposition attack in the throne speech debate exit Monday, avoided reporters and cameramen who had asked earlier that he be available for comment. He left by a rear entrance of the Commons chamber, possibly intent on saving his criticisms for Monday.

Rent Allowance For Relief Said Not High Enough

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal welfare officials sometimes allow families on relief to live in unsafe housing because they cannot get adequate rental allowances from the provincial government, Mrs. Nora Fox, director of the Brantford Children's Aid Society, said Thursday.

And because the cheap housing is often run-down, she said, relief families spend excessive amounts on fuel to keep the premises warm.

Mrs. Fox made the statements during a discussion on rental allowances at the Ontario Welfare Council's conference here. More than 100 delegates to the conference voted to petition the provincial government for higher allowances for relief families in smaller centres.

The government decided in 1961 to share with the five largest municipalities—Metropolitan Toronto, London, Windsor, Hamilton and Ottawa—the cost of giving needy families up to $75 rental allowance, above the maximum monthly relief payment of $180.

WANTS EXTENDED

The council wants the principle extended to all other communities.

Delegates also agreed to urge a re-examination by the province of basic welfare allowances and unseen welfare administration in one municipality to another, after Raymond Peters, chairman of an association of unemployed men in Peterborough, said needy families cannot live in health and decency under present relief allowances.

Mr. Peters said the municipal welfare officer has too much to say in who receives assistance and at what rates.

African Leaders Meeting To End the Colonial Age

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

African leaders are gathering in Addis Ababa this week under the uniting drive of two forces: Geography and the powerful desire to end forever the continent's colonial age.

The meeting in the Ethiopian capital is designed to accomplish what has never before proved possible — an alliance among more than 30 countries whose differences are almost as vast as the continent.

If the goal is achieved, it could lead to immense pressure on the remaining white-ruled territories in Southern Africa, Portuguese colonies of Angola and Mozambique; Southern Rhodesia, ruled by whites, and the apartheid regime of South Africa's Premier Verwoerd.

The meeting comes at a time when these white regimes are intensifying their defensive. Excluding South Africa, 22 African nations now sit in the United Nations. All but three have entered since the end of the 1950s.

Together with the Communist bloc they have put continual pressure on the white rulers, including economic action if Britain demanding an end to apartheid, Portugal's ouster from Africa, and action to turn over power to the Negro majority in Southern Rhodesia.

COULD PUSH STRUGGLE

The Addis Ababa conference could push the struggle one step farther.

A resolution before this week's foreign ministers conference—preparing the way for the heads-of-state meeting starting Wednesday—would set up a special fund for the support and training of liberation fighters.

The resolution, brought in by Sudan Foreign Minister Mohamed Khelr, also would set up a complete boycott on trade with South Africa and ban all airspace and territorial waters to South Africa's ships and planes.

The big question now is whether the 31 delegations at Addis Ababa can overcome the differences of race, religion, color and language—as well as those political, social and economic — that until now have dampened the dream of pan-Africanism.

Six Convicted Of Raping 14-Year-Old

TORONTO (CP)—A Supreme Court jury deliberated nearly seven hours Thursday before convicting six men of raping a 14-year-old girl last October.

Ross Mete, 20, Guerino Molinaro, Alfredo Fogzia, 22, Frank Beslincan, 21, his brother Dino, 18, and their cousin Francesco Beslincan, 24, all of Toronto, had pleaded not guilty. They were remanded in custody to May 24.

The mother of one of the accused was helped from the courtroom when she broke into uncontrollable weeping and two other mothers went into hysterics outside.

The girl was on her way home from a church dance with her boy friend, Attilio Forcelli, 19, of Toronto, when they accepted a ride from the accused.

She testified that they were driven to a suburban sideroad and that each of the accused raped her. Forcelli said he was unable to stop them.

The jury comprised nine men and three women, the largest number of women ever to sit on a Supreme Court jury in Ontario.

Socred Leaders At Odds Over Member's Status

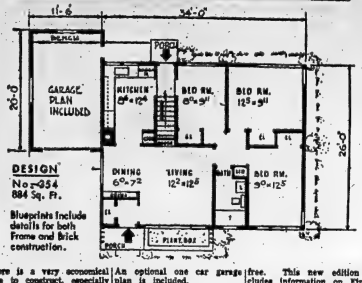
OTTAWA (CP)—The Social Credit leadership appeared at odds Thursday over the proper course for the party's former MP, Dr. Gaz Marcoux.

Deputy Leader Real Caouette called for the resignation from Parliament of Dr. Marcoux, MP for Quebec - Montmorency who quit the Quebec wing of the party last month but still re-signed his post as whip.

National Leader Robert Thompson declined comment on Mr. Caouette's statement, but flatly "I don't agree with that."

"As long as he (Dr. Marcoux) has approval of his constituency organization, he has the right to sit in Parliament," Mr. Thompson said.

He added that his invitation to Dr. Marcoux to return to the party fold remains open. However Dr. Marcoux felt he could return he would be welcome.



Mr. Caouette said in a statement issued earlier that Quebec-Montmorency is a Social Credit constituency and should be represented in Parliament by a Social Credit member.

Dr. Marcoux has said he will sit in the Commons as an independent Social Credit MP.

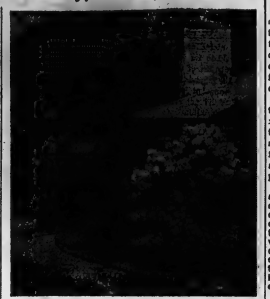
Well Landscaped Grounds Will Greatly Enhance a Home's Beauty, Charm, Value

Modern home improvement should start with one's land, says the American Association of Nurserymen. The costliest mansion surrounded by bare and eroded soil is a depressing sight. By comparison, a four-room house on a beautifully landscaped plot can provide a lovely setting for more beautiful and gracious living.

Natural beauty on the land has no limitations of wealth! Anyone can achieve it. The principal requirement is an appreciation of the land on which the family lives and what it can do for those who treat it kindly by planning and maintaining it.

Success in landscaping the property requires, as in everything else, a sound approach.

1. Sit down and figure out what you wish to achieve — outdoor living, armfulls of flowers, tree-ripened fruits, cool shade, play areas. It may be a combination of all.



2. Start with a plan to achieve what you wish. Where you want your fruits and berries; where the ideal spot is for outdoor living (you may also wish to screen it with shrubs or trees from the neighborhood generally). Shade should be where you most desire it. The foliage of the tree when mature should be between the place where you want shade and the sun. A professional plan by a landscape nurseryman often is advisable.

3. Plant according to the plan. At the same time, after each plant is placed in the ground, stand off and observe whether you are planting it in exactly the right place. If not, shift it a little until it is most pleasing to the eye.

4. Maintain your plants once they are in the ground. A good soaking with water only when the soil becomes dry is a general rule. Fertilizing and mulching may be needed. Get advice from neighbors, nurserymen, state university extension services. Many pamphlets are available. Read the garden stories in your local newspaper for ideas.

Property improvement by landscaping and gardening can be a very rewarding experience.

Landscaping can also be a sound investment, the trees and shrubs growing in value from year to year, increasing the value of the property up to 25 percent or more.

BEAUTIFUL APPROACH to this home is created by carefully proportioned grouping of colorful rhododenros and other shrubbery.

New Room Units Take Less Space

Today's room air conditioners are more compact than those even a few years old, thanks to recent engineering developments. Some units are designed to fit flush, or nearly flush with both the inside and outside walls.

Both window and through-the-wall units are available in new colors, finished and materials and feature styling that makes them look more like an integral part of a room. Some are now designed to blend with period or modern furniture.

Room air conditioners are available to meet virtually any cooling situation. Families can choose between standard window units or similar models that are installed through the wall of a house. Window units can fit either double-hung or casement windows, while through-the-wall models can be installed nearly any place desired on an outside wall.

Both window and through-the-wall units are available in a wide range of cooling capacities.

New Papers Are Versatile

Today's wallpaper designs reflect a renewed interest in the more traditional type of interior design.

However, many of the new wallpaper designs, though traditional in feeling, have fresher colors, and the patterns are scaled-down, to meet the requirements of today's less lavish homes. Current papers are not only more elegant in feeling and exciting in color, but more versatile too.

They are no longer limited to just one furniture style. For example, many damask patterns formerly associated with traditional furnishings are now equally at home in provincial or contemporary settings.

And high - style designs formerly found only among the more expensive papers are now available at a modest cost to the budget-minded.

Colors range from rich jewel tones to soft monotones and lively multi-colors. The rich bold hues like banner red dominate the contemporaries, followed closely by muted shades like the new beigey tones resembling the color of fresh mushrooms.

The patterns and textures include the usual fine selection of damasks, florals, and geometrics. In addition, there are interesting new textured papers, some resembling grass cloth, others simulating wood, shingles, and brick, many of the woods in intriguing raised patterns that are so realistic that you can hardly resist touching them.

Then there are the very popular one and two panel murals so desirable for small areas, often creating interest, depth and perspective in an otherwise dull and wasted part of a room.

A good selection of fabric backed vinyl papers are now designed for the living quarters of the house, as well as for kitchen, bedroom and bath. These papers offer both durability and cleanability.

Trees Give Beauty, Add Value

When the sun beats down in the hot weather months, everyone longs for cooling shade.

Trees, according to the American Association of Nurserymen are natural air-conditioners. They transfer the layer of greatest heat from near the surface of the ground to the tree tops. There may be a difference of five to fifteen degrees between a full-sun and shaded area, depending on the density of the shade.

In residential areas, with good stands of trees, temperatures are up to 10 degrees lower than in areas without trees in hot weather.

There are many species of trees. In order to get adequate shade, one usually needs large trees, which can be pigsted at some distance from the house and still shade it during the hottest part of the day, usually in the afternoon.

Smaller trees of course give shade but one needs more of them to achieve the same degree of coolness as the larger. If the trees shade the side of the home facing the sun as it moves downward in the western sky, even the inside of the home will be considerably cooler.

Where an east bedroom is stifling hot in the morning for example, a tree planted on the east can make all the difference in comfort.

For comfort in garden living and entertainment shade trees are a necessity. Nurserymen will advise on trees that are "clean" i.e. they do not drop seeds, pods, flowers, stems, etc., that tend to make the garden living room messy.

Usually when most home owners think of shade trees, they think of the maples, lindens, planes, magnolias, elms, and similar trees. There are many other species, less well-known but which have interest for many reasons, such as foliage color, bark color, structure of limbs and twigs or flowering beauty.

More than 850 different varieties of trees grow within the United States. Most can be planted at little cost if you are willing to wait for a small tree to grow; you can buy one for a little as $2. Even one that gives immediate shade may not cost more than $25.

The planting of new trees often pay for themselves within a few years by cutting the costs of heating or cooling your home.

Most trees will last as long as your house and as they grow they increase in value. Large trees in good condition, properly placed on a lot, often have a value of $1,000.

Income tax officials regard the planting of trees as a permanent improvement to your property. Even if you recover their costs many times over in lowered fuel bills, you can still deduct the price you paid for them when you sell your house at a profit.

Real estate brokers agree that by increasing the attractiveness of your home, trees will make it easier to sell at a higher price than one that stands on a barren lot.

The American Association of Nurserymen say that evergreen trees planted on the north and west borders of your property will block the prevailing cold winter winds of winter and thus make your home easier to heat.

A study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture of two houses in the north — one sheltered by such a tree windbreak and the other unprotected — showed that over 22 per cent of fuel was saved in the protected house.

Trees planted on the south and west can shade your home from the hot summer sun and keep it cooler. Trees also prevent solar heat from penetrating the ground, thereby keeping air around the house more comfortable.

Resistance to the more serious diseases or insect damage also is desirable in shade trees. Best talk it over with neighbors who have lovely shade trees, and with nurserymen. Nursery catalogues usually list the more outstanding shade trees that have been developed in recent years.

SPRING: HOME, GARDEN IMPROVEMENT TIME

Like a jewel in a perfect setting, this free-form swimming pool is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Has steel sidewalls. Cascade.

Poolside shelter is light enough to be moved with the sun. Highly resistant to weather and wear. Formed by curving two corrugated vinyl panels and bolting them to A-frame. Monsanto.

Proper Preparation of Pool Will Add to Swimming Fun

With the approach of the robins and the daffodils, many lucky pool owners will soon be casting questioning eyes at their home swimming pools, wondering when the first dip will be possible.

Taking the proper steps now, before the first water is run into the pool, will assure a pleasant, trouble-free summer of frolicking in clear water.

WHERE TO START

The first step is to remove protective winter covers from pool and equipment, and sweep the inside of the pool and surrounding areas clean of debris.

Then inspect pool to determine if any cracking of walls or floor has occurred, or if painting or refinishing is needed. Examine all exposed valves, controls, and pipes for obvious deterioration.

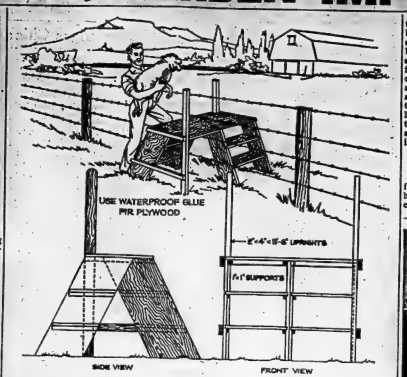
It all seems proper, turn on water to fill the pool. Again examine all exposed valves, controls, and pipes for leakage. Dried packings and gaskets may cause minor seepages that will stop by themselves as they absorb water and expand. If not, tightening with a wrench or replacing packing will be necessary. If any major leaks are observed, turn off the water and call for professional help.

While pool is filling check filtration equipment for operational readiness. Follow the manufacturer's recommendations for oiling and cleaning necessary prior to putting your pool filter into operation which can be done as soon as water reaches the filter intake pipe. Start up filter in accordance with manufacturer's recommendations.

Most modern filters are of the diatomite type and proper pre-coating of filter elements with filter aid will assure efficient operation and crystal clear water. This is accomplished by circulating a slurry, or mixture, of diatomite and water into the filter to provide a coating about 1/16 of an inch thick on the elements.

A supply of diatomite should be placed into the body feed apparatus of the filter, if one is used. The body feed is a means of adding small amounts of diatomite at frequent intervals or continuously during the filtration cycle to separate slimes, and other dirt from clogging the pre-coat layer.

Complete filtration of the pool's contents may take up to 18 to 24 hours, depending on pool size and filter capacity. Chlorination of the pool water, and the addition of other chemicals or algaecides should be accomplished before the pool is used.



CLEANING FILTER

Depending upon the frequency with which the pool is used, the temperature, and the efficiency of chlorination and pH control, most filters require cleaning at three to ten day intervals. Filter cycles can be extended by proper pool care.

Frequent hand skimming, if an automatic skimmer is not installed, and vacuuming will ease filter load, and careful control of algae by chemical treatment will cut operating expenses.

WOOD FLOOR TIP

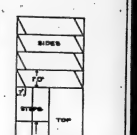
Scrubbing with soap and waters will ruin the appearance of wood floors; in that may cause serious warping and discoloration. Modern floor cleaners have a solvent base which does not harm wood.

This Fir Plywood Stile Will Save You Miles

Times change and one of the fastest modernization jobs is taking place down on the farm.

But it's still a long way around a fence. Crawling over, under or through is not always practical either, especially if you happen to wear a skirt, or are carrying something.

So, although it may come as a surprise, here is how to build yourself a stile.



This is a stylish stile made from a single sheet of ¾" fir plywood and a few scraps of lumber.

The cutting plan shows you how to squeeze all the required pieces from one sheet of plywood. From there all you do is cut the lumber to size and assemble the stile.

One thing. You will see that the steps are set in grooves in the upright pieces. This rabbetting requires a power saw or a rabbet plane. If you don't have either of these, all you need to do is exchange the 1" x 1" supports for something a little more substantial—1" x 4" lumber, for example—and carry on without the rabbets. Remember that this will make your steps three quarters of an inch narrower.

For the sake of appearance and weather resistance, give the stile a good painting with quality exterior house paint.

When you buy the plywood, make certain you get the type made with completely waterproof glue. All fir plywood made in Canada with waterproof gluelines is identified by the brand "PMBC Exterior" on the edge of every panel.

YOU CAN HAVE FRESH VEGETABLES

Many people who complain that they can't really buy fresh vegetables, don't seem to realize that they can, and should grow some themselves, even if only a tiny city garden is available. In the latter case, of course, no one is seriously suggesting that they try to produce a winter's supply of potatoes or even any of this vegetable and many others that take up quite a bit of room. But there are several vegetables that can be grown in amazing quantity and take up practically no room at all. From a patch of ground not more than 10 or 15 feet square it is possible to keep a small family supplied all summer with lettuce, radish, carrots, beans, onions, beets, and even a few tomatoes and cozy home grown cucumbers. The first named, lettuce, radish, carrots, etc., can be grown in rows a foot apart and a couple of inches each way in the row, and in some parts of Canada at least two and sometimes three or four successive crops in one season are possible. It is a wonderful convenience to have a small vegetable garden right at the back door and the extra quality and freshness will well repay the little trouble necessary. Of course in these highly concentrated gardens, it is well to cultivate and water frequently and we encourage quick growth with a good commercial fertilizer.

FLOWERS FOR BOUQUETS

It's not necessary to spoil flower beds by too much clipping for bouquets. If one wants lots of cut flowers the way to get them is to have a special cutting garden, or a few rows of bloom in the vegetable garden. When grown in this way, too, they are easier to thin and cultivate. In some cases, flowers that are excellent for cutting and bouquets are not particularly ornamental as plants and the vegetable garden is the proper place to grow them. Sweet peas are an example and gladiolus and some of the lilies.

LOTS OF TIME

When it comes to planting the wise gardener doesn't get in a panic. He gardens a bit, makes sure the earliest things are planted and the grass cut, then he goes fishing or golfing or just sits in the sun and admires what he has done. That keeps him fresh and interested in gardening and next week or the week after he does some more. He usually sows about a third of his seed just as soon as the weather is safe. Then the next third is put in from two to four weeks later and the final third is not sown until well into June or even July.

FRAGRANCE

Especially around verandahs, living room and bedroom windows is the ideal place for a few of those flowers which are noted for their beautiful fragrance. In such positions we can enjoy them even in the dark. In many seed catalogues these flowers are especially listed and include stocks, verbena, Sweet William, Nicotine, most of the lilies, peonies and a score or more of others. Some of them may not be especially beautiful as flowers but they are well worth growing for their scent alone.

TIMELY TIPS

On balmy, birds do far more good in the garden than any possible harm. They help keep down bugs and eat weed seeds, and they are beautiful and interesting to have around. Shrubs and trees, bird houses, feeding stations and watering or bathing pools, all will help to bring wrens and orioles and robins. But we can do more than this. There are certain bright flowers that have a special appeal for humming birds. There are all sorts of shrubs with bright and edible fruit and seeds that will invite cardinals, and grosbeaks. There are others that are particularly attractive for the goldfinch. One should study the special likes of the birds, and plant things that will produce food and shelter in winter as well as in summer.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVEN, Sports Editor

An eager bevy of young baseball beavers, undaunted by lack of sponsor interest, have taken matters in their own hands and are going to give city fans "baseball or bust."

Coach Sid Forster of the Belleville Kenmore (the club will retain the name) had been chasing will-o-the-wisp sponsors for the past month—with no success.

Unexpected opposition from other quarters within a week or so of the opening date almost forced the coach to toss in the sponge. He felt, however, that he owed a responsibility to other clubs in the league—and to city and district fans—and decided to "play ball or bust."

The team backed him wholeheartedly. These young fellows, a lot of them members of last year's ORA senior champion Kenmore, wanted to play baseball. Weeks of practice had rounded the club into well-balanced shape and they felt they could field a team equal to any in the Lakeshore League.

The fact they had no money outside of a small donation—and no sponsor—left them unafraid.

Coach Forster left the decision to operate with his players. They backed the suggestion that the club be player-operated. So they rolled up their sleeves, so to speak, and went to work.

To secure immediate funds, they decided to sell season tickets at five dollars each. Each player was given a certain number as a quota to sell.

They felt this method would not only give them a certain feeling of club independence but it would eliminate the seeking of "charity" donations and give supporters something for their money.

Last night after the regular practice at the Fair Grounds they went into organizational action. At a meeting they named a five-man team committee from their ranks.

Included are Duffy Fullwell, Pat Anselstine, Gordie Vaughan, Bill Latchford and Larry Mavety. Former manager and sponsor Ken Soden will act in an advisory capacity.

Coach Forster told me later that there is a slim hope of securing a sponsor, but the club will go ahead with the sale of season tickets in any event.

"We do not feel there is a lack of co-operation on the part of city people and fans. They have not been properly approached and we believe we will get sufficient support through the sale of the tickets to assure us of playing the season."

"Fans here last summer had a taste of the better class baseball and I think they liked it. They proved the game was coming back by their attendance, particularly in the latter part of the schedule and in the playoffs with such teams as Peterborough and Kingston.

"I think we have a good strong club this year," Forster said, "I know the boys have the desire and spirit and I think they will stack up with competition in the league."

The Kenmore open the Lakeshore League schedule on Sunday at Oshawa with the same club playing back here on Monday afternoon at two o'clock at the Fair Grounds.

Forster will probably send Bill Latchford to the mound in the Oshawa opener on Sunday. He will likely use Pete Weston at first, Jack Elliott at second, Glen Clarke at third, with Pat Anselstine playing the shortstop spot. Other available infielders are Ken Hull and Warren Gilroy.

City Bowlers Whip Kingston

The Belleville boys, paced by Ron Saylor in the four-game match, piled up a team score of 4172 compared to Kingston's 3877. A return match is slated for Kingston on Friday, May 31.

Saylor turned in over-300 scores in three of his four games to roll a 1116 string. Included were singles of 306, 331 and 304. Jim McKenzie was second high for Belleville with 1053. Lee Lennox followed with 1052, including a 313 and Leo Labelle had 976, including a 316.

Ken Burnside topped the visiting crew with 965, including the team's only 300 game, a 312. George MacDonald turned in 956, Bill Griffith 880 and Fred Light 868.

San Diego New Entry In W.H.L.

SEATTLE (AP)—After granting a franchise to San Diego and turning down bids from two other cities the Western Hockey League Thursday got its annual meeting back on the track of routine business.

Bob Reardon had sought a franchise for Denver and Art Edwards asked one for Long Beach, Calif., but league directors said only one would be granted at this time.

It went to Bob Breitbard, representing a group of San Diego businessmen, and will be effective in 1965.

Acting on the presumption that the league will have but six members next season, the directors agreed on a 210-game season starting Oct. 10 and ending March 22.

Jim Gilliam, L.A. Hero ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Giants Nip Mets; Dodgers Edge Bucs

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

For a guy whose name, Jim Gilliam is really giving everyone the business.

Gilliam, a sure-fingered infielder who loses his job every spring but winds up behind the counter once the rush season starts, opened the game's only run after rapping his third hit as the Los Angeles Dodgers edged Pittsburgh 1-0 Thursday night and moved into second place in the National League.

A 34-year-old switch-hitter, Gilliam loses his job to the Dodgers' latest phenom almost every spring. This time he stayed in the back room while Nate Oliver took over at second base and the Dodgers experimented with Tommy Davis at third base.

With that line-up, the Dodgers found themselves a bit slow so in came Gilliam. In the last nine games, Gilliam has hit at a .407 clip and during that stretch the Dodgers have won seven games while climbing up the standings.

PODRES GETS WIN

Gilliam got the Dodgers started against the Pirates with his third single and scored on Johnny Roseboro's two-out single in the ninth. Johnny Podres got the victory with a seven-hitter, leaving the Dodgers three games behind first-place San Francisco.

The Giants got two-run homers from Willie Mays and Willie McCovey and slipped the New York Mets 6-5. The third-place Chicago Cubs beat Cincinnati 3-0, Milwaukee defeated St. Louis 5-2, and Philadelphia downed Houston 5-3.

After Gilliam opened the winning Dodgers rally against Pirates' starter Don Schwall, he moved to second on a sacrifice by Ron Fairly and took third as Tommy Davis grounded out. Wally Moon then was purposely passed and Roseboro immediately crossed up the strategy.

It was Podres' first victory since April 26 and brought his record to 2-3. Schwall, who shut out the Dodgers the last time he faced them, also allowed only seven hits, took his second loss in four decisions.

Mays had a perfect day at the plate, getting his sixth homer, two singles and a walk in support of Billy O'Dell, who won his fifth without a loss. O'Dell was tagged for home runs by Cliff Cook, Ron Hunt and Chico Fernandez and needed Gaylord Perry's relief help to subdue the Mets.

THREE IN ROW

It was the Giants third straight victory at home, and showed them over the 500 mark in Candlestick Park with a 9-8 record.

Ernie Banks' run - producing single in the seventh gave the Cubs the run they needed and broke up a pitchers' duel between winner Larry Jackson, who permitted only six hits while bringing his record to 5-4, and Reds' starter Jim O'Toole, 2-3. Billy Williams drove in the other run with a single in the eighth after Lou Brock doubled.

The big blow for the Braves was a three-run homer by Eddie Mathews in the first inning that zapped a four-run burst against Cards' starter Ray Washburn, who lost his third after winning his first five. Denny Lemaster got the victory, but lost his bid for a shutout when Stan Musial and Gene Oliver each homered in the ninth.

Don Demeter and Tony Gonzalez each drove in two runs as the Phils continued their mastery over the Colts. The victory was the Phils' 21st in 23 games against Houston since the Colts joined the league last year. Ray Culp, 4-3, was the winner. Dick Drott took the loss.

Stone Fires A 68 at Oklahoma

OLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Bob Stone, a part-time tourist from four-under-par 68 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $35,000 Oklahoma City open golf tournament.

Stone, one of the first of the 157-man field to finish, had to wait out a strong challenge by Rex Baxter Jr., who teed off about the time Stone counted up.

He toured the front nine in three-under-par 32 and went four-under with a birdie on No. 13. But he ran into trouble on the 17th, which was easily the biggest troublemaker of the day.

Baxter's drive got caught in a crosswind and landed out of bounds forcing the 27-year-old Texan to take a penalty. He settled for a two-under-par 70.

Defending champion Doug Sanders birdied the last two holes of the Quail Creek Country Club course to finish a stroke behind Stone at 69 and tied with host pro Ernie Vossler, Ken Still and George Bayer.

Julius Boros, Miller Barber and New Zealander Bob Charles also had a shot at Stone's score, but faltered on the back nine after carding 34s going out.

Boros and Barber shot par 36s on the back nine to finish with 70s and Charles, a southpaw swinger who won the Houston classic three weeks ago, slipped to 37 and a 71 total.

REPEATS PERFORMANCE

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Rufus (Parnelli) Jones proved his unofficial Indianapolis Motor Speedway record was no fluke by running two faster laps Thursday in practice for the opening time trials for the 500-mile Memorial Day race Saturday.

The Torrance, Calif., driver, first to break the 150-m.p.h. barrier at the old track last year, did one round Thursday at 153.327 and another at 153.322, for one lap and 150.370 for four.

All of Jones' fast practice laps were clocked with the track's electric timer but only speeds made in the qualifications and actual race are accepted.

Blank Angels; Tribe Edges Chicago

Red-Hots Pass White Brothers

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

"The best strategy," manager Johnny Pesky proclaims, "is to have a 6-foot-4, 210-pounder step up to the plate, hope that he rips one—and he does."

Perhaps the Boston Red Sox manager was indulging in his favorite bit of manoeuvring Thursday when, with two out, Lou Clinton doubled in two runs that gave the Red Sox the American League lead.

Red Sox right-hander Earl Wilson, staked to an early lead, threw a two-hitter at Los Angeles and beat the Angels 2-0. When Cleveland Indians edged Chicago 5-4 in a night game, the Red Sox took over the top spot .013 points ahead of the White Sox.

Baltimore blasted Washington 9-1 in the only other American League game.

ALLOWS ONLY SINGLES

Wilson allowed only singles to George Thomas and Bob Rodgers, struck out six, and contributed a triple and a single as he came close to matching his Sunday last year against the Angels. It was the Red Sox fifth straight.

Baltimore's Brooks Robinson drove in four runs and Jackie Brandt added three more as the Orioles blasted Washington and moved into third place, just one game back.

Robinson, who has hit safely in 13 consecutive games, had three singles.

Chuck Estrada won it, allowing only two hits before his elbow tightened, forcing him to quit in the sixth.

Max Alvis had a home run leading off the last of the ninth, breaking a 4-4 tie at Cleveland and dropping White Sox into second place. The homer was the first run scored off reliever Jim Brosnan in 7 3-3 innings since Chicago obtained him from Cincinnati.

'Nicklaus As Good As Palmer'

Says Bobby Jones

ATLANTA (AP) — According to former golfing great Bobby Jones, sports writers have magnified the Arnold Palmer image and he expressed doubt that the three - time Masters champion would ever again dominate professional golf.

"Sports writers are given to extravagance," Jones said Thursday in an interview, "and so it was natural that they should call Palmer the greatest golfer in the world. I never did that. Even last year, I considered Jack Nicklaus equally as good.

Jones, only golfer ever to win the U.S. and British amateur and Open championships in the same year, emphasized he was in no way trying to minimize Palmer's accomplishments.

Palmer has slumped badly this year after winning the 1962 Masters and British Open and losing to Nicklaus in a playoff for the U.S. Open title.

GIVES CREDIT

"Palmer is a wonderful player and a fine person," Jones said. "I feel certain he will snap out of this slump and come back to win again.

"But I don't believe Palmer will ever beat Nicklaus with any consistency. And it could be that neither of them will dominate the game. There are too many other good players. Tony Lema isn't very far behind either of them."

Jones watched Nicklaus play four years ago and said then that the youngster had the game to become one of golf's all-time stars.

"And I haven't changed my opinions," Jones said. "Nicklaus has got to be rated an even bet to win every time he plays."

Country Club Golf Chatter

ASIDE TO NEW MEMBERS

Life is a funny thing. No matter what you do or try to do, there is always some Gloomy Gus who sees the dark side of it.

In your case perhaps some friend will ridicule the fact you have taken up golf. What he doesn't know is this precise, plodding, pedestrian game is the most universal of sports.

For here is a game in which all men speak the same tongue and none quarrel. They get mad at the game, not at each other.

It is the uniquely personal nature of its challenge that makes golf so popular.

It is this fact that you can take all the credit and satisfaction for a good shot yourself. Every correspondingly maddened at being unable to pass the buck for a bad one.

You may be just the fact that golf is about the only outdoor game you play to the end of your days. Or it may be merely the nineteenth hole.

You may never exceed the "duh" or "duffer" stage. Be that as it may. Look at the fun you will have trying. And wherever you go you will meet golf.

Whether you break seventy or, spend the rest of your life trying to best "100" you will speak a universal language. On train, plane, coach, car or submarine you will meet members of the fairways fraternity.

You don't have to tell strangers what bracket you play in. How do you know he is telling the truth? And don't produce a scorecard. Just do some audible wishful thinking — and let it go at that.

On the whole you will find the golfer a genial sort of fellow who plays the game more for the fun, the fresh air, the scenery and the company of friends than to see who wins.

Whether your golf day is good or bad, here at the club you can always top it off with one of the taste-tingling dinners served by Mr. and Mrs. Hemberger. — G. H. C.

TO SELL HOCKEY TEAM

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)— Owner Ben Berger said Thursday his Minneapolis Millers hockey team is for sale, but no transaction has been made. Berger said if he hasn't sold the International Hockey League franchise by the time of the league meeting next Monday, he will auction the players to other league teams.

Obscene Gesture Aftermath

Maris Gets Top Warning

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Maris' obscene gesture to baseball fans in Minneapolis last week has drawn a warning letter from commissioner Ford Frick.

While not attempting to make excuses for his action, the New York Yankee slugger explained Thursday he did it in anger and without thinking.

"It's not that I wanted to do it," he said. "I just did it. A loud-mouthed guy behind our dug-out kept heckling me and finally I got mad. It happened just like that."

Other players had done the same thing before but in Maris' case, the television cameras happened to catch the gesture. Some viewers wrote to the commissioner.

The incident stemmed from a play during the early part of the game when Maris failed to run out a routine ground ball.

"Roger simply obeyed orders," Yankee manager Ralph Houk explained. "He still hasn't fully recovered from a pulled hamstring muscle in the leg. I told him, as I told Mickey Mantle, to take it easy on plays like that and not hurt himself again. I'd rather have it that way than have him out of the lineup again."

Maris has missed 13 of the Yankees' 28 games. He's currently out again with a muscle spasm in his back.

PRIZE FIGHTER DIES

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Vincent Bonomo, 27, a former prize fighter, 27, died in hospital Thursday of bullet wounds.

Police said Bonomo was shot eight times with a .38-calibre pistol during a quarrel with Richard L. Schmitt, 23, over the fighter's wife.

ML Gardens Expansion Unlikely

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial government official said Thursday approval is unlikely for the Maple Leaf Gardens' $9,000,000 seating expansion program in time for the 1963-1964 National Hockey League season opening in October.

The plan is to build an extra 4,000 seats on extensions reaching over the sidewalk at the north and south ends. It would increase the Gardens' capacity to 18,400.

The program would require a private bill in the legislature or a change in the Municipal Act. The spokesman said: "I can't see Premier Roberts calling a special session for this."

Records Go At School Track Meet

GUELPH (CP)—A total of 31 records were set Thursday at the senior Central and Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association track and field meet.

Twenty-eight schools participated, with 870 entrants taking part in the three age limit divisions for boys and girls.

Kitchener Collegiate took over-all team honors with 146 points. Galt Collegiate was second with 81 and Kitchener's Eastwood Collegiate was third with 47.

The village of Norwell sent a three-man team to the games and emerged with the senior boys champion in Mike Krupe, who won the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash.

John Reynolds of Southwood Secondary School, Jim McGurdy of Preston and Mike Milligan of Brantford Collegiate tied for intermediate boys honors. Cindy Taylor of Kitchener was junior boys champion.

TIE FOR HONORS

Intermediate girls champion was Ulla Schmidt of Eastwood and the junior girls champion was Carolyn Joyce of Southwood.

Mike Lackie of Kitchener posted two new marks in the junior division winning the 220 in 22.7 and 440 in 54.2.

Milligan was another double record breaker setting intermediate marks in the shot put and discus. John Reynolds also broke two intermediate marks, winning the 440 in 50.1 and the 880 in 2.02.9.

Carolyn Joyce of Southwood and Sheila Wahl of Kitchener each set a couple of new marks in the girls division.

Claims New Record For Jet Boats

ALPENA, Mich. (AP)—Veteran hydroplane driver Les Staudacher said he surpassed the world speed record for jet-powered boats Thursday just before his Stars and Stripes cracked up on a beach on Hubbard Lake.

Staudacher, seriously injured, said his $100,000 hydroplane zoomed at 280 miles an hour, some 20 miles faster than the record set by Donald Campbell of England. Campbell was clocked at 260.35 m.p.h. in Bluebird.

The Stars and Stripes' crew chief, Donald Norin, said the 31-year-old Staudacher told of the speed mark while being taken to an Alpena Hospital. He said the Kawkawlin, Mich., driver was coherent and had a dim recollection of how the mishap occurred.

Staudacher said the rudder broke, throwing the 5,800-pound boat into a sharp turn. He was buried into shallow water as the hydroplane shot onto the beach and hit some trees. The boat was demolished.

Norin said there was no way to verify Staudacher's claim of reaching 280 m.p.h.

LONDON (AP) — The Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews long has been regarded as the birthplace of golf.

Here is the hand that rocked the cradle of the sport that enraptured such greats as Walter Hagen, Bob Jones, Ben Hogan and Arnold Palmer, to they say.

Bosh, say the people of Royal Blackheath.

The first golf club was not St. Andrews but a rivran area eight miles from London known as Blackheath.

Here's how it happened:

Back in the early 17th century, King James I of England, son of Mary Queen of Scots, came south with a few blue-blooded courtiers for some sport.

Soon they tired of stag-hunting, the popular sport of the day, and yearned for a new kind of recreation.

PETITION KING

The courtiers petitioned the king to open a seven-hole golf course on the sandy ground of Blackheath commons.

James didn't need much convincing.

Golf soon was in full swing at Blackheath.

The bored aristocrats set up a club at Royal Blackheath in 1608. This was 130 years before the organization of the Royal and Ancient, recognized as the oldest in the world.

Blackheath spokesmen concede that golf may have been played in Scotland and Holland before it turned up in England, but they still hold the right to be called the oldest established golf club in the word," the spokesman said.

Raise Big Sum For Charities

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Sportswriters and Sports-casters Association has raised more than $250,000 for charitable work in the last 12 years, it was announced Thursday at an association executive meeting.

The OSSA said that a total of $233,580.38 has been raised for the Ontario Society for Crippled Children since its first $25-a-plate dinner was staged on March 13, 1952. Proceeds from this year's dinner totalled $24,-752.99, including a gift of $5,000 from the Canadian Professional Golfers Association.

The money raised by the OSSA has been used to provide summer-camp lodges and swimming pools for the crippled children's society.

Leaf Whip Buffalo 7-5, Wings Win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rochester Red Wings downed Columbus 6-3 in 11 innings Thursday night for their ninth International League victory in 13 games and pulled to within 4 games and a half of Buffalo, Northern Division leaders.

Toronto topped Buffalo 7-5, Richmond rallied for a 5-3 decision over Arkansas, Jacksonville shaded Atlanta 4-3 and Syracuse whipped Indianapolis 8-4.

Rochester, which won only one of eight games during the April 24-May 3 span, continued its improvement comeback by scoring four runs in the 11th at Columbus.

Relief pitcher Bob Priddy's wild pitch with the bases loaded permitted the winning run to score, but Ray Youngdahl followed with a two-run double and pitcher Herman Starrette with a single to turn the rally into a rout.

Five unearned runs in the eighth won for Syracuse after the Chiefs had squandered two leads at Indianapolis.

COUNT HOMERS

Fred Hopke and Tom Umphlett slugged homers on consecutive pitches during Richmond's four-run sixth inning that won for the Virginians over Arkansas.

Two home runs also won for Jacksonville over Atlanta's Southern Division leaders, but four homers failed to prevent a Buffalo loss to Toronto.

Dick Smith, Joe Hicks, Ted Schreiber and Marv Throneberry hit home runs for Buffalo, but a two-run double by Ted Kazanski counted the most. His hit broke a 5-5 tie in the ninth inning and gave Toronto its second straight triumph and its fourth in five games.

'Candy Spots' For Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — There was little left for the trainers to do but worry today as eight finely turned three - year - old thoroughbreds stood in their stalls awaiting what promises to be one of the more spectacular races in the long history of the Preakness.

"All there is left to do now is walk him. Gallop him Saturday morning, and then take him over there in the afternoon and with him a speedy journey," summed up Woody Stephens, who trains Never Bend.

His work was over Thursday after Never Bend ran a practice five-eighths of a mile that indicated the winner is going to have to do some fancy stepping Saturday to take the second feature of horse racing's triple crown.

Never Bend was timed in 58.4 seconds, three-fifths of a second faster than the competitive race in the long history of the Preakness.

The Pimlico handicapped, who was unconvinced by the third place Derby finish and first setback in seven races for Candy Spots.

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—The Wisconsin assembly state affairs committee voted 9-to-3 Thursday to recommend killing a bill to prohibit boxing in the state. Why Johnson makes a 28 hp outboard instead of an even 20 or 35

28 is an odd horsepower rating for an outboard. But Johnson engineers built it that way for several good reasons. Some are listed here.

1. 28 hp will fit more low cost boats than a motor 35 or bigger. So for those who don't want to tie up all their assets in a boat, the 28 is perfect.

2. 28 horsepower, coupled with the right boat, gives you ample power to zip two adults around the lake on skiis. Smaller motors don't have the spunk to pull one skier let alone two. Yet when it's time to go fishing, the 28 can be run for hours at trolling speeds. The 28 is versatile.

3. 28 hp is ideal for those of us who aren't nuts about power. If you simply want to get out with the family and have fun without investing a great deal of money, a 28 is right for you. The 28 is a sensible marriage of power and economy that lets you afford more of the fun of boating.

When you're choosing your next outboard, trade up to a Johnson 28 electric or manual starting. You not only get Johnson's famous dependability, but beginning this year, it's backed by a 2 year warranty.

Urbegre, a Hungarian player playing his first game in seven years played a standout game for Parsons. He sparked their first-half effort of fine display.

Walt Disney Is Planning Trip to Japan in October

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Around the lots . . . Walt Disney makes his first trip to the Orient in October. He'll discuss plans for the Disneyland outpost he'll build near Tokyo and hopes to see Japan as a tourist.

Perry Como in town to discuss his next season's television series. He'll do only six shows; Revue will fill the rest with anthologies. What'll he do with all that spare time? Get fat, says he.

Como visited the Twilight of Honor set to meet latest crooner Richard Chamberlain. Como's analysis of the young doc's vocal talent: "He sings better than I operate" . . .

Leave it to Cliff Robertson to play both sides of the street. After portraying John F. Kennedy in PT 109, he's considering the role in The Best Man that was generally considered a pattern of Richard M. Nixon.

Don't congratulate Bob Hope on his 60th birthday May 26. Ski lores wanted to give him a big party. He said forget it. . . .

Shelley Winters is no fan of her recent film The Balcony. Her lament: "I did it because I thought it would be anti-war; but it turned out to be pro-prostitution. . . ."

New ad campaign for Nine Hours to Rama avoids mention that it's about India and the assassination of Ghandi. "Nine hours for three women in the life of a killer!" screams the ads. Who said it can't be sold on what it is: A picturesque, beautiful, fairly exciting melodrama.

And how about the catch-line for Hud—"The man with the barbed wire soul" That's almost as raw as the title . . . Ed Wynn is celebrating his 61st year as an actor by playing in two films at once — Mary Poppins and The Greatest Story Ever Told.

At the Belle

"THE RAVEN"

"The Raven," American International's newest Edgar Allan Poe film, is a festive, thrilling mixture of the most powerful terror ingredients ever assembled.

Take Vincent Price, whose performance was proven in "House of Usher," "The Pit and the Pendulum" and "Tales of Terror."

Add Peter Lorre, the unforgettable menace of "M" and the countless other thrillers culminating in his most recent triumph in "Tales of Terror."

Throw in the one and only Boris Karloff of Frankenstein Monster fame in a first time co-appearance with Price and Lorre.

Add further one of Edgar Allan Poe's most famous and eerie works, "The Raven," a worthy successor to "House of Usher," "The Pit and the Pendulum," "The Premature Burial" and "Tales of Terror," with extra added doses of terror and horror.

Spice with two of the screen's most beautiful and talented actresses both with unlimited screen potential — Hazel Court, who proved herself in "The Premature Burial," and Olive Sturgess, a screen veteran of many a "Thriller" episode on television.

Have the thrill-packed brew mixed up by the master chefs of AIP's previous record-breaking Poe masterpieces — Roger Gorman as producer-director, Richard Matheson as screenplay writer, Floyd Crosby as director of photography, Daniel Haller as art director, Les Baxter for scores.

Pour the evil mixture onto exciting wide screen film and heighten the effect with breath-taking color.

The result is "The Raven," the most terrifying combination of Edgar Allen Poe story and cast ever assembled and another hit from American International and executive producers James H. Nicholson and Samuel Z. Arkoff as it's showing tonight and Saturday matinee and evening.

"Zegas," is the title of the second feature attraction on the same program, introducing new song hit, recording star, and in Eastmancolor.

Betty White Will Marry Host of CBS Panel Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Betty White, much in demand as a panelist in various and assorted games shows, and Allen Ludden, host on CBS' Password, plan to marry in Las Vegas, Nev., June 14.

Apparently romance finally bloomed on a panel show—but in truth Password had little or nothing to do with it.

Betty actually met Allen for the first time more than a year ago when she was a guest celebrity on his show.

"But I didn't see her after that," explained the bespectacled master of games. "It really happened last summer when our respective agents got together and booked us to play in Critics Choice."

Betty and Allen, after a weekend honeymoon, will play together in Brigadoon. Allen Ludden sings? "Yes," said Betty, "and very nicely, too." Betty will be busily filling commitments she made months ago, before the Round of wedding bells was in the air, including a period starring in The King and I in St. Louis.

Allen is a widower with three children—two girls and a boy. Betty lives with her parents. They expect to make their home a big rambling house in suburban Westchester County, where Allen is a dedicated gardener and amateur cabinetmaker.

Teen-age Canada

Easy to Speak in Public, Worth Weight in Gold

By JACK HUTTON

A young friend asked to speak to a local service club the other day rose uncertainly and began: "Thank you, Mr. Ceremony."

The adults in the audience tried bravely not laugh. And the unhappy young orator realized that he had been thinking of "Mr. Chairman" and "Master of Ceremonies" at the same time.

"What an ordeal," he moaned later. "But that's the last time. You'll never catch me standing up in front of more than three people again."

The president of the club happened to be wandering by when he heard this. "Did you really think you goofed?" he asked. Listen. I was so nervous the first time I spoke in public that I couldn't speak."

"All I could do was croak something about 'ladies and gentlemen.' Then I froze. And they had to wait until the end of the program to let me thaw out.

Unnerving as it was at the time, the experience turned out happily for the budding orator. He has now agreed to talk to two more groups. And it doesn't worry him that he might be nervous.

SPLENDID ASSET

One of the most valuable lessons any teen-ager can learn is that it is easier than most people realize to speak in public. And it's an asset worth its weight in gold later.

What is the secret of learning to speak in public? Well, somehe has compared it to riding a bicycle. You keep getting on until you don't fall off anymore.

George Benard Shaw, the late Irish playwright, began by joining a debating society. And, according to him, he stumbled all over himself the first time he spoke. But he overcame all that.

How do you get started? Believe it or not, most Canadian high schools are the perfect training ground. You can find a wealth of experience in your clubs, student councils or societies.

The first time that one gets up is always a bit unsettlingly. Suddenly you realize that everyface in the room is looking at you. Why in the world did you let yourself get into this position?

This is the moment that you reach the invisible barrier. And it you pass it once you'll never look back. Everyone has a slightly different trick of relaxing, but my advice is to take a look around the room.

A friend of mine who has been speaking in public for years tells me that he always looks around and says to himself, "What a gathering of idiots." He immediately feels superior, relaxes and goes on with his talk.

Another friend uses the opposite trick. No one would waste an evening coming to listen to someone unless they expected and hoped that it would be worthwhile, he reasons. Therefore everyone in the audience is on his side.

Why not, if you haven't already started, look for a chance to try out your own public image? Look around the clubs in your school and decide which one you'd like to join in the fall.

Who knows? You may be starting something that will be fun for the rest of your life.

NIGERIAN PEN PAL

On April 4 of this year, a 18-year-old Nigerian boy named Akanni Adig decided that he would like a Canadian pen pal. He didn't realize it, but he was just handing a Canadian post office authorities a real problem.

The problem was that Akanni addressed his envelope: Canadian Daily Newspaper, Canada, U.S.A. Apart from the fact that we haven't yet joined the U.S.A., his address was still rather vague.

The first reaction of the authorities was to return the letter. But on second thought they sent it to the Canadian Daily Newspapers Publishers' Association.

Two days later I opened my mail and found Akanni's message had been rerouted to me. It took six weeks, but Akanni's letter finally found a home after travelling around the globe.

He writes: "I am a Nigerian boy of 18 years of age, with blue eyes and dark hair and about five feet six inches tall. My hobbies are footballing, swimming, table tennis and learning the history of the world."

Akanni's address, in case you're interested, is: Akanni Adio, Muslim High School, Box 1744, Shagamu, Nigeria. Let's hope four letters go fast- er than his did.

Alberta Plans Daily Check On Fallout

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta cabinet has approved a program of daily monitoring of milk for radioactive contamination.

It also mapped out a crash program Wednesday to treat milk and remove cattle from contaminated areas if levels reach a point considered dangerous.

"There is no danger now, levels are low, but if a health hazard does arise we want to be on top of it," said Health Minister Dr. J. Donovan Ross, who submitted the plan to the cabinet.

The action followed meetings with 12 scientists from the University of Alberta who said delays in obtaining results from the federal government of its weekly milk testing caused concern.

Hydro Scheme in a Treasure Chest; Smallwood Gears Labrador for Power

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — If Joey Smallwood's hopes are realized, a start will be made within a year on one of the world's great hydro - electric power developments.

The Newfoundland premier declared in mid-April he hopes work will begin by early 1964 to harness Hamilton Falls in the heart of Labrador, a region he has often described as his province's treasure chest.

What is involved is a water course with a hydro potential of 7,000,000 horsepower. A 10-year development period would employ 8,000 men and cost an estimated $1,500,000,000, an undertaking as large in scope as the St. Lawrence Seaway.

British - Newfoundland Corporation (Brinco), a new Canadian government agent, owns 80 per cent of the Hamilton Falls development jointly owned Hydro - Quebec the remaining 20 per cent.

Brinco was established in 1953, primarily with British capital, to develop Newfoundland's natural resources. It holds a 99-year lease on the Hamilton River drainage basin.

NINTH HEAVIEST FLOW

With a drop of 245 feet, Hamilton Falls is higher than Niagara Horseshoe Falls, at 160 feet. In average rate of water flow — 30,000 to 40,000 cubic feet a second — it ranks ninth in the world, the biggest being South America's Guaira Falls on the Parana.

The Canadian and American falls at Niagara, where about 6,000,000 horsepower is produced, average 212,200 cubic feet a second and have the steadiest flow of any in the world's waterfalls.

An important factor in plans for Hamilton Falls is that it lies on terrain ideally suited for inexpensive hydro development. The topography eliminates the need for expensive concrete dams usually associated with power projects.

At Twin Falls, 12 miles west of Hamilton Falls, Brinco says an estimated $70,000,000 be cause it was able to put up earth dams for its 120,000-horsepower hydro-electric station.

"That's what is different about Labrador," says Dr. Richard L. Hearn of Toronto, probably Canada's best - known hydro consulting engineer. "Nature does all that work for us."

WOULD DIVERT RIVER

The Hamilton River drains a 25,000-square-mile plateau. The area, 2,000 feet above sea level, is mainly dotted with hundreds of lakes.

Brinco's four-year project to harness the river's huge potential is called the "channel scheme" and would harness 4,000,000 of the 7,000,000 potential horsepower.

The scheme involves diverting the river 25 miles along a falls through a series of lakes to a mountain on the same level as the falls 22 miles down stream. There, engineers can develop a greater head (water drop) of 1,040 feet. Through vertical penstocks in the mountain, the diverted flow would drop on to an underground power house 1,000 feet deep in solid rock.

A horizontal tunnel at the base of the powerhouse would carry the water 1 1-3 miles back to the Hamilton River at a point 400 feet above sea level. Immense turbine units of 275,000 horsepower each would be installed in the mountain.

The project would be tackled in four stages.

In the first stage, several 15-mile long earth dams at the foot of Jacopie Lake would be constructed to divert the Hamilton River around the falls to the powerhouse, creating enough flow to develop the first 1,000,000 horsepower.

SEAL OFF RIVER

The second stage would add 3,470 square miles to the catchment by absorbing the drainage from the Michikamau Lake area. Two dams on the Fraser and Fremont Lakes would be enough to swing the drainage through the Michikamau, Lobstick and Sandgirt lakes to the Hamilton River. This would provide a second 1,000,000 horsepower.

Stage three would add a third 1,000,000 horsepower by merely boosting the storage capacity in the Michikamau. By the fourth stage, engineers visualize sealing off the mouth of the 35-mile long Unknown River to create an even greater reservoir for a total 4,000,000 horsepower capacity. Another 2,000,000 horsepower could be generated with two plants on the lower part of the Hamilton River.

But this power would be more expensive than that produced in the channel scheme, says Hearn and uneconomical at the present.

Wild and mostly uninhabited 10 years ago, the upper country of the Hamilton River basin is building rapidly. Thanks to development of the vast Labrador iron ore resources, the basin now has 150 miles of roads, two hydro-electric plants, two mining towns—Labrador City and Wabush City—and a rail connection to the north shore of the St. Lawrence River.

SERVES MINE TOWNS

Twin Falls power is to be boosted another 120,000 horsepower within the next years. It serves the twin mining towns of Labrador City and Wabush City, across the Wabush Lake from each other.

The Iron Ore Company of Canada made its first shipment last year from Labrador City, and is working at an annual production rate of 7,000,000 tons of concentrates. Wabush Mines is expected to go into production in 1965 with 6,000,000 tons of concentrates annually. About 20,000 people will live in the two company towns.

Soviet engineers have been keeping in close touch with Brinco on development of the project. They are said to be chiefly interested in the problem of transmitting power over long distances. There is a plan to build a national power grid in the Soviet Union that would require 1,500 miles of transmission lines and voltages of 800,000 or more.

W. Gilles Ross, writing in the Canadian Geographical Journal, says that by using high voltage direct current the transmission distance of 1,000 miles is not considered impractical, either technically or economically." A line of this length, he says, could deliver Hamilton power to Quebec, Montreal or Toronto. Canada's longest transmission lines would be hooked into the Hydro-Quebec network, with Newfoundland and Quebec sharing first call on the power and the remainder going to other Canadian or United States users.

In the Maritimes, Hamilton power could be carried on a line less than 700 miles long, using submarine cable to carry the power under the St. Lawrence River.

MAJOR POWER SITE — Work may begin by early 1964 to make Hamilton Falls in Labrador into one of the world's greatest hydro-electric power developments. Map locates site on the Hamilton River. A hydro station already exists 12 miles away at Twin Falls, serving the iron ore mining towns of Wabush City and Labrador City across Wabush Lake from each other. (CP Newsmap)

TO HARNESS FALLS — Work may begin early in 1964 to harness Hamilton Falls in Labrador, potentially one of the world's greatest hydro-electric power developments. The falls, 5,000 men and cost an estimated $1,500,000,000. higher than Niagara's Horseshoe Falls by 85 feet, ranks ninth in the world in average rate of water flow. The 10-year project would employ

TRYING FOR SALE

WINNIPEG (CP)—Canada is trying to make its first "wheat sale on credit to East Germany, reliable sources said Wednesday. Previous grain purchases by the Communist country have been for cash on a small scale. The last such wheat sale was for 2,000,000 bushels in 1956. Negotiations for a credit sale opened recently and it was presumed W. C. Smith, federal commissioner of the Canadian wheat board, was in on them.

Would Allow Peers to Drop Their Titles

LONDON (Reuters) — Apparently agreeing that "politics are more than coronets," the government moved Wednesday to allow British peers to drop their titles and stand for election to the House of Commons.

Since tradition holds that prime ministers do not sit in the non-elective House of Lords, the move may have far-reaching implications for titled politicians.

The government announced it has accepted the recommendations of a bipartisan committee to reform the House of Lords, the upper chamber of Parliament.

New legislation will enable its members to renounce their peerages for life and run for the Commons.

Anthony Wedgwood-Benn, formerly a Labor member of the Commons, started the reform move when his father died and he inherited the family title.

It was finally ruled he would have to assume the title of Lord Stansgate, but Wedgwood-Benn refused to sit in the House of Lords and his battle led to appointment of the bipartisan committee.

Astronaut Cooper Coming 'Home'

Will Meet Wife And Daughters In Honolulu

Parades and Receptions Laid Out For Spaceman

◆ ABOARD USS KEARSARGE (AP) — Gordon Cooper comes "home" to Honolulu today and the first of a series of welcomes honoring his heroic feat of orbiting the earth 22 times in a 34-hour tour through space.

On the agenda were parades and receptions in Honolulu, at Cape Canaveral, Washington and New York, including a meeting of Congress here.

First in both time and importance for the quiet-spoken 36-year-old Oklahoma navy pilot was a reunion at Hickam Air Force Base with his wife Trudy, and daughters, Camala, 14, and Janita, 13.

The Cooper family arrived in Honolulu late Friday for the date with the space hero.

The 41,000-ton aircraft carrier Kearsarge, sailor-piloted Maj. Cooper out of the Pacific 96 miles southeast of Midway Thursday afternoon, plowed along at 25 knots to keep the appointment for its famous passenger.

REVISIT RENDEZVOUS

It was in Honolulu that the Coopers met and married in 1947 when they were students at the University of Hawaii.

After a downtown parade and receptions at Iolani Palace, the statehouse that once was the seat of Hawaiian royalty, and at the home of Governor John A. Burns, the Coopers were scheduled to leave by jet plane on Sunday for Cape Canaveral.

It was from the cape that he rocketed off in glory last Wednesday morning.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, who announced the congressional invitation to Cooper, said it was natural both to salute his outstanding space accomplishment and to mark the presumed conclusion of the Mercury space project.

Mansfield said Cooper will be the Gemini project, to put two men into orbit in a single capsule. Then, he said, Cooper will be manned flight to the moon.

Doctors evidently were elated at Cooper's robust physical condition. The brief moments of giddiness, the reddened eyes and husky voice noted when he backed out of his Mercury 7 capsule onto the Kearsarge aboard Thursday were all gone after a night's sleep.

He told the ship's chief petty

Juvenile Justice Is Travesty Says Lawyer

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto lawyer suggested Friday juvenile justice in Ontario is a travesty which denies children basic legal rights in the name of humanitarianism.

Bernard Green, associate professor of law at the University of Toronto, noted in particular the Juvenile Delinquents and Ontario Training Schools Acts.

"The Ontario Training Schools Act is a monstrosity," he told the Ontario Welfare Council conference here. "It reads like the word of a drunken lawyer or social worker."

Mr. Green's main charge was that welfare legislation in general showed a greater preoccupation with who would pay the costs than with the needs of people served.

He said it is possible, under the Training Schools Act, for a child to be committed to a training school without being found guilty of an offence. A judge needs only the fact that a child has been accused of a petty crime in order to be able to order such a committal, he added:

Under the same act, he said, a child could be admitted to a training school upon the written request to the minister of reform institutions from a children's aid society.

This could be an easy out for a child welfare agency, he noted, with its high cost of treatment in the limited number of available mental health institutions.

The council was told that Metropolitan Toronto should establish a senior service bureau to find work for the aged.

GNR AND TCA SEE A PROFIT POSITION AHEAD

Add Qualifications To Their Forecasts

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian National Railways and Trans-Canada Air Lines see a profit position ahead, but both add a few qualifications to their forecasts.

The CNR, reporting a $48,919,454 deficit last year, hopes to move into the black in the foreseable future—if its capital structure is revised and if the revolutionary ideas of the Macpherson royal commission on transportation are put into effect.

Trans-Canada said its deficit last year was $3,540,625 but it predicted a profit for 1963—if no costs can be held down and there is no deterioration in its competitive position.

The annual reports of TCA and CNR were tabled in the Commons Friday by Transport Minister George McIlraith.

He also filed the annual reports for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and the National Harbors Board — both showing deficits for 1962.

SEAWAY HAS LOSS

The seaway authority, which operates the Canadian section of the international waterway linking the Atlantic Ocean and the Great Lakes, reported a $13,104,012 loss for 1962, compared with $10,215,896 the previous year.

The NHB, which operates Canada's eight major ports, reported a loss of $1,377,448, compared with a net profit of $2,007 in 1961.

Net operating income for NHB facilities, with 1961 comparison bracketed, included:

Prescott, Ont., $242,959 ($207,410); Port Colborne $171,883 ($240,453).

The CNR's deficit was $18,388,318 under its record 1961 deficit of $29,530,809.

CNR President Donald Gordon said the railway would have shown a $10,000,000 profit last year if its capital structure had been changed and if the Macpherson plan had been implemented.

He made a bold pitch for recapitalization of the CNR's long-

Another Mercury Flight May Be Open-End Affair

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—With Gordon Cooper safe and sound, speculation is being focused again on the chance of another mercury space flight—perhaps an "open-end" affair with safety the prime limit.

Project Mercury flight officials, meeting with reporters Friday, recapped the hazardous moments of Cooper's 22-orbit flight.

They weren't sure he needed it—but after his 7½-hour sleep period and considering the stress and face controlling his own re-entry—they prescribed it just to be safe.

Flight director Chris Kraft also told reporters that if Cooper's two faulty electrical inverters (which convert direct current to alternating current) had failed on his first orbit, they would have terminated the flight early. The inverters went bad late in the voyage.

Most of the reporters' questions dwelt on the possibility of another Project Mercury flight, in the face of previous statements that Cooper's would be the last.

Kraft said it was his opinion that if there were another flight it would be set up as Cooper's flight was, but it would be open-ended, allowing the astronaut to stay in orbit as long as was safe.

The Cooper flight was set for only 34 hours because expert ence on a man's ability to perform in space is not largely known to United States experts.

The Cooper flight could not have been planned on an open end basis, Kraft said, because there was little experience in man's endurance in space. But now that Cooper has shown the ability of a man in space over a long period, such a mission could be planned, Kraft said.

Stage Set for Washington Parley on Labor Strife

OTTAWA (CP) — American Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz and Canadian Labor Minister Allan MacEachen met here Friday to set the stage for next week's high-level conference in Washington on Great Lakes labor strife.

The two labor ministers are to meet president Claude Jodoin of the Canadian Labor Congress and AFL-CIO President George Meany in Washington Tuesday for talks aimed at easing shipping disruptions on the Great Lakes.

There was no announcement after their informal meeting followed by a working dinner. Guests at the dinner included External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and U.S. Ambassador W. Walton Butterworth.

A reliable source said the discussions centred on how to implement the Hyatt-La Prade agreement of Prime Minister Pearson and President Kennedy that ships and their crews "should be free to go about their lawful business without impediment or harassment" on the Great Lakes.

The prime minister and the president agreed that this freedom of movement is "essential" and they expressed concern about the consequences of industrial strife on the central waterway between the two nations.

A battle between the Canadian Labor Congress and Hal C. Banks' Seafarers' International Union of Canada (ind.) has disrupted the operations of Upper Lakes Shipping Limited of Toronto, second-ranking shipping firm on the lakes.

The SIU claims the CLC-affiliated Canadian Maritime Union, which provides the crews for Upper Lakes ships, is a "phony" union that is threatening the jobs of American sailors. Through boycotts and picket lines, the SIU and its CLC union allies have harassed Upper Lakes ships in American lake-ports.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE OPENS ON MONDAY

Govt. Could Face 6 Tests of Confidence

OTTAWA (CP)—The eight-day throne speech debate during which the new Liberal government can face as many as six tests of confidence opens in the Commons Monday.

According to an informed government source, the debate will continue uninterrupted, unless some emergency requires immediate legislative action, until Wednesday, May 29, when under the rules the final motion must be put to a vote.

How many tests of strength the Pearson government will face depends on caucus and leadership decisions of the Progressive Conservative, Social Credit and New Democratic parties. Any MP can move a non-confidence motion during the first six days, though only two can be before the House at any one time.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, prime minister for almost five years, is said to be the government's defeat April 8, leads off the debate Monday. It may be an hour or more after the 2:30 p.m. EDT opening before he gets the floor, depending on the length of the question period and other routine business.

TO MOVE MOTION

Mr. Diefenbaker is expected to move the main non-confidence motion, which will be voted on Thursday night. He will be followed by Prime Minister Pearson, who along with the opposition leader has unlimited time to put forward his views.

Subsequent speakers, in order, are Social Credit Leader Thompson—who has an opportunity to move a non-confidence amendment to Mr. Diefenbaker's motion — and NDP Leader T. C. Douglas.

Mr. Thompson said it should not be assumed that Social Credit non-confidence in the Pearson government. Any such motion by him would be voted on Friday night, affording the NDP a chance to move non-confidence.

Social Creditor sources are trying to upset the Pearson government, and want to propose a motion only if they are not satisfied with whatever motion Mr. Diefenbaker moves, he said in an interview.

The fact the government intends to have the throne speech debate run its normal course, uninterrupted, marks the failure of opposition parties to secure a quick approach made to opposition parties to set the debate aside for introduction of the first of several bills. The opposition was reported anxious to put the new government to a test of confidence before any legislative steps are taken.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRIDAY, May 17, 1963—

Prime Minister Pearson said the government has not yet reached a definite decision on its stand on a multi-national or integrated nuclear force for NATO.

Justice Minister Cherrier said anti-combines investigators are checking sugar price increases but recent boosts seemed to line with higher world prices.

Annual reports were tabled showing 1962 deficits of $48,919,454 for the CNR, $3,540,625 for TCA and $13,104,012 for the seaway authority.

Pauline Jewett (L—Northumberland), in the Commons session's first speech, said the ambitious Liberal program will inevitably mean more government regulation.

Army Sgt. Maj. Loses an Arm Above Elbow

Biggest Violence Wave Hits Montreal Suburb

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's biggest wave of terrorist violence struck the residential suburb of Westmount Friday as time-bombs tore apart six public mail boxes and critically injured an army explosives expert.

Other bomb-carrying boxes were later destroyed deliberately.

Sgt. Maj. Walter Rockey Leja, 45, was removing one of 15 time-bombs discovered by police when the device exploded in his face.

Hospital authorities early today gave him a 50-50 chance of surviving the blast. Doctors amputated Sgt. Leja's left arm at the elbow, then worked on his chest and facial injuries for five hours on the operating table.

His condition was described as critical at 7 a.m. but doctors said his blood pressure was good, giving rise to hope he would survive.

"You could say he is holding his own," said a spokesman.

Police have promised strong counter-measures to check terrorist activity.

Friday's series of explosions was the latest—and worst—of a series of bombings blamed on Le Front de Liberation Quebecois, a group of self-styled "cell-commandos" pledged to achieve Quebec independence by violent means.

ADMITS ENLARGED BLAST

The FLQ has admitted responsibility for the death of a 55 - year - old night watchman, W. V. O'Neill, in a home blast at the rear of an army recruiting office last April 20.

Early reports of Friday's wave of bombings said Leja also was killed. The army said it got this information from West-mount police.

L. Adrien Robert, Montreal police director, announced that police have set up a special 200-man squad, working 12 - hour shifts, to fight terrorism.

He called a meeting for 10 a.m. today with representatives of all Montreal island police forces, the RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police.

The day of terror for formally placid Westmount, a mainly English - speaking municipality of 32,000, started at about 3 a.m. EST Friday when five bombs exploded in mail boxes within 20 minutes.

There were no injuries, but property adjacent to the widely-scattered boxes was damaged.

FINDS DYNAMITE

Later, a postman picking up mail from the Victorian Order of Nurses building found a dynamite time-bomb—four sticks of dynamite wrapped together and attached to a cheap clock timer.

"Man, I ran and I ran," said mailman Pierre Cote after he

Premier Orders Special Efforts To Stop Blasts

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Lesage, who attended a cabinet meeting Friday against his doctor's orders, said he has asked provincial police to take "special efforts" to break up a ring of bomb-planting terrorists in the province.

"I have asked the provincial police to make special efforts to put an end to me," he said following a 2½-hour cabinet sitting.

Earlier, Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson said he would demand the immediate replacement of Justice Minister Gerard Lesage Lapalme and of Josaphat Brunet.

Cooper Spots Own Neighborhood From Hundred Miles in Space

ABOARD USS KEARSARGE (AP) — A Texas Gordon Leo Cooper marveled Friday at the clarity with which he could pinpoint spots on earth more than 100 miles in space. He even spotted his own neighborhood in Houston, Tex.

"It was an ideal day for an ideal flight," Cooper told Capt. Richard Pollard, the recovery physician.

The astronaut said he could see smoke curling from cookfires in Tibetan villages and was amazed at the grandeur of the Himalayas. He said he could clearly saw a ground lighting experiment in South Africa.

The experiment was designed to test the spaceman's ability to spot a light of known intensity—in this case 2,000,000 candlepower—for the future task of guiding men back from moon trips. The xenon bulb burned for three minutes in the town of Bloemfontein during Cooper's sixth orbit.

As Cooper passed over Houston at an altitude of 100 miles during his 22nd flight, he

He could pick out the Clear Lake district area, Cooper said he could not see his own house because of the trees.

He said he saw all the Florida coast and as far north as Washington or New York.

Cooper said he saw a trawler from one of his orbiting catnaps started to discover his weightless sleeping position in front of him.

When he decided to settle back for his 7½-hour snooze, he said, he tucked his thumbs under his harness straps to keep his hands from accidentally flipping a switch while he slept. Russian communists also took this precaution.

Pollard said Cooper also told him he had dreamed during his flight "but he doesn't recall the contents of the dream."

Ground physicians had suspected Cooper was dreaming when his heartbeat, monitored by sensors, quickened suddenly and then returned to normal. Later they reckoned the sudden change resulted from Cooper waking to make an adjustment in his suit temperature.

Pioneer Club Of BCI Sponsors Guest Speaker

On Wednesday, May 15, the staff and students of the Belleville Collegiate enjoyed a very interesting assembly presented by the Pioneer Club. The guest speaker was Mrs. Harriett Mitchell, a former B.C.I.A.V.S. student, who is home on a visit from Ghana, where she has spent two years in Uganda, Africa. Upon completion of her grade XIII in 1953, Mrs. Mitchell attended Queen's University and graduated in 1956 with an honour B.A. in Biology. She and her husband, Dr. D. L. Mitchell, spent one year, 1957 to 1958 in England, where Dr. Mitchell was studying for his Ph.D at the University of Bristol. Since then they have been in Africa, Mitchell and their two young sons have been living in East Africa, where Dr. Mitchell is a lecturer at the Makerere University College, Kampala, Uganda.

At the assembly, Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, the B.C.I.A.V.S. Pioneer Club conducted a "Safari" into Africa's campaign last year. One hundred and seven parcels were used books sent to Uganda and distributed to over twenty-four native elementary and secondary schools and teacher training colleges. Another fifty-three parcels were ready to be sent. Mrs. Mitchell expressed sincere thanks on behalf of the Ugandan people and the people of Uganda for this worthwhile effort. She said that she did not think that over twenty-four schools, but also helped strengthen Canada's reputation as a friendly, useful nation.

Speaking about life in Uganda, Mrs. Mitchell stated that the country is about the same size as southern Ontario with a population of seven million people. However, of seven million people, only 4 per cent live in cities, while the rest live on scattered farms.

HAS LIMITED FUNDS

This scattered population makes the keeping of schools very difficult. The secondary schools are almost entirely boarding schools as each takes in a large area to get sufficient students. Even under this system, secondary schools have an average of only two hundred students per school.

Mrs. Mitchell stressed is how fortunate we are to live in Canada. Uganda is a country with very limited funds to spend. The university, hospital and several other modern buildings were built by the British government, but now Uganda, an independent and no longer a protectorate of Britain. Of every three students who pass grade six, only one can get into grade seven as there is no room for the other two. Of every seven who pass grade eight only one can go on to grade nine because there is no school for the remaining six. In all of Uganda with seven million people, there are only about one hundred schools which could complete the equivalent of grade thirteen. This is not because of lack of intelligence, but lack of adequate accommodations.

Mrs. Mitchell illustrated this interesting and educational talk with beautiful colored slides which added much to the enjoyment of the assembly.

504 Attend Convention

Jehovah's Witnesses opened their convention in the Moira Secondary School last evening with 504 in attendance. Seventeen centres including Port Hope, Peterborough, Bancroft and Napanee were represented.

Speaking on the convention theme "Right Kind of Ministers" during his address of welcome, Mr. Laurier Saumur, the supervisor of ministers of Jehovah's Witnesses in eastern Ontario and Quebec, emphasized the need for more ministers who will take individual interest in strengthening the faith of others. "Faith does not come automatically. It must be built day-by-day over a period of time if it is going to stand the tests that lie ahead," Mr. Saumur said. His remarks introduced a program which included public Christian witness work.

Frigid Lockers At Bancroft To Be Closed

It is undoubtedly a sign of the times, but another of the frigid lockers which formerly served a purpose in every small community, is going to the packing centre, is going to be closed.

The latest one is the Bancroft Frigid Lockers operated by Wallace Rutledge and has announced that as of June 30th it will be closed down for good.

He will sell the business "as is" or will sell the building and equipment.

The advent of the deep freeze has cut into the locker business in Bancroft, as in those without this modern equipment rate the frigid lockers when they close.

The operator of the Spencer Frigid Lockers says the market square in Belleville admits that the freezers have cut into the locker business.

But he takes the optimistic view.

"What we lose in one way we gain in another," he says.

He says that when customers buy a freezer they still look to the locker for meat and wrapping of the meat which they buy in the fall for the winter months ahead.

Belleville Boy Team Member Golden Hawks

ST. HUBERT, P.Q. — Leading Aircraftman Douglas Brenton, son of Mrs. Barbara Brenton, 81 S. George St., Belleville, is a member of the RCAF's famed Golden Hawks aerobatic team.

Enlisting in the RCAF as an Electrical Technician in 1957, LAC Brenton became a member of the Golden Hawks groundcrew in 1961 at Chatham, N.B. The team is now based at Trenton, Ont.

This summer will mark the fifth international tour of the Golden Hawks. By mid-September they will have performed before thousands from coast to coast in Canada; and at several air shows in the United States.

The team is scheduled to appear at RCAF Station Trenton's Air Force Day, June 1st.

Trenton Wing 413 of the Air Force Association bid farewell to Group Captain D. J. Williams, Commanding Officer of RCAF Station Trenton, Thursday night. Group Captain Williams will leave Trenton in July to take up duties in North Bay. At the left of the picture is Flt. Lt. J. R. Philip, liaison officer between the wing and the air force; T. H. Hetherington chairman of the wing's air cadet squadron's sponsoring committee; Group Captain Williams and William Menzies, immediate past president of the wing; who presented the commanding officer with a gift from the wing.

THE FINISHING TOUCH—Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hemberger, the new stewards at the Country Club, put the final touches on a dining lounge setting. The young couple who came here from Peterborough are highly experienced in the culinary and dining arts. The club's "inner" men and women should get excellent treatment this summer.

Country Club's "New Look" Features the Fine Cuisine Of Mr., Mrs. H. Hemberger

By Geo. H. Carver

The Bay of Quinte Country Club has a definite "new look" this year.

New lounge and dining facilities highlight the social background of the new eighteen-hole course.

The modern touch to club house attractions and the upsurge in popularity of golf has resulted in a surprising increase in membership.

With "the best deserves the best" thinking the club directorate has gone "all out" to offer membership just that.

Evidence of this is seen in the acquisition of the club's new stewards Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hemberger.

This attractive young couple brings with them not a few years of banquet and club cuisine experience.

Mr. Hemberger easily rates as a master chef. Mrs. Hemberger matches him with culinary and arrangement ability.

Both have pleasing personalities. Their youthful cleanup appearances provide an other asset to the background of the club's social activities.

German-born Herbert Hemberger took a chef's course after leaving school in his native Mannheim. He studied three years, just two years short of a master's diploma, then came to Canada. He has been in this country ten years.

His German educational background stood him in good stead although at first the language problem proved an obstacle

He served as chef in prominent St. Catharines and Niagara Falls hotels.

To gain more experience Mr. Hemberger went to Baffin Island where he served as chef for the Dew Lines for ten months.

He catered to maintenance crews all rugged hearty trenchermen.

"They were given the very best of food, including the best steaks three times a week. They ate like kings" said Mrs. Hemberger.

Returning to Ontario the couple went to Peterborough where Mr. Hemberger was head chef at the Rockhaven, one of the city's top-flight restaurants.

Later he accepted the position as banquet chef at Empress Hotel where he remained for five years.

Mrs. Hemberger is the former Anne Pitten of Peterborough The couple have two sons Tommy and Herbert, junior.

The country club acquired their services and in the brief time they have been there, they have proven they are masters of the culinary and dining art.

Mr. Hemberger is adept at menu arrangement. He has a fine flair for variety in meals. Mrs. Hemberger is no less competent in a slightly minor capacity.

With club officials Mr. Hemberger has planned a "new order" in dining facilities. An innovation is a "business man's special" which will be served daily at the nominal price of one dollar.

President George O'Brien said the club plan dinners by reservation for members, their families and friends. Special attention will be given to small dining parties, anniversaries and other collective get-togethers.

The "outer and inner man" will get the best of service at the Bay of Quinte Country Club this season.

Belleville Mental Health

MENTAL HEALTH
By McCOLL METCALFE M.D.
CITY HEALTH OFFICER

Year in and year out in the Province of Ontario, the Ontario Hospitals are filled with patients. There are also patients attending mental health clinics, patients in psychiatric wards of general hospitals as well as patients visiting their own psychiatrist or physician. All these patients have some emotional or mental problems.

The problem in Mental Health is not only on mental illness and patients in mental hospitals but also on the promotion and safeguarding the good mental health in the community.

Have you ever stopped to think of what goes on in a Mental Hospital; ever thought of the male and female patients there? Have you wondered as to what kind of a life they lead and the kind of treatment they receive; how long they have been confined in hospital or how soon they will recover?

Perhaps you have already been shown through an Ontario Hospital or visited the psychiatric ward of a hospital. No doubt there are some who feel that mental health is of no interest to them. This is a wrong concept as it is everybody's business and everyone in the community has a role to play and this role is important, to remove the hushed secrecy from those unfortunately affected with some form of mental illness as well as to how the need for projects that promote mental health.

Recently in Belleville there was formed a branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association. We all cannot be part of a medical team that deals directly with the patient, but we all can in some way be of help to the mentally ill.

The Belleville Branch urges to learn more about these matters by becoming a member of the local association. There are more patients occupying beds in hospitals than by patients suffering from all other types of disease taken together. There is an urgent necessity for preventative work.

TCA Stands Alone

Canada, at least briefly, has the distinction of offering the lowest-priced trans-Atlantic air service.

Two factors have combined to put Trans-Canada Airlines in magnificent isolation—both factors legislative rather than aeronautical in nature. The two U.K. trans-Atlantic carriers, Pan-American and Trans-World, like the TCA, are financially able and willing to continue to carry passengers at a profit at the old rates, but they lack two supports which TCA enjoys. One of these is a government regulatory body authorized to control their rates, so that they can plead inability to abide by an International Air Transport Association agreement to raise them; the other is an agreement which assures them of the right to continue landing passengers at the old rate until the dispute is settled.

It would take a Solomon with an AA rating (AA—that's aeronautical accountancy- not Alcoholics Anonymous), to cut his way through the red tape of the Paris Air Agreement. It's an easy out suggests itself when we learn that the rate increase is sought by government-subsidized European airways, which have been losing money. But the obvious retort that governments never could run anything as efficiently as private enterprise trips over the fact that TCA, unlike the U.S. Pan-Am and Trans-World, is government-owned. Another apparently easy solution is suggested by the announcement that KLM, the world-spanning Dutch airline, plans to reduce its operations to cut down on deficits. Nuts, though, while it may be an acceptable solution for KLM, would be unthinkable for BOAC. Britain would hardly be willing to gracefully surrender the Atlantic skies to New World airlines. And Le Gros Charles de Gaulle would choke on such a prescription for Air France. TCA is able to put up a good argument, inasmuch as 60 per cent of its business comes from Canadians. It is natural that so many more Canadians wish to fly to Europe than Europeans to Canada. But we would be surprised if the same proportion of Pan-Am and Trans-World traffic originated on this side of the Atlantic. World leadership, such as the U.S. enjoys, inevitably draws many travellers, as it did centuries ago, when all roads led to Rome.

Of one thing, though, we feel certain. The International Air Transport Association can draw a neat red herring. With Pan-Am and Trans-World charging higher fares, IATA says it is worrying about the "two-fare structure" created by TCA's rate remaining lower. This, he says, may divert some traffic from the U.S. through Canada. The spread is $28. How many people who would normally fly to Europe from the U.S. would travel to Canada to save $28? A handful from border cities like Detroit and Buffalo, perhaps, but no more.

Speaking of Needlework

A leading Russian astronomer, Professor Alexander Mikhailov, has protested a U.S. project which spread a ring of four hundred million tiny copper needles in space around the world. The needles are planned to act as miniature dipole antennae, and may become the base of a jamproof military radio network and missile control system.

Other astronomers, notably Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank Observatory in England, have echoed Prof. Mikhailov's sentiments. Sir Bernard especially voiced concern about "the attitude of mind" which makes such an experiment possible without previously agreed international safeguards.

But Prof. Mikhailov should have kept his mouth shut. His claim that the needles might interfere with radio-astronomic and other space studies is more likely to be taken, within the U.S., as justification for the project.

After all, the reasoning is the U.S. is likely to take the form that if the Russians don't like it, they can eat our grapes. Even if the Russian protest is justified, U.S. reasoning might run, anything that can be done to hinder Russian space study is worthwhile in itself.

But experiments in space are inclined to be permanent, or nearly so, and small causes just might have big effects. The ring of needles is expected to last about five years, but it may be dispersed within weeks. On the other hand, it just might last for many more years than predicted. And the effects of the ring, whatever they may be, will last just as long as the ring.

Some people say that it's absurd to believe in what can't be proved. But every progressive step in evolution has been taken by just such a belief.—Playwright Christopher Fry.

Dog Eat Dog Battle Looms Twixt Pearson, Diefenbaker

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — It is only two days old, but already the First Session of the new 26th Parliament shapes up as a personal vendetta between Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

The simple, brutal truth is — and all of Parliament Hill knows it — the two men utterly detest each other.

And what once may have been only a mild rivalry has become a savage blood feud.

For the six years of Conservative regime they were political opponents, but until this last election, early in a battle, and on all but one occasion, a mild-mannered sort of way.

It was last one-sided.

There, on one side, was Mike Pearson, diplomat-turned-politico, a new boy in the Commons club, urbane, affable, but uncertain and unwilling to inflict verbal wounds in the offensive cut and thrust of Parliament.

RUTHLESS TOUGH

And, on the other side was John Diefenbaker, hard-boiled old pro with a long lifetime of training in politics and 20 years in Parliament, confident, even cocky and dearly loving every deeply satisfying moment of the blood and thunder of battle in the Commons floor.

Diefenbaker viewed Pearson, accordingly, as a political dilettante, a diplomat who had strayed from the delicate and overrefined pink-tea-party, never-never world of foreign affairs, into the worst of all, an Egghead.

Dief, in his more relaxed and intimate moments, refers to PM as a hilarious and respectably accurate imitation of the once-stirred-pudding Britisher.

And Pearson, in turn, regards Diefenbaker's campaigning as the most pityingly as a crude rural, insensitive to the nuances and diplomacy of international politics and perhaps even uncivilized.

If Mike had an imitation of Dief, not many people around Parliament Hill ever go to see it, but they frequently hear him speak, in distaste of "that man."

It was no secret that, for some time, perhaps as long as a couple of years after Dief tore great blasting strips off him in his first few weeks in the Commons, Mike was literally terrified of him.

EPIC BUTCHERY

That was one of the classic slaughters of the Commons, with Diefenbaker so murderously mauling Pearson that old CCF-er Colin Cameron actually felt sorry for him.

Then came last year's election and almost unbelievably, Dief found himself in an unprecedented position as minority position as Prime Minister— and even more incredibly, who was to blame for the unforgiveable political affront but that "amateur" Pearson.

Worse still by Pearson, newly confident as Opposition Leader, he hurled and harassed administration in Parliament that Diefenbaker could do little.

Estimates—the funds used to finance all Federal operations—passed overwhelmingly either the pre- or post-election Sessions, and no Budget.

The result was Diefenbaker disaster came this April with defeat and the reluctant retreat into Opposition.

For Dief, there was the humiliation of being Second Best and a lot of the Jodrell Bank Observatory in England, have echoed Prof. Mikhailov's sentiments. Sir Bernard especially voiced concern about "the attitude of mind" which makes such an experiment possible without previously agreed international safeguards.

But Prof. Mikhailov should have kept his mouth shut. His claim that the needles might interfere with radio-astronomic and other space studies is more likely to be taken, within the U.S., as justification for the project.

EPIC BUTCHERY

That was one of the classic slaughters of the Commons, with Diefenbaker so murderously mauling Pearson that old CCF-er Colin Cameron actually felt sorry for him.

Then came last year's election and almost unbelievably, Dief found himself in an unprecedented position as minority position as Prime Minister— and even more incredibly, who was to blame for the unforgiveable political affront but that "amateur" Pearson.

Worse still by Pearson, newly confident as Opposition Leader, he hurled and harassed administration in Parliament that Diefenbaker could do little.

Estimates—the funds used to finance all Federal operations—passed overwhelmingly either the pre- or post-election Sessions, and no Budget.

The result was Diefenbaker disaster came this April with defeat and the reluctant retreat into Opposition.

For Dief, there was the humiliation of being Second Best and a lot of the Jodrell Bank Observatory in England, have echoed Prof. Mikhailov's sentiments. Sir Bernard especially voiced concern about "the attitude of mind" which makes such an experiment possible without previously agreed international safeguards.

But Prof. Mikhailov should have kept his mouth shut. His claim that the needles might interfere with radio-astronomic and other space studies is more likely to be taken, within the U.S., as justification for the project.

After all, the reasoning is the U.S. is likely to take the form that if the Russians don't like it, they can eat our grapes. Even if the Russian protest is justified, U.S. reasoning might run, anything that can be done to hinder Russian space study is worthwhile in itself.

But experiments in space are inclined to be permanent, or nearly so, and small causes just might have big effects. The ring of needles is expected to last about five years, but it may be dispersed within weeks. On the other hand, it just might last for many more years than predicted. And the effects of the ring, whatever they may be, will last just as long as the ring.

Some people say that it's absurd to believe in what can't be proved. But every progressive step in evolution has been taken by just such a belief.—Playwright Christopher Fry.

Deaf-Blind To Get Home

London Letter

"At Peterborough, in Cambridgeshire, work is about to start on what is probably the first housing project of its kind in the world," reported Allan Murray recently in the "New Idea" program broadcast weekly in the BBC General Overseas Service. "The main buildings will contain twelve small flats, a guest-house for twelve people who are both deaf and blind.

"The site was given by a private donor. And the National Deaf - Blind Helpers League which launched the scheme, has raised the entire building cost by public subscription. A few weeks ago the building contract due for completion in about a year's time, was signed by the League's secretary, a man of 38 who has himself enjoyed neither sight nor hearing for the past 25 years.

"Describing these homes on the culmination of a lifelong dream, he said they would prove that deaf-blind people are not outcasts, but members of the community who can help themselves. The workshops will, of course, had to bear in mind that everything, from structural shapes and fabrics to the positioning of fitments, should help the tenants to feel their way round their own homes."

Special housing for the old and disabled is receiving considerable attention in England now. In a broadcast in the BBC General Overseas Service topical weekly program "Britain and Now", some tenants of a London housing estate visited a temporary housing society into flats for disabled people describes vividly what it means to a chronically paralyzed person in a wheelchair to enjoy a large degree of independence because light switches, shelves and other household equipment have been designed with their physical handicaps in mind. Such houses often make it possible for disabled people to live in their own homes instead of remaining in hospital.

Horsepower Race Opposed

Milwaukee Journal

In his campaign against revival of the horsepower race, Roy Abernethy, president of American Motors Corp., made piercing questions for the auto industry.

"How can you expect young people to be wholly restrained when they drive cars specially excited them with track records and burning rubber?" he asked the other night in Milwaukee.

Again, "How can you honestly oppose excessive speed on the highway while confidently demonstrating and promoting it and boasting about it?"

It was only a few years ago that the entire auto industry agreed, at the urging of certain congressmen, to stop emphasizing power, speed and acceleration. Now many of the same firms which made that agreement are churning up another horsepower marathon.

It is reassuring to find one auto executive who deplores this hypocrisy.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 18th, 1915.

Interest in conservation of existing timberlands and reforestation of denuded areas in the northern part of the county as a program to assist in retaining an adequate water supply was expressed by members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their regular luncheon meeting. O. H. Scott, manager of the Belleville Public Utilities started the ball rolling when at the conclusion of the meeting he read a press publication noting the success of the reforestation program undertaken by the village of Beeton in Simcoe County. He said the village's water supply rapidly diminishing the article indicated how reforestation had resulted in the water supply being increased and improved.

Rev. Dr. Bert Howard told of what had been accomplished about the Albert College campus during the past seven years. Approximately 700 trees had been planted each year with the livability averaging 75 per cent he stated.

Mrs. O. E. Sargent of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, has received a cable from her son, Sigm. M. C. Sargent announcing his safe arrival in England.

Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson and Miss Scott, nurses, Vivian and Jean, of Toronto who have been spending a few days with relatives in the city, have returned home.

Word was received at the home of Mr and Mrs. Earl Moon on Station Street, that their son Pte. E. H. Moon of the Ordnance Corps, arrived safely overseas.

Mr. Clifford McCormick, organist at the Belle Theatre, has returned after six years and he filled a two days' engagement at radio station CKOC in that city.

Mr. M. W. Mott, principal of Queen Alexandra public school here, has resigned after 21 years of faithful and efficient service. He will retire at the end of the term in June, having his years in the teaching profession Mr. Mott has devoted nearly 40 five days from his desk owing to illness. Top Money Draws Talent

Halifax Chronicle - Herald

Is Ed Sullivan a culture vulture, a sort of showbusiness brain robber?

Yes, according to The Cape Breton Post.

So impressed has Sullivan been with a lengthy list of international and Canadian entertainers that he came to this country looking for fresh Canadian talent for his weekly television show. He said amateurs need not apply for auditions; only professionals, the best of the lot, were wanted.

"Yes," cried the Sydney newspaper, "it's a raid on Canada, and it sounds almost like war."

Does it?

If the argument were followed through, Robert Goulet, in a fit of patriotism, should forego the half million dollars he will earn in the United States this year and stay in Canada to make perhaps one-twentieth that amount.

By the same token, Mary Pickford should have done the patriotic thing and gone to work for the National Film Board; Governor Rockefeller should be satisfied with roles in Canadian Opera Company productions; Gordon Sinclair should refuse all but Stratford and CBC offers; and Wayne and Shuster should have settled down all that money. My Soul! Why has Ireland been spoken of so?

Entertainers, like businessmen, go where the money is; and Canada, despite pressures on to stay in this country, they must be paid at, or near, prevailing rates. It is futile, then, to talk of "raids" when talent hunting is merely evidence of the free enterprise system at work. Some may wish for more government subsidies for Canadian entertainers, but while they might be useful in certain limited cases, they would never overcome the competitive pressure of North American showbusiness.

Indeed, the only alternative to meeting money with money, (public or private) and opportunity, is to prevent the emigration of entertainers. This is how the Soviet Union retains its top people — although a few do escape now and then, we are told.

To Your Good Health

Some Gall Bladders Are Difficult to X-Ray

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: If a person has had two X-rays of the gall bladder a few weeks apart, and showed nothing, what is the opinion of its condition?— M.L.

This doubtless sounds like a very simple question. It isn't. X-rays are wonderful. I'd hate to think of how much more difficult medicine would be without them. However, all an X-ray can do is picture what it "sees."

Bones give distinct shadows via X-ray. A broken leg shows clearly in the shadow-picture.

But if you want a picture of, let's say, the colon, the X-ray isn't going to show much of anything, unless you first fill the organ full of something that will make a shadow — a substance that will prevent the X-ray from passing through or easily as they do through ordinary flesh. So that's why barium enemas are given, the solution of barium casts a shadow, just as bone does.

With the gall bladder, the same problem exists. Gall stones do not always register on X-ray film. Two American physicians, Dr. Warren Cole and the late Dr. Evarts Graham, discovered that a certain dye (tetra - iodo - phenolphthalein) tended to concentrate in the mucosal surfaces of the gall bladder. This dye also casts an X-ray shadow.

Thus by giving a patient the dye, it frequently became possible to accumulate in a pattern which would show even the gall stones, if any, were.

Surprisingly, a good outline could be obtained of a normal gall bladder, but not of one that was faulty or diseased. Even in the latter case, just did not concentrate there.

Other dyes have since been developed and techniques have been improved, but the riddle of gall bladder X-ray remains.

Thus when you write that two X-rays "showed nothing," I can interpret only the following possibilities.

1 — You mean that nothing abnormal was found, and that gall bladder was healthy, without stones, with no ailments. Or:

2 — The gall bladder could not be pictured at all because it refused to accept the dye. This would be evidence that the organ is not in healthy condition.

How to decide what to do? By considering such other symptoms as can be found.

This answer is a fair example of the difficulties which lurk in the day-to-day practice of medicine.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes sties? Have them constantly. — Mrs. E. W.

They are caused from one the staphylococcus germ in the tiny glands of the eye-lids. They tend to occur in groups. With this type of infection (like boils) you must be particularly careful not to let the matter from one stye spread on the skin and perhaps start another. Some people are particularly susceptible to this type of germ. You may be one. It is also possible for the germ to lurk in the nose, then emerge and cause trouble.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can gonorrhea be cured? Is it more serious for a man? — S. J.

Yes, it can be cured. The beginning of the disease may be less noticeable to a woman than to a man, but it is a dangerous disease in either sex.

Attention all women! For the pamphlet, "The Pre-Menstrual Blues," write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 188, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents to cover handling. This pamphlet may help you!

Few Gurkhas Left in Army

Victoria Times

The ranks of the Gurkhas in British Commonwealth guerillas in Malaya. Presumably the number under British colors will continue to diminish though, by an agreement with Nepal signed in 1858, Gurkhas could enlist in the British forces.

A great British army tradition is on the wane — inevitably in the wake of Indian independence and Britain's release from countries formerly colored red on the world map.

But it is a tradition that will be remembered with pride, an association of efficient, courageous soldiers from Nepal and the British officers who have led them in many battles and to many honors.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

There are many sensations to the business of growing old, most of them unpleasant. But the haunting one is the feeling of being a stranger in the place you thought you knew so well.

In youth I remember, there is the feeling of being a stranger as you set out on your own into the formidable world. But most of us in a little while gather around us familiarities of people and places, and in the young prime of the thirties, we are very much at home in a world we love. But happier forties and fifties, the more we love the familiar world, and the more we are strangers in it, least of all ourselves. But somewhere in our sixties, family and friends begin quietly to drop away. For a while we don't notice that we are becoming surrounded by strangers. Then it occurs to us that the place which we have known so long is not the street we have changed. Tall buildings fall of strangeness where there were none into the familiar skyline. But most of us in a little while gather around us familiarities of people and places, and in the young prime of the thirties, we are very much at home in a world we love. But happier forties and fifties, the more we love the familiar world, and the more we are strangers in it, least of all ourselves. But some-discovered the first of three bombs on his route.

"I stopped just long enough to call the police."

Police called in explosives experts to defuse the bombs.

Leja and his partner in the Royal Canadian Engineers, Lieut. Douglas Simpson, had taken apart two of the devices and were starting on the third.

It went off in Leja's hands, as hundreds of horrified spectators watched. Simpson, stand, ing about 10 feet behind Leja, was uninjured.

Det. - Sgt. Leo Pjouffe, the Montreal police bomb expert, joined in the work, hopping from site to site in a yellow convertible.

BLOWS ONE UP

Pjouffe dismantled two bombs and caused a third to explode out of harm's way.

When Leja was taken to hospital, the army gave up the idea of dismantling any more of the time-bombs.

The four remaining bombs were insulated with bales of straw, moved by a mobile crane, then exploded deliberately with another dynamite charge.

All the bombs appeared identically made—four sticks of dynamite taped to a clockwork timer.

Police loudspeakers warned residents to "open all windows and stay under cover at the back of the house."

Westmount Mayor Chipman H. Drury led the demolition teams from site to site, where the pattern was repeated.

Herman Frieda, a construction company explosives expert, crept up under cover of a bale of straw and dropped two sticks of dynamite down the mail boxes.

EXPLODES BOX

He ran for cover and Lieut. Simpson pressed a plunger and exploded the bomb, box and all. Some windows were shattered in nearby houses and firemen extinguished the blazing straw bales.

Police checked all 85 mail boxes in the city to be sure that all bombs had been discovered.

The Montreal police director said he was certain that the wave of bombings was the work of "the group which calls itself the FLQ."

Police had compared dismantled bombs with others they rendered harmless in earlier bomb incidents.

"We can't say for sure at this time," Mr. Robert said, "but it does look very much like they were all put together by the same persons."

Maybe the odd bomb was planted by some mentally disturbed person. But the majority of the work was that of the FLQ."

The FLQ, an ardent separatist group, has claimed responsibility in statements mailed to the press for several bombings in recent months.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of Montreal's executive committee, said the special anti-terrorist squad planned by Mr. Robert may cost as much as $5,000 a day.

"The circumstances call for such vigilance," he said.

"As of tonight, all the necessary credits are at the disposal of the police director."

Lions Club Preparing Beach, Park

Campbellford: — At the regular meeting of the Campbellford Lions Club on Wednesday evening, membership certificates were presented to three new members: Bill Wilks, Ted Keir, and Morley Horsman. Another Cavley was elected 2nd vice-president for the club for 1963-64 with the balance of the officers having been elected by acclamation at a previous meeting.

A donation was voted to the Campbellford Branch of the Canadian Cancer Society and plans were finalized for the semi-annual "Ladies Night" which is planned for June. A stag night for members of the club and their male friends is scheduled under the chairmanship of Vincent Herrington.

A report was given by James Wilson, of the Club representative, on the Community Centre Committee, concerning plans and progress made on the construction of the proposed Community Centre in Campbellford.

BEACH — PARK

Progress was also reported on the efforts of the Club in preparing the Lions Beach and park for the summer season. Considerable work has already been done on the property and finishing touches will be completed in the near future.

New picnic tables have been purchased and set up and a new sanitary facility nearing completion. An official date for the opening of the premises has not been set but will be set shortly and announced.

The Park Committee, under the chairmanship of Ken Roberts, have done a great deal of work in preparing the property for use and a number of members of the club volunteered their services for painting, construction, general maintenance tasks that will be completed.

A Chinese auction, held by the club, was won by Morley Horsman.

Heavy Traffic On Highways, Two Accidents

Holiday traffic on all main highways in the Belleville area last night may have set this dual record:

(1) It peaked the heaviest volume ever; (2) Accidents, in ratio to volume, were surprisingly few.

Ont veteran police officer said traffic was the heaviest he had ever seen on Thursday night as city dwellers trekked from town to country for the week-end. It reached a peak about 8 p.m.

Observers were only two accidents involving injuries — one east of Belleville, the other north of Stirling.

Traffic police in the area are keeping crossed fingers that the small number of accidents may be the trend for the holiday.

On Highway 14, five miles north of Stirling, three Peterborough youths were injured when their car went out of control.

Taken to Belleville General Hospital were Ronald Varney, 20, with minor injuries; Clifford Calvert, 19, injuries not ascertained and 16-year-old James Desbarbieux with back injuries.

On Highway 2, a mile east of Belleville, Lorraine Hayes, R.R. 4 Belleville, received minor injuries when his car collided with a panel truck driven by Richard Thompson, 44 John Street.

Renewed Bombing Threats Worry Tense Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A tense weekend lies ahead for racially - troubled Birmingham with threats of renewed bombings reported.

While the stage was set for a meeting of President Kennedy and Alabama's segregationist governor George C. Wallace in North Alabama, police here ordered tight security measures.

Kennedy and Wallace were expected to meet at a Tennessee Valley Authority anniversary observance at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The president is scheduled to speak.

While rumors forecast an uneasy weekend, Police Chief Jamie Moore said: "We are taking precautions which we consider necessary."

Although he declined to elaborate, a new guards were posted at some buildings which could possibly be targets of bombings. Highway patrolmen guarded the streets, as they have since last weekend's violence.

TELEPHONE THREATS

Anonymous telephone threats have been received by Negro leaders, some while business men and various places of business.

In other developments:

1. Attorney-General Kennedy said at Asheville, N.C., that damage inflicted upon the United States image abroad by incidents like the Birmingham racial crisis is great, but superficial.

2. The effect of racial strife here dominated the Alabama legislature in Montgomery as legislators voted to stand solidly behind Wallace, who challenged Kennedy's sending of 3,000 soldiers to bases in Alabama.

3. Birmingham Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor urged the people to leave racial demonstrations to law enforcement officers. He spoke to the Montgomery Citizens Council.

4. Four Negroes, and five white persons were named to a bi-racial committee by the Alabama city commission to help solve any racial problems existing in that north Alabama city.

5. The city of Huntsville, Ala., site of Redstone Arsenal and the Madison county command also voted to remove white and Negro men from the courthouse at Huntsville.

4,500 Workers Laid off Due to Strike

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP)— The Ford Motor Company announced Friday night it is laying off about 4,500 more employees today because of a wildcat strike at a Chicago stamping plant, bringing the total layoff to 12,500 men.

The Chicago strike, involving about 4,000 men, threatens to make idle 40,000 Ford workers by next week because of a parts shortage. Disciplining of five United Auto Workers union members was the reported cause of the strike.

Ken Bannon, head of the UAW ford department, hastened to Chicago to seek a resumption of work.

Bannon and other UAW officials sent telegrams to the striking local in Chicago, telling it that the stoppage was unauthorized and ordering the men back on the job.

Montreal Group Given Praise By Adjudicator

By PATRICIA RUSAK

KITCHENER (CP)—The only Canadian selection play in this year's Dominion Drama Festival—Claude Jasmin's Le Vesu Dort—was enthusiastically received by the adjudicator following its performance by Le Jeune Comedie of Montreal Friday night.

Pierre Lefevre said the whole evening went with a real "zip" and that the performance was one of the best of the six he had seen during the festival, which began Monday.

"Yet another form of theatre, almost at the end of the week, shows Canadian theatre is perfectly alive," Mr. Lefevre said.

"The world is in an experimental revue-type of play with nine short sketches which satirize religion, war, labor unions and almost every aspect of civilization.

Mr. Lefevre said the French-Canadian company of 10 actors and four technicians deserves credit for the "original scenic invention" and its perfection, especially of the lighting and music.

NEEDS PERFECTION

"Nothing was left to chance," he said, explaining that a play of this type relies on such perfection for success.

"Costumes, masks and economy of sentence with all in keeping with the style of the show."

Mr. Lefevre described the first of the nine sequences as "brilliant — as good a revue overture as I can remember seeing anywhere" — but found the last two sequences dull in comparison with the rest.

But the best feminine performance of the evening came in the last sequence, he said. He commended Yvette Mathieu for her portrayal of a despairing housewife.

Mr. Lefevre will see a matinee performance today of Thornton Wilder's Our Town by the Barn Players of Toronto, and finally Moliere's Tartuffe by a group from Saskatoon, Sask.

The festival trophy with a $1,000 cash prize and 15 other prizes will be awarded tonight.

Girl Awarded $40,000 in Damages

SUDBURY (CP)—A 17-year-old girl who sees only the right half of objects or persons as a result of an automobile accident was awarded $40,000 in damages Friday.

Mr. Justice Samuel Hughes made the award in a non-jury sitting of Ontario Supreme Court after hearing evidence that the injury suffered by Gilberte Rainville, of Sturgeon Falls, Chalmsford is "worse than lost completely the use of one eye."

Dr. Rene Wiz, an eye specialist, said:

"Her eyes are still perfect organs. The trouble lies with a part of the brain that was damaged.

"This girl will go through life with a vision that will enable her to see only the right side of an object or persons. The part of the brain that enables her to see the left side of things is damaged."

The award was part of a total judgment of $49,568 granted the six members of the Rainville family following a head-on collision last Nov. 18 with a car driven by Gabriel Gisaliion, 42, of nearby Sheppard Valley. Bisaillon did not contest the suit.

tario debt. Both the CNR management and the government-appointed board of directors feel that the heavy burden of long-term debt obscures the true impact of the CNR's rehabilitation program, he said.

"There is a marked divergence between what might be termed the 'service result' and the 'bookkeeping result,' he added.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

In terms of revenue ton-miles, a statistical measure of freight traffic, the life-blood of the railway, the CNR had its highest volume of business in the last five years.

Freight and passenger revenues were up. So was income for telecommunications and hotels.

D. J. Rankin, president of the seaway authority, reported that traffic in 1962 was the busiest since the seaway was opened for business in 1959.

The St. Lawrence section of the seaway handled 26,600,000 tons of cargo last year, up 906,501 in tolls. The Welland Canal handled 35,600,000 tons of cargo for a toll revenue of $640,193.

In 1961, the St. Lawrence section handled 23,400,000 tons and made $8,078,448 in tolls, while the Welland received $1,460,451 in tolls on 31,800,000 tons of cargo. Suspension of tolls on the Welland last July accounted for the large decline in revenues on this waterway.

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR — Mrs. W. S. Northcott holds the shovel while Mrs. Wm. G. Slack and Belleville Horticultural Society president Bill Love, admire Norway Maple tree planted in Zwick's Island in honor of Mrs. Northcott. The Horticultural Society each year will plant a tree on the island in honor of the person deemed to have done most to help beautify the city. This year also the Society is planting 10 flowering crabapples at the island.

Mrs. W.S. Northcott Honored By City Horticultural Society, Tree Planted at Zwick's Island

More than forty years of faithful effort to enhance Belleville's appearance were thus honored by the Horticultural Society when Mrs. W. S. Northcott of Pinnacle street, Citizen of the Year, and a tree planted in her honor by the Society was planted on Zwick's Island.

In acknowledgment of her efforts the Society has feted her as Citizen of the Year, with the first of its annual awards being made in her honor. The award comes in the form of a fourteen-foot Norway Maple planted on Zwick's Island.

In making the presentation, Mr. Jack Hodgson, vice-president of the Society paid tribute to Mrs. Northcott and Mrs. W. Slack, secretary-treasurer pinned a corsage as a note of affection and thanks. The recipient capably and humbly acknowledged the honor and expressed her gratitude. May the rose long bloom in her yard!

On the educational side of things, the members attending the monthly meeting received copies of sheets dealing with the care of cut flowers; this was information obtained during the April meeting at Stirling. Specimens of Oregon Grape Holly and Alpine currant in bloom were shown for the benefit of those members unfamiliar with such shrubs and in need perhaps of them.

WILL PLANT TREES

From the business point of view, plans were laid for the planting of the ten flowering crabs on Zwick's Island; tentative arrangements for the annual bus trip which this year will take the members and friends to tour the Royal Botanical Gardens at Hamilton were made. On behalf of the Zwick's Island projects, Mr. G. Nicholson, Parks Superintendent and past president of the society explained how the work was progressing and asked for donations of rockery and alpine plants for the beautiful rockery now in the process of development.

An awards committee is being set up for the annual citizen of the year awards. A contour map of Zwick's Island was explained and plans made for the coming seasonal flower display down town.

Combining the educational and the pictorial, the speaker of the evening, Mr. Murray Bundock of Ortho Agricultural Chemicals showed two films: "Living With Roses" and "The World of Insects". The first explained the culture of roses and the varieties available. The enchanting beauty captured so faithfully by the cameras inspired the members to have more and better roses. The use of a dormant spray is one apparent step to success in this regard.

DISCUSSES INSECTS

"The World of Insects" was facts bear repeating namely: of facts bear repeating namely: of the 2½ millions of species of insects known to exist only one million have come under man's control so far; insects are the main competitors of man for the food supply of the world, a fact not to be taken lightly when one considers that many of these eat amounts one hundred times their own weight. The plain every day house-fly has a breeding capacity so prolific that if a single pair were given ideal conditions, they could set up a chain of generations that could cover the earth forty seven feet deep in four months; and in the U.S.A. alone insects damage reaches a total of $4 billion dollars annually.

The speaker therefore called upon his audience for a wise use of available chemicals in the control of insects. He deplored the indiscriminate slaughter of them, which results in an upset in the balance of nature. Insects are vitally useful in the pollination of plants and in the control of lesser types of insects, e.g. bees, praying mantis, etc. Thus while insects could eliminate man from the earth, they do much to support him while he is here.

Two notes of warning therefore: Don't say and kill rashly and do read carefully all instructions on the labels of the chemicals. Chemicals are powerful allies of man; he should use them with respect since devastation is no substitute for infestation.

Following the films drawn were made for Alpine plants donated by Dr. Lewis and for sprays and sprayers donated by Bishop's Seeds and Ortho Agricultural Chemicals.

It's a "Swap Night" for the members — an annual opportunity to exchange plants and to learn about new ones. The extras were sent to Zwick's Island. Much was accomplished at the spring meeting and an invitation is again extended to those citizens whose interests lie even slightly in the direction of gardening.

MAIL CALL

Question: My husband and I have been having a fight about whether to attend parties given by a couple who frequently invite us. I've never accepted because, frankly, I never enjoy their company and they're the type I'd never invite to my home. In short, they're 36-carat bores. Since they're neighbors, my husband thinks we should go to their home once in a while because he feels uncomfortable about seeming so stand-offish every time he meets the other husband on the train. How do you feel about such a situation? — Mrs. E. P., Peekskill, N. Y.

Answer: I don't think anyone should accept hospitality they never intend to repay. If you feel so strongly by all means continue to refuse invitations instead of getting involved in any "friendship" that wears a false face.'

Question: We've received a formal, engraved invitation to a wedding and I'd like to know what form to use in accepting. May I send a note in reply, or is something "more formal required? — Mrs. E. H., Philadelphia, Pa.

Answer: A formal invitation is answered in the third person, following the form of the invitation — Mr. and Mrs. John Jones accept with pleasure, etc. The reply is written in longhand — it's never typed — on plain white stationery of good quality.

Modern Hotel Line Dominates Foreign Scene–Successfully

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

LONDON—Across the street and about two thirds of the way down from the roof of the new London Hilton Hotel stands a penthouse apartment. Once it treated its owner to commanding views of Hyde Park, Buckingham Palace and Piccadilly St. Alas, now the apartment itself has become a view for the guests of the 30 - story Hilton, second tallest building in London and largest hotel built in Europe since the war.

There are those who will grieve the inevitable passing of Park Lane's quaint charms, but most will be rival hoteliers and hardly any will be North American tourists. For, as Conrad Hilton seems to know better than anyone in the world, you just don't build hotels with Edwardian brass fixtures in the bathrooms and chintz settees in the parlor any more — even in England.

Hilton, the remarkable septuagenarian who did not approach the peak of his vision of success until his sixties, may have been born to be a controversial figure. Maligned as a despoiler of landscapes and panderer to lawdry American tastes — again, mostly by jealous rivals — he has nevertheless gone ahead to construct an impressive empire of hotels which has quietly changed the face of travel throughout the world.

Some 50 Hilton hotels with a whopping total of 34,000 rooms now are functioning in the U.S., Canada and 16 foreign lands. Four more open up this month and next. Six more are under construction in three new countries and eight are under contract in seven others.

CLASSIC STATUS

At least one — the Caribe Hilton in San Juan, Puerto Rico — opened up a whole new region for tourism and established a standard of resort style which has been copied almost ad nauseum, though none has achieved the same classic status.

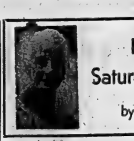
Of the Hiltons in existence, in construction, or under contract, no less than 14 (more by calculations) offer the only really modern luxury accommodations in their cities: Sydney, Guadalajara (Mexico), Tunis, Rabat (Morocco), Rotterdam, Addis Abba Dublin, Nicosia (Cyprus), Istanbul, Panama City, Santiago (Chile), St. Thomas (Virgin Islands), Tehran, and Port-of-Spain (Trinidad). In places such as Amsterdam, Athens, Berlin, Cairo and Manila, the Hilton is, or will be, one of only two or three top choices. Some Hiltons are better than others, but none is really bad. All are, or will be, successful.

There are profound lessons in all this success. One is that Americans are capable not only of giving value for money, but of investing it, or guiding local capital, to create jobs and the prosperity of tourism, where there was little or nothing before.

Of more direct concern to the traveller is the fact that the Hiltons have brought American standards of comfort to travel in these far-flung countries without sacrificing local flavor or standards of service, which are often better than at home. In any Hilton you can have a cup of American coffee and a drink with lots of ice — both welcome miracles of arts. And you need not learn to read a menu in Greek, Turkish, Arabic or Japanese to order local specialties. Our much maligned air conditioning — more desirables for drinkable water and able than a view of the Acropolis or the Nile when you don't have them — are cheerfully catered to.

CALLED "TOO AMERICAN"

The most frequent criticism leveled at "Hilton-type" hotels (there is really no such thing) is that they are pretentious and "too American," whatever that means. For the most part, it simply isn't so.



What they all are, is modern. And that's another story. Most are designed by local architects. All use materials and decor of the land in contemporary motif. Conscientious efforts are made to incorporate an atmosphere of the country in the hotels' styling. The London Hilton, for example, has an honest-to-goodness pub on the premises, and the grill serves the best of characteristic English cuisine, which is not nearly so bad as reputed when you stick to the right dishes.

It is true enough that new Hiltons seem to impose themselves on the landscape. The London building on Park Lane sticks up like the Empire State building, and the magnificent new Athens pavilion looks from the Acropolis bigger than the Acropolis looks from the hotel. But recent experience has shown that the Hiltons ultimately blend with the view, having been soundly and esthetically designed in most instances.

Anyway, they almost ran Christopher Wren out of town for designing St. Paul's, and the gods only know what word the pagans had used to describe the Parthenon. Hilton may or may not rate as well with history, but only time will tell.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

There are seven of us in our family and I was wondering if you could send me some recipes for one dish meals that are satisfying to young boys who always seem hungry. We want to go camping this year — Jean. H. T.

ANSWER:

I'm glad you asked. I hope others who want one dish meals for camping trips will clip this.

CAMPFIRE HASH:

2½ cups diced onions — about 6, 1 cup diced green pepper (optional), 8 slices bacon, chopped, 3 lbs. ground beef, 2-3 cup catsup, 1½ cups water, 3 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 6 cups finely chopped potatoes — about 8.

Saute onions, green pepper if used, and bacon in a large frying pan until transparent. Add meat and continue to cook until lightly brown. Combine catsup, water and seasonings and add to meat mixture. Then add potatoes and cook until liquid is nearly evaporated, about 20 minutes or more, turning occasionally. Makes 8 hearty servings.

RODDY'S SALMON GOULASH (serves 8):

¼ cup butter or margarine, ¾ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup skim milk powder, 2 cups cold water, or less, 2 1-lb. cans pink salmon, 1 20-oz. can peas (or green beans), (drained).

Melt butter or margarine, gently saute onion in it until limp, add flour and salt, stir to blend. Stir the milk powder into the water smoothly. Stir this milk into mixture until thick. Add broken up salmon, including liquid and bones. Add drained peas (or beans). Heat through. Meanwhile toast the buns to toast two slices of bread each over their own small fire. As soon as Salmon Goulash is ready tell them to put their toast on their plates and stand in line and then you cover it with steaming hot Salmon Goulash. Roddy loves this.

The vegetables which will keep well for you without refrigeration are onions, potatoes, carrots and turnips. I am assuming you will be driving through territory that is not any more isolated than the Trans-Canada highway. You will be able to buy stewing beef almost anywhere, so try this.

CAMPERS' BEEF STEW:

2 lbs. ground beef or cubed stewing beef (see below), 4 onions, chopped, 4 tablespoons fat or piece of beef suet, chopped, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2 cups diced carrots, 1 cup chopped turnip, 8 potatoes (see note), 1 can tomatoes, 1 can green beans (optional), ¼ to 1 cup water.

Melt fat or suet in heavy pot. Add cubed or ground beef and brown well. Add onions and cook for 1 minute then add all remaining ingredients except potatoes and simmer covered until meat is tender.

NOTE:

If meat is ground, cooking time may be reduced to ¾ to 1 hour but if it is cubed stewing beef it will require 3 hours and you must be sure your fire is low. More water may be necessary. Add potatoes during last ½ hour of cook time and serve this stew over boiled noodles.

SATURDAY

Your family's silent partner

Lying there on the doorstep, it can't speak. Or Move. Or Hear. But open it in your hands and it becomes a living, powerful partner in daily living. In the decisions you make, the opinions you form.

It takes you to the highest chambers of government. It takes you to the bloodlest streets of warring countries. It takes you to the heart of history in the making. In short, it tells you what in the world is happening and why.

But people depend on it for needs beyond the need to know. It's where families turn when something's to be bought or sold. It's where hints on health, cooking, religion, amusements, dressmaking, etiquette, marriage are found.

It's where charities first turn for help, and a place where a letter to the editor is published. It's where campaigns are fought and lost dogs are found. It's where criminals are exposed and newlyweds applauded. Where birth and death meet on the same page.

It's your newspaper, silent partner of the family, yet one that says so much, does so much for so many people — every day without fail.

A Lift for Living

Courageous Continue Search For Security—for Others

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

While the prime concern of governmental and foreign policies is to find security against war, the burden of their domestic programs is to provide economic security against unemployment, sickness, old age helplessness, and all other ills that man is heir to.

Consider the search for security against illness, especially against the dread diseases of cancer, polio and the heart. Our ancestors a few generations ago were living in a world of plagues and decimating disasters. Physical science has helped to explain and destroy many old fears but it has created so many new ones. Ours is a frightened world.

It is less frightened today because a dedicated young doctor named Jonas E. Salk devoted countless hours to seeking means of attacking a terrifying enemy — polio. His achievement has been acclaimed by parents all over the world. They feel a new sense of security. One might also cite our escape from tuberculosis. And so on.

Security, up to a certain point, is desirable. Watch the little child nestling so safely on its mother's bosom or riding fearlessly atop the shoulders of his father. The infant, deprived of such a sense of security in its early stages is usually stunted in some part of its nature. The tender plant of childhood blossoms only on the trellis of mutual trust.

IN LATER LIFE, TOO

And so it is in later life. A certain feeling of security is necessary to release the creative and cooperative powers of a person. When we live under the shadow of impoverished old age or threatened unemployment or impending war, we cannot give our best to the world.

If you doubt the desirability of some measure of security, read your Bible. The pages of Scripture are dotted with the promises of safe guarding. "God is our refuge and strength a very present help in trouble." The great Hebrew prophets sought to heartten their people with interpretations of God speaking their "Fear thou not, for I am with thee." Recall how frequently Jesus tried to show His frightened countrymen the security they might enjoy with their Heavenly Father, climaxing with those words of His farewell discourse: "My peace I leave with you. . . Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Yet the search for security must be watched lest it become a weakening thing. If we demanded guaranteed safety in all things, where would be the virtues of faith and courage?

Why do we honor astronauts like Glenn and Carpenter and Shirra? Because they were brave enough to risk their own lives to make space travel safe for future generations.

A young fellow was being trained to be an usher in a movie theater. His employer was showing him the fire exits.

"Now," said the young man, "don't worry about me. I'll find my way out all right." The security of spectators in a theater rests on employers who are not thinking of their own safety first.

Passengers feel safe at sea because they know the honor of the service requires seamen to stay at their posts in time of danger and the rule is "officers last."

DIED AT WORK

Recently I attended a memorial service for Dr. Frank L. Meleney, a distinguished surgeon who devoted his career to curing bacteriological infections. He was described as having done more in this field than any other scientist since Lister. He saved uncounted lives. But in his efforts he spared not his own security. His colleague, Dean A. E. Severinghaus, told of Dr. Meleney's unconcern for his own health and quoted a Franciscan monk as saying to a fellow monk who was cautious over his own safety, "You will die in your own bed if you are not careful!" Dr. Meleney did not die in bed. He performed two operations in the morning and died in the afternoon — still going.

Whose security are we seeking? Just our own? Then we are over-cautious and cowardly.

Or do we look beyond ourselves to seek the security of others? Then we belong to the noble company of pioneers and prophets, of good policemen and firemen, of courageous statesmen and adventuring scientists, of trusted fathers and friends.

A Great Physician once hung on a cross. The crowd jeered: "He saved others, himself he cannot save." That is why millions now call Him Savior.

GARDEN NOTES

SOLVING YOUR GARDEN PROBLEMS

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Ant nests in border or lawn or between paving blocks are a nuisance. They can be eliminated with chlordane. While they do not eat plants they can spread disease such as Botrytis in Peonies and Tulips. Dust with 10% chlordane. Repeat in one week.

Where the large carpenter ants have infested trees the wound should be cleaned out thoroughly and the surface sealed with a tree dressing.

Slugs feed on Delphinium leaves, Petunia leaves and flowers, Hosta and the blooms of Dahlias. These gross feeders do most of their foraging at night. Liquid slub poison may be sprayed on plants or metaldehyde bait pellets spread beneath the plants will attract slubs and completely dissolve them. Slugs like acid soil conditions. Lime spread under plants will offer a good control unless the plants are those needing an acid soil.

Blossom end rot in tomatoes is a problem in many gardens. It is likely to appear when dry mid-summer follows rapid growth of early summer. Too little calcium, too much nitrogen and too prolonged humid weather can cause it. The first sign is a sprony brown spot at the blossom end. Control is not easy since many factors contribute to it. Have soil tested. If calcium is deficient apply lime before planting and avoid high nitrogen compounds.

ONLY WHEN NEEDED

Many spray programs suggest the use of sprays or dusts every ten days. It is better to deal with each pest as it appears than to use a general pesticide at frequent intervals. Many pests build up an immunity to chemicals that are applied frequently. Used only as needed you will avoid a build up of mites and many fungi diseases.

Peony buds occasionally turn brown and do not open. This is caused by botrytis. To control begin spraying in the spring when the leaves are 10 inches high. Once a week spray or dust with zineb or ferbam. Remove and burn blasted buds. In fall cut off all foliage and stems and burn. Dust soil around plants with ferbam. The disease lives over on the soil surface.

Take care of your sprayer and it will work well for you. Immediately after use flush out sprayer with soapy water then rinse well. Make sure all parts coming in contact with spray materials are cleaned with clean water. Never store diluted chemicals in a sprayer. If nozzle becomes clogged with silt clean with a piece of fine wire or thin darning needle. Never use weed killers in the sprayer you use for pesticides. A minute quantity left over can kill valuable plants.

For feeding lawns the newer urea-form fertilizers are work savers. Urea is a valuable nitrogen fertilizer. Combined with formaldehyde the urea-form is slowly released to feed lawns over a long period. This prevents burning and reduces the number of feedings each season. It resists leaching by clinging to soil particles. The pellet form is easy to broadcast.

PUZZLE TO SOME

Contact, residual and systemic poisons are a puzzle to some gardeners. A contact insecticide begins to kill as soon as it strikes the insect. This is valuable in controlling aphids and other sucking insects that cannot be controlled by residual insecticides. Residual poisons are especially good where tomato horn worm is troublesome. The systemic insecticides permeate the whole plant cell structure. They kill insects that feed on tissue Good for controlling aphids and mites. Must be used with great caution.

Use 2, 4-D with great caution too It can drift in air currents to damage garden crops, especially tomatoes and beans. Use amino triazole in place of 2,4-D near garden crops.

Captan, zineb and maneb are effective on many fungus diseases that affect garden plants. Maneb is not compatable with all insecticides.

"So this is the outside world!"

With This Kind of Mail No Postman Rings Twice

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Fragments of letters people would like to get but rarely do:

"Those excerpts from your wifely diary about your marital experiences are positively hilarious. We also like your tentative working title — 25 Years With a Male Rat—and are sure we can put the book on the best-seller list. We are enclosing $10,000 in advance royalties, and assure you this is a mere drop in the bucket to what. . . .

"There must be some mistake. In addition to free furniture, we promised you six months free rent as an inducement to sign a two-year lease in our new luxury apartment building, Echoing Heights. As you have been a tenant only five months, we are returning your rent cheque. Your initial payment isn't due for still another month. Meanwhile, if you'd like your television set replaced—at our expense naturally—just let us know anytime."

"It is with deep regret I inform you that our firm will be unable, now or in the immediate future, to ship your small son the 18-foot python he ordered."

IN LIEU OF WIFE

"Dear Norman: I am running off with the butler. I just couldn't stand watching you do any more card tricks at our cocktail soirees in front of my society friends. But recognizing you've been a faithful husband and given me some of the best years of your life, I'm asking my lawyers to settle $500,000 on you from the money father left me. This should pay your bar bills, and leave a little left over for you to buy a new deck of cards."

"Congratulations on your promotion to general sales manager, son. By the way, you won't need to send us any more money from now on.

"Dad has got on steady at the post office at last, and the carnival has promised me my old strip-tease job back if I lose 10 more pounds. Love from your dear old mom."

"As exalted Brother Ben was recently caught with his hand in Lodge till, members of our fraternal lodge have abandoned our intention to name him Man of the Year and would like to pass this honor on to you. All we'll require is a letter of acceptance from you—and a note from the chief of police that you are not wanted at the moment."

Yep, the postman would never have to knock twice—if he brought more letters like these.

Ann Landers

Son of Divorced Parents Resents Home Situation

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a boy 17 who doesn't know who else to turn to with my problem.

My mother and dad are divorced. Two years ago my mother started to go with a man who drank a lot and treated her mean. She stopped going with him a couple of months ago and I was very happy about the break-up because he is just plain no good.

ANN LANDERS

Last weekend I was out of town visiting some relatives and when I came home I found my mother entertaining this man. It was 2:00 a.m. and they were both drunk. I slept in the car because it was obvious that the man had moved in bag and baggage.

My mother says she will gladly sign enlistment papers so I can go right into the army. I'm doing well in school and I know how important a diploma is. I can't stand to live under the same roof with my mother and this man but I have nowhere to go. Please advise me. — HOMELESS.

DEAR HOMELESS — If your high school has no guidance counsellor, speak to the principal or your favorite teacher immediately. Perhaps foster home arrangements can be made for you.

If this is not possible, the army has a special plan which will enable you to get your diploma. Dropouts usually important thing is to get the diploma. Dropouts usually stagnate at a low-paying level and are trapped there forever.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've been reading your column for a long time hoping someone would write in about my problem. But no one has, so I have decided to write myself.

I am a person who is content to listen to others talk. More than once my evening has been ruined by someone who says, "Why don't you ever say anything?" You're so quiet!" Such a remark makes me feel like a fool. The implication is that I am silent because I am stupid.

Some people aren't capable of saying witty or amusing things. I am one of those people and I know it, so instead of chiming in with some inane, senseless comment I just listen. How I wish I could think of a squelcher when rude people make a point of my silence. Can you help? — THE LISTENER.

DEAR LISTENER — Try this when some loquacious, insensitive slob needles you about your silence:

"You'd be surprised how much a person can learn by keeping his mouth shut. You ought to try it sometime."

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was fascinated by the letter signed "Sister" because I had the identical problem. It never occurred to me that even one other person could have been in such a fix. I, too, had a brother who was a problem to the whole family. He wouldn't stay in school and he kept getting into trouble. When I married, my husband and I became his legal guardians and he made his home with us. I got him to see a psychiatrist and he made remarkable progress.

After a year he was vastly improved. My mother then insisted that we let her have him back. He didn't want to go but the family pressure was so heavy we gave in.

It was a horrible mistake for which I will be everlastingly ashamed. My brother is now a total loss to the human race, and I am responsible. How I wish I had stood my ground and not allowed my mother to finish the job of wrecking my brother's life completely. — WEIGHED AND FOUND WANTING.

DEAR FRIEND — Your letter may give someone else the strength to stand firm — so you have performed a valuable service.

• • •

To learn the difference between a marriage that "settles down" and one that "gets dull," send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

UNDESIRABLES

Would you recognize the voice of a cowbird? Unfortunately, it is all too familiar to us. Every May we hear their wiry squeaks and look out to see several cowbirds around; and every summer we discover that at least one of our favorite songbirds has been imposed upon. Veery, yellowthroat, chestnut-sided warbler—all are vulnerable, and the sad part is that rarely do any of their own children survive because the big foreign egg nearly always hatches first and the big foster baby demands all the food and attention. The poor little parents are worn out.

REACHED PEAK

Last season the cowbird peak seemed to be reached. In May the wiry squeaks sounded on all sides of the house.

The first evidence came on June 24, when the chipping sparrows appeared on our lawn with two babies: one was their own, the other a cowbird. And that was the last time, too, that we saw the four together. Hereafter, Mother Chippy foraged somewhat farther afield with her own baby, leaving Father Chippy to bring up the young cowbird as best he could.

By July 8 a distracted female white-throat had found our feeding tray and persuaded her cowbird charge to get on it. However, her troubles were not entirely over, because a whole white-throat family considered the tray their private property. She never again encouraged her foster child to mount the tray, but would snatch bites and carry them to it.

BIG BABIES

A grown chestnut-sided warbler is but five inches long, a grown cowbird sometimes eight inches, but on July 13 we saw this tiny adult female stuffing little green worms into the big, open mouth of an almost full-sized cowbird. Tray food was useless for her. Then attracted by the noisy yelling of another of the summer, now full grown, cowbird on July 21 we found another warbler, even smaller, a magnolia.

A redstart, attending to a big cowbird baby in the grass close to our path. The very next day, we discovered the last cowbird being fed by a 4¼-inch warbler, a nashville.

This brought to five the number of songbird families which to our certain knowledge had suffered, all within a few yards of our house. No wonder we class cowbirds as "undesirables."

Facts About Foster Parenting

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—You are always saying that foster parents are in demand to take care of children whose own homes have broken up.

So I put my name in at our child care agency six months ago. I haven't heard a word after the first visit from the worker. What's wrong? Me? — STILL HOPING.

DEAR STILL HOPING — Perish the thought. But placing a child in a substitute for his own home is one job that can't possibly be done on a first-come, first-serve basis.

On the one hand, the youngster away from his parents may react with hostile, anti-social behavior; or with a back-to-his-shell attitude. Or he may seem meek as a lamb, while seething way down deep.

On the other side, foster parents have usually specified age, sex, disposition to fit in with their own. Some can cope with any type of behavior in children; others work better with more passive types. And so on.

The professional agency wants at all costs to prevent moving a child about from home to home. He is already too unsettled for his own good.

So the placement takes time and careful thought. Would you like to change what you've asked for? At least you could have a further talk about it by calling the worker.

DEAR DORIS — I hope you can settle our argument. I am being married. As my father is dead, it has been suggested that one of my older brothers give me away.

The problem is that they are twins and both very close to me. I know they both want to do it, but how do I choose? I don't want any feelings hurt. — JUNE BRIDE.

DEAR JUNE — Let them both have the honor. It's been done before. You'll walk between them down the aisle.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO SEVENTY-FIVE — Congratulations! Let the sons and daughters and grandchildren give you a bang-up Golden Wedding. Don't insist on paying for a thing. Help with the guest list and invite any of the original attendants you can. Then your main role is to act sociable, and see that Granny doesn't get too tired.

DEAR DORIS — I found the letter from "Undecided" most interesting and would tell her without any hesitation whatever, to forget him and start a new life for herself. During more than twenty years of marriage, I left no stone unturned in my efforts to help my husband, who was weak and irresponsible, drinking, gambling, lying and abusive.

Finally I came to my senses, got a job and threw him out for good. I have been without him for some time now and have no regrets. I feel I'm in a position to offer a little advice to "Undecided" and would say — "Get rid of him now, while you are still young. The longer you wait the harder it becomes. It will be better for your baby, too."

Yes, I have a child in school, too, whom I never wanted to deny a father, but to have no father is better than to have such a poor one. He will bring you nothing but heartache, so make the break and have faith in God. — LIVING AGAIN.

* * *

DEAR LIVING AGAIN — Thanks for writing. But people differ, and "Undecided" has her own set of circumstances to reckon with. Can she manage on her own? Is her personality being undermined? Can her absolute needs be jarred into changing? Could a counsellor help? There is no machine-like certainty when it comes to predicting reactions of living, breathing humans.

* * *

TO NEED YOUR HELP — Double dating is O.K. if you can persuade your mother-to agree to it. Otherwise, you are still pretty young, and doing something on the sly is not going to keep you out of trouble.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — It's about those advertised creams to develop the bust. Do you think they are good or would I just be throwing away my money? Do you know of any other method that I could use? I am in my 40's and quite thin. Live on the farm — I'D BE MUCH OBLIGED.

* * *

DEAR MUCH OBLIGED — No cream can do it. No breast should be massaged — which might do more harm than good. But you can give the bust proper support, can exercise chest muscles, build up your health — and use falsies. Exercises for "Improving Up Front" can be yours for a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My mother lived with us for a year before she died. We cared for her because she was very sick. My brothers and sisters refused to take her into their home, saying they had no time to look after her.

My mother left a will, the same to each of us, which was not very much, but my sisters and brothers don't believe this. They think I must have got more than they did, and now won't speak to me. Doris, in fact, I got less than they did, because I kept her for one year without any pay whatsoever.

It hurts me so very much. I did all I could to help my sick mother, but all I got in return was grief, from my family, I mean. Is there a way that I can prove to them that I did not get more than they did? — HOPEFUL.

* * *

DEAR HOPEFUL — Have your lawyer draw up a letter stating the provisions of the will in dollars and cents; have it sworn to before a notary. Send each a copy by registered mail, attaching your own friendly note to say you just wanted them to have the facts. Then could you summon the charity to say you miss them and would love to get together?

Family feuds over wills are horrible — but not rare, I'm sorry to say.

* * *

TO DESPERATE LOVE AFFAIR AND DISAPPOINTED — If you will send me stamped, self-addressed envelopes and identity yourselves, I will be glad to answer your questions. Be sure to repeat them.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.E. — Offhand I'd say sell the cottage. But with your husband keeping everything a secret from you, including the amount you owe and the amount he is paying, how can you decide anything?

* * *

(Do you wonder why people act as they do? There's no query too queer for Doris, a social worker who has been trouble-shooting for Canadians for many years.)

His Business Lures Fish Right Across the Country

By JIM ENGLISH
Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) Ten tons of brass are gulped up every year by Eddie Edgar's small plant, and the products turn up in the strangest places.

If you looked on the right rock in Lake Laviolette in Algonquin Park you could find one of them linked to a hundred feet or more of fine steel wire.

It wouldn't be too hard to find a Pacific salmon trying to eat one in the Campbell River on Vancouver Island.

And a speckled trout stream on Prince Edward Island might yield a few.

The products are, of course, fishing lures—lures of brass plated with nickel, with gold and silver, polished and lacquered brass, or wood or plastic plugs.

Thirty-four years ago a garage provided the site for Frank Edgar's hobby. He was an ardent fisherman, and he liked to make his own.

He is still an ardent fisherman, but now may turn out only a few lures each year with his own hands.

Employees do the work today while Mr. Edgar and his son Bill design the baits and supervise their operation on a farm that markets its products across Canada.

FEATHERS FROM INDIA

A few exotic products creep into the business. For example 14-carat gold, $1,000 worth annually, is used to give a special glitter to some of the spoons, spinners and wobblers. Dyed peacock feathers from India decorate an old favorite, the muskie spoon, and ordinary steel hooks from Norway add that essential holding power.

Bill Edgar, who supervises operations in the Lucky Strike bait plant, doesn't get quite as much chance as he would like to use his firm's products.

"Dad gets out quite a bit more than I do, and he does a lot of testing of the new baits," Bill says.

Bill's problems are more with how much nickel to buy for plating (about a ton), how much brass must be available, and how many hooks are going to be needed. Red glass beads are needed, too, and steel wire for leaders, scarlet vinyl for tails on spoons, split rings, swivels, enamel and one-inch cedar for wooden-bodied plugs.

The brass plate is stamped on multiple-stage dies into the form of the body of the bait. Several operations on the same punch-press cut the shape, punch holes for connecting rings and pierce the metal to receive split rings, beads and swivels.

Once this step is taken the body of the bait is ready for polishing, then plating—if desired—and then buffing and lacquering. Finished baits are stapled to display cards and shipped to jobbers and retailers.

Plugs are turned from cedar or moulded from clear plastic. Wood - turned plugs are produced in the shop but those of plastic are turned out by out-of-city firms that do custom moulding from dies supplied by Lucky Strike.

Enamelled wooden plugs are baked at 300 degrees to give them a hard finish. Plastic plugs, which are hollow and would balloon under heat, are finished with a special, fast-drying coating. Colors applied may be red, yellow, green or any of a variety of fluorescent paints, all on top of a basic white enamel.

Once confined to Peterborough and district, the plant now caters to fishermen across Canada. Four salesmen—the company's first—have joined the staff.

"Sales are up 800 per cent in the west now that we have a salesman there," said Bill Edgar. "They buy a lot of gold-plated lures out there because gold isn't affected by the corrosive action of salt water."

He adds that sales are also booming in Quebec and the Maritimes as well as Ontario.

Anglers look for variety in their baits, so much so that from 600 basic bait patterns Bill Edgar estimates he could turn out 4,000 different lures.

Competition from abroad must be met but the Edgars feel quality is the best response to it. "We use the best material we can and we test our baits before they go into production."

DEPENDABILITY

JUVENILE

We read so much about juvenile "delinquency" that we sometimes fail to observe an outstanding example of juvenile "dependability" that passes our door every day—the Little Merchant Newspaperboy.

He starts out as an average American youngster. But within a short time most Newspaperboys develop a sense of dependability much beyond average.

Under the skilled guidance of men interested in and trained to work—with boys, the Newspaperboy actually goes into business for himself.

These experiences—offered only through Newspaper Route Management—help produce the kind of juvenile dependability that makes thousands of parents say with pride: "My son is a Newspaperboy."

To him service becomes something to give, rather than receive. Money becomes much more than a weekly allowance. Courtesy becomes an essential. And salesmanship becomes both challenging and rewarding.

Pauline Jewett Suggests Canada Extend Diplomatic Recognition to Red China

OTTAWA (CP)—Pauline Jewett, one of the few political scientists to make the jump into party politics, suggested Friday that Canada extend diplomatic recognition to Communist China.

The freshman Liberal MP for Northumberland, delivering the first Commons speech of the new session, expressed some personal views on lessening cold war tensions and restoring Parliament to a more influential role.

Her brief off-the-cuff address departed somewhat from tradition. Usually the mover of the address in reply to the speech from the throne spends 40 minutes praising the wisdom of his leader, the beauty of his constituency and the intelligence of his supporters.

Miss Jewett, 40-year-old former political science professor at Carleton University, covered all three points but went on to discuss several controversial subjects. This she accomplished in 15 minutes.

She said Canada should take advantage of the current ideological quarrels between Moscow and Peking to advance the cause of peace. The best way to do this would be to expand trade and cultural relations with Communist countries which now are isolated.

"This may also lead—and I believe it should lead—to diplomatic recognition being given where it is not now extended."

Miss Jewett said not mention Red China specifically but the implication was clear.

NEEDS TO INTERVENE

She added that government intervention in the economy and other spheres will become more and more necessary. The age of rugged individualism was dead and collective action by governments and large organizations was the only weapon to attack unemployment and other social ills.

A powerful Parliament was needed more than ever to check and temper government intervention. She suggested that parliament's committee system be revamped and that civil service procedures be reformed to ensure justice for individual taxpayers.

Speaking with only a few sketchy notes, Miss Jewett said the emphasis of the government's program was on measures "to bring Canada out of the economic doldrums" and to provide more jobs.

"We have taken off a big bite in attempting to restore economic well-being to Canada," she added. "Inevitably it will cause a greater degree of government regulation and intervention in people's affairs."

The government's decision to have a committee review of Commons procedure was wise because "as the problems state becomes more positive, in a collectivist society is...becomes essential that we devise measures to check government."

CHANGES NEEDED

The whole committee structure of the Commons needs overhauling and the need for an ombudsman or parliamentary adviser should be studied, Miss Jewett said.

Miss Jewett wore a plain two-piece beige dress and blue necklace for her first speech, and when she took her seat members swarmed about her offering congratulations.

The address in reply was seconded by Augusta Choquette, Quebec nurse and the only seated former defence production Minister Raymond O'Hurley in Lesbianism in the April election.

Speaking briefly in French, she praised the government for its bill to establish a new portfolio for eastern agriculture and for its measures aimed at economic recovery.

The speeches paved the way for the actual start of the throne speech debate, which can last eight days and affords the opposition parties opportunity to move non-confidence in the government.

Canada's Status At Trade Talks in Geneva Said That of Middle Country

GENEVA (CP)—There is no scramble to be high man on the totem pole at the big conference of trade ministers here.

Some countries want to qualify as underdeveloped areas in order that they might reap benefits from any subsequent tariff adjustments helping the poorer nations.

Perhaps no country is striving to crowd its way into the upper bracket where it would come into the category of giver rather than receiver.

Canada's status in the spectrum of nations came up Friday when a briefing officer at the meeting of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade classed it with the industrially "developed" nations, also including such countries as Sweden and The Netherlands as well as the United States, Britain and France.

TAKES FROM LIST

The officer was merely listing countries that had taken part in Friday's debate. But Canadian Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp told reporters later it was no accident that he specifically removed Canada from the "highly - industrialized" category. He said in his speech:

"The co - operation of all highly industrialized countries is essential. While we cannot claim to be in this category . . ."

Sharp said it is obvious Canada is not an underdeveloped country but neither is it in the category of the United States and industrial Europe. It was in the "middle group."

Canadian spokesman at the United Nations headquarters in New York usually refer to their country as a middle power—and that term, as well as middle-developed, seems to sit quietly with Canadians.

But ginger-haired Sharp stirred uneasily the other day when a delegate said Canada was a "middle-class" country.

"Canada is high class," said Sharp, with a touch of asperity.

Canadian Engineers Contribute To U.S. Space Success Story

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Gordon Cooper's 22-orbit ride through space in a Mercury capsule is in every sense an American success story.

Thousands of Americans participated in the effort, costing hundreds of millions of dollars.

In a small yet important way Canadians participated.

In 1959, when the manned space program was still in its infancy and the U.S. government had just approved the contract for construction of the first capsule, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was desperate for engineering skill. It found a jackpot in Canada.

When the Canadian government cancelled the Avro Arrow jet interceptor program, large numbers of talented Canadians suddenly found themselves without work. NASA grabbed some 28 of the best scientists and engineers.

ENGINEER FROM B.C.

One of the men who played a leading part in engineering the Mercury capsule is James A. Chamberlin, a lanky, shy aeronautical specialist from Kamloops, B. C. Chamberlin talks modestly of his job but he has become one of the most respected engineers on the NASA manned space staff.

When Mercury development came to an end, Chamberlin was for a time placed in charge of NASA's $500,000,000 project Gemini—to prepare a capsule to place two men in orbit by 1964.

Chamberlin still is with NASA at Houston, Tex., operating now as an executive assistant to the space centre director, Dr. Robert Gilruth.

Another Canadian involved is Owen Maynard of Sarnia, Ont. His specialty is spaceship design. From the Mercury project he has moved to bigger things.

The 38-year-old Maynard, a wartime RCAF bomber pilot, is in charge of designing and engineering the first moon landing vehicle.

This is Project Apollo, by which the U.S. hopes to put a man on the moon by 1970. Maynard's job is to produce a lunar excursion vehicle that can leave the mother ship, explore the moon's surface, make a landing and later return to the mother ship.

"So important is Maynard's phase of the operation that six separate technical bureaus have been placed at his disposal. A huge staff of engineers and technicians, therefore, is concentrating on developing the various elements of the excursion ship.

SEES GREAT FUTURE

Maynard not only believes trips to the moon will one day be possible but that some day man may soar off to Mercury, Venus and Mars.

"Those would be trips of two or three years," he has stated. "But look at the years spent in travel by the early pioneers such as Christopher Columbus."

In the celestial race between the U.S. and Russia, it may be a long time before any Canadian ever gets a chance to ride to the moon. But when the first American gets there, he'll owe at least a little of his achievement to Canadian brain power.

Treasury Bills Down in Yield During Week

Treasury bills moved down slightly in yield this week with the 91-day bills averaging 3.28 per cent compared with 3.33 per cent last week and the 182-day bills at 3.36 per cent compared with 3.40 per cent.

Dealers' inventory in the short term area continued to grow, standing at $175,000,000 in treasury bills at 3.36 per cent compared varying terms.

The short-term Canada market moved ahead sharply with the success of the short Canada issue of $175,000,000 3¼-per-cent July 1, 1964 initially offered at 99.30. The securities have since traded as high as 99.70.

On the long-term market a new four-year-4¼-per-cent issue to yield 4.33 per cent and a 25-year five-per cent issue to yield 5.07 per cent were brought to market this week. Both issues were well received with the four-year issue gaining ¾ and the 25-year issue ¾.

The provincial market was quiet. The Province of Ontario is expected to come to the market shortly with a new $60,000,000 to $75,000,000 issue.

The corporate market was quiet once again with gains ranging up to ½ point. Most active issues were the T. Eaton, Alberta Gas Mines and Traders Finance issues, all 5¾-per-cent issues due 1983.

U. S. Officials Expect Smooth Sailing At NATO Meet Next Week in Ottawa

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials expect smooth sailing without surprises when the ministerial council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization convenes in Ottawa May 22-24.

This expectation, qualified sources said today, is the consequence of diplomatic spadework which resulted in a preconference agreement among NATO members on a formula to establish the U.S.-proposed inter - allied nuclear striking force under the command of a new deputy to U.S. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, NATO's supreme commander.

High U.S. officials deny that French opposition was the only reason for Washington's decision to drop its original idea to give a name to this nuclear force.

U.S. authorities made it clear that they are not worried about the nomenclature.

The concept of a multi-national striking force was first advanced at the Bahama summit meeting of President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan last December.

UNDER NATO COMMAND

It contemplates a nuclear force of national units tied to the NATO command, distinct from a more distant project for an international-manned force borne nuclear strike force.

The new NATO deputy commander—likely an officer from one of the smaller European NATO countries such as Holland, Belgium or Italy — will have under his command British's V-bombers, the three French air squadron U.S. submarines stationed in the Mediterranean, and aircraft of six or more other NATO members which would carry nuclear bombs, including two squadrons of French planes already stationed in Germany.

The Ottawa's meeting expected final blessing on this force represents only a beginning of a process, U.S. specialists stressed.

The United States, they say, did not give up its more ambitious plan to set up a multi-latest force, a fleet of missile-bearing surface vessels, manned by mixed crews.

This theory, however, is not expected to come up at Ottawa and there is no indication that the French will accept or would propose action on the multi-lateral concept, specialists said. Insofar action would be premature, they added.

State Secretary Dean Rusk will head the U.S. delegation of 31 members to the Ottawa meeting.

NATO Secretary-General Dirk Stikker arrived at Ottawa late Friday by air for the meeting. He was met at Uplans Airport by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin.

Govt. Weathered First Big Test in Question Period

OTTAWA (CP)—Some of the new ministers were confident. Otherwise the Liberal government weathered its first big test in the Commons with a willing exchange of political barbs.

Stretching to a lengthy hour and 15 minutes, the initial question period was heavily laden with queries — and answers—framed as much for statistical scores as information. Speaker Alan Macnaughton's calls to order were infrequent but firm.

At one point, the gleeful Conservative opposition benches burst into a chorus of jeers and laughter when, having challenged Finance Minister Walter Gordon to "unpeg" the dollar, they got this reply:

"In my view it is the responsibility of the government, members of this House . . . not to cast any doubts upon the strength or permanence of the dollar."

When in opposition, the Liberals were severely critical of the former Conservative government's decision in May, 1962, to peg the dollar to 92½ cents in exchange for the American dollar.

Mr. Gordon said Friday the government has done everything possible to hold the dollar to its present exchange rate.

SCORES A POINT

In his dignified manner, Justice Minister Lionel Chevrier scored one for the Liberals when Stanley Knowles (New Winnipeg North Centre) — parliamentarian first reveal — of any legislation the former government im- ed import surcharges by order-in-council last June.

This was as the Liberals, when in opposition, "suspected at the time," Mr. Chevrier said. The Conservatives were silent.

It recalled the bitter scrap of last session when the opposition tried unsuccessfully to get Finance Minister Donald Fleming to table the legal opinion. Several suits now have been filed in the Exchequer Court of Canada to recover the surcharges, since dismantled.

U.S. May Have Stubbed Its Toe Again in Haiti

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—The United States may have stubbed its toe again in the Caribbean, this time in Haiti.

Some educated Haitians with no love for President Francois Duvalier's repressive regime refer to the latest crisis as a farce that made the U.S. look silly in the western hemisphere. Certain Latin American diplomats share this view.

Some say the U.S. in its eagerness to see Duvalier ousted as an unacceptable dictator and nuisance in the hemisphere, tended to help him keep his shaky hold on the government.

The U.S. appeared to get itself in a corner in the Haitian situation, which was complicated by Haiti's strained relations with the neighboring Dominican Republic.

MOVEMENT A GESTURE

U.S. spokesmen seemed to feel Duvalier's ouster of 15 was crumbling and ready for collapse. Dominican troops — reliable sources said — moved to the frontier as a gesture to back up Santo Domingo's protests against an invasion by Haitian militia of the Dominican Embassy in Port au Prince.

The U.S. made it clear it supported the Dominican protests, although not the threat of force. President Juan Bosch of the Dominican Republic indicated later there never had been an intention to invade.

The Dominican saber - rattling probably helped Duvalier. Duvalier's army is small and poorly armed. Its officers are reported to be unhappy with the regime.

Duvalier, a former country doctor, was elected president in 1957 in a rigged election. He has ruled with an iron hand, jailing and executing opponents.

EXPERT QUITTING

WASHINGTON (AP)—George F. Kennan, a recognized expert on Communism and a top figure in U.S. diplomacy, will resign this fall as American ambassador to Yugoslavia. In making this announcement Friday the White House said the 59-year - old diplomat is returning to academic life and that no decisions has been reached on a successor.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVEN, Sports Editor

"The Twenty-Fourth of May is the Queen's Birthday, and all us kids got a holiday."

That should bring a touch of nostalgia to the sparsely-thatched greybeards who note with the passing of time the change to "No school Monday, Pop, how about getting the car."

There was nothing wrong with the old "barefoot" days when you "ouched" as you pushed a juicy fish-worm on a hook, went down to the "crick" and came home later with a dozen fat panfish on a willow twig.

Or down to the swimming hole where you peeled off down to the birthday suit, shouted "Last one in's a sissy," pinched your nostrils and jumped.

Or in the little red schoolhouse where you dumped live frogs in the girls' coat drawers, or parked a wiggly fishworm in their hair. Later as you held out your hand you heard teacher say "This hurts me as much as it does you" before that rubber strap descended with a loud smack on the palm.

And after you'd gobbled that jam-sandwich, hard-boiled egg lunch you sneaked into the woods behind the school and smoked elm root, or tea rolled cigarette-wise in a piece of newspaper.

Saturdays for diversion you coaxed the hired man to let you ride "Old Maud" as she lugged that one-horse cultivator between rows of corn or tomatoes. And you slept on your side and twitched uncomfortably in the school seat for the next week.

And at night you sat in the parlor under the coal-oil lamp(s) and listened as Amos 'n Andy played on the big-horn phonograph "Over the Waves," "Down by the Old Cherry Orchard," "When the Whipperwill Sings, Marguerite" and other top-ten hits of the day.

And the strawberry socials when that stiff collar-lold collar kept your head erect; short pants and long socks made you itch and the girls giggled, and smiled at you or tried to hold your hand—and you wondered "what for?" You found out later.

Then the wonder of that day when you put a set of earphones on your head and heard a faraway voice say: "This is KDKA, Pittsburg, broadcasting the world series. Babe Ruth is coming to bat . . . Then you had to turn over the phones to the boy in the next seat.

"Them were the days."

Today the "barefoot boy with cheeks of tan" is a collector's item. The little red schoolhouses are seen only in the family photo scrapbook. Horses now make urbanites take a second look. Buggies are beatniks and beards grow on faces not barley stems.

Surveys and syrups have given way to convertibles and cocktails. The "ole swimmin' hole" is a front lawn pool. There are more pizzas than "punkin" pies. Apple cider is a delicacy from the past, modernized with a splash of vodka. The old square dance hangs on tenaciously but who wants to "square" those jerking combos snarl jytst and bossanova cacophonies.

You get your "hide tanned" with real and make-believe sunshine; not an old fashioned hickory switch, a flat stick or the old man's belt.

Sportswise the modern baseball stadium and hockey arena, have replaced the old pasture lot rink where stood knee-deep in cow-pies along the boards and froze to death, and the old cow pasture where you'd often slid into what you thought was first base.

After which Mom washed your pants with lye soap and a washboard instead of tossing them into a push-button machine and let "Sock", "Wallop" "Smash" and other four-letter detergents private-eye the dirt while she watched baseball players shaving, the battles of the suds and "mild tobaccos" salesmen, and wailing teen-agers beseeching you to drink the pop "for those who think young" on the family TV.

It shapes up like a fine holiday week end with belated spring weather coaxing all to the outdoors. There's fishing and golf, the highways and cabin and cottage. There's baseball and softball at the CNRA and Fair Grounds on Monday. And for family diversion there's the Shannonville Speedway Parkland where you can putter with golf clubs and the kiddies can cavort on go-carts.

Wonder wottinell things will be like fifty years from now?

Argos Sign Two Players From Queen's

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference have signed guard Peter T'h o m p s o n of Queen's University and are bringing back his college teammate, guard John Erickson, for a second tryout, coach Nobby Wirkowski said Friday.

The 23-year-old Erickson returned to school after working out with the Argos' rookie camp last year.

Error Robs Don Nottebart Of Shutout ★★★★★

Colts' Unknown Tosses 4-1 No-Hitter

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Houston's Don Nottebart, a hand-me-down pitcher with an undistinguished label, stitched together the second no-hitter of the baseball season Friday night despite a couple of loose threads.

A 27 - year - old right - hander with only 12 previous major league victories in four seasons, Nottebart blanked Philadelphia with a masterful effort smudged only by an error that enabled the Phillies to score a run in the 4-1 Colts' triumph.

Nottebart allowed four base runners in posting the National League's second no-hitter of nights after Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers did the same to San Francisco.

Meanwhile, the Giants kept their league lead at three games by downing New York Mets 4-3 on Joey Amalfitano's 11th-inning homer. Second-place Los Angeles clubbed Pittsburgh 9-3 and St. Louis trounced Cincinnati 11-2. The Milwaukee-Chicago game was rained out.

SHORTSTOP BOOTS

Nottebart, purchased from Milwaukee last November, after compiling a 9-9 record in three seasons with the Braves, struck out eight and allowed three walks. A fourth base runner reached base on an error by shortstop J. C. Hartman.

Hartman let Don Demeter's grounder go through his legs and Demeter wound up on second base, moved to third on a sacrifice fly by Clay Dalrymple and scored on Don Hoak's sacrifice fly.

It was the first run scored against a no-hit pitcher since Bob Feller of Cleveland gave up a run to Detroit en route to a no-hit, 2-1 victory in 1951. It also tied the score.

Howie Koss provided the runs Nottebart needed for his fifth victory in six decisions with a three-run homer in the sixth inning.

TWO WILLIES HOMER

The Giants pulled out to an early lead when Willie Mays and Willie McCovey connected for their seventh homers, but the Mets finally tied it in the eighth on Ron Hunt's homer. Amalfitano's first homer of the season, off reliever Roger Craig, gave San Francisco its fourth straight victory. Gaylord Perry was the winner.

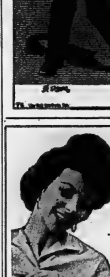
Frank Howard drove in three runs with a double and a two-run homer and Nate Oliver knocked in a pair with a triple to power the Dodgers to their eighth victory in 10 games.

Bob Miller handed the Phillies their fourth straight loss and ninth in 11 games with Dick Scott's ninth inning relief help. Joe Gibbon took the loss.

Home runs by Stan Musial, George Altman, Dick Groat and Julian Javier got the job done for the Cardinals, along with the four-hit pitching of Ernie Broglio. Reds' starter Joey Jay, now 1-7, was the loser.

Leafs Scalp Tribe 17-0, Wings Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS



Toronto Maple Leafs, raised by many as the team to beat in the International Hockey League this season, got off to a bad start this chilly spring, but they appear to be snapping out of their lethargy.

Leafs came up with the unbeatable combination of fine pitching and solid hitting Friday night to whitewash Indianapolis Indians 17-0.

It was a hitter's night throughout the league. Rochester Red Wings clubbed Buffalo Bisons 10-3, Atlanta Crackers outhit Jacksonville Suns for a 15-10 win in 11 innings and Syracuse Chiefs ran roughshod over Columbus Jets for an 18-7 win. The Arkansas-Richmond game was rained out.

Leafs banged out 16 hits against two Indianapolis pitchers to back the eight-hit hurling of Ron Taylor, eight-hander Steve Ridzik, who now is 5-1. Ted Kazanski, Steve Demeter and Frank Lelja belted home runs for Leafs, while Ty Cline had four hits.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Class ckles were predicted for the 87th running of the Preakness at Pimlico today, but track conditions remained in doubt because of steady rain Friday night and a forecast of more showers during the morning.

Four of the starters, hoping to pick up a blanket of black-eyed susans as one prize, have won the big races on both coasts, the midwest and the bluegrass land of Kentucky.

John W. Galbreath's Chateaugay boasts the most cherished win, the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago. T. D. Bahl's Lemon Twist took the most recent, the Illinois last Saturday.

Michael and Jack Stein's On My Honor was the California Derby winner April 20. Rex Ellsworth's Candy Spots won the Florida version March 30. FOUR ALSO BID

The other four Preakness entries—Harry F. Guggenhalm's Never Bend, Jacnot Stable's Country Squire, Mrs. Charles D. Morgan's Sky Wonder and William B. Robinson's Rural Roster—also will bid for today's blanket of daisies with centres of black shoe polish.

The winner's prize of $127,500 can't be topped in any race for three-year-olds.

No Robbery had won five straight races going into the Kentucky Derby and finished behind Chateaugay, Never Bend, Candy Spots and On My Honor. He was unable to try again in the Preakness due to inflamed shins.

Pilous Reported "Fired' In Two Days

Billy Reay New Coach

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — The Standard says Chicago Black Hawk coach Rudy Pilous will be fired within the next two days. Source of the information was not revealed.

The newspaper says the decision was made last weekend at a meeting of Hawks' general manager Tommy Ivan and co-owners Jim Norris and Arthur Wirtz.

Johnny Gottselig, veteran Chicago publicity agent and former Black Hawk player was fired a week ago after 36 years with the club.

Pilous, manager-coach of St. Catharines Teepees in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A loop from 1950 until 1957, took over as coach of the Hawks Jan. 1, 1958, when they were in last place in the National Hockey League.

He helped them into fifth place in the last half of the season and they made the playoffs for the next five years, winning the Stanley Cup in 1961. They finished second to Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1962-63 season.

The Standard says the reason for the dismissal is probably the Hawks' slump late in the 1962-63 season and their elimination by Detroit Red Wings in the semi-final.

Pilous refused to confirm the dismissal.

He said: "If it is true, then all I can say is that coaches have been hired to be fired and the first time a dollar bill got stuck to a puck. . . . It I'm on my way out then all I can do is wish the Black Hawks every success in the future."

The Standard says Billy Reay, former Montreal Canadian star and one-time coach of the Leafs, may become the Hawks' 22nd coach in 37 years.

"Under New Management"

The Kenmors, 63 Edition

Belleville Kenmors, this city's entry in the six-team Lakeshore Baseball League, will see its first action in back-to-back games against the Oshawa Merchants this holiday weekend.

The locals travel to Oshawa for a 2 o'clock game there and then back home for a Monday afternoon affair at the Fairgrounds, at the same time.

The Kenmors, without a sponsor this year, at least to date, have hard-working Sid Forster back at the helm, as coach and he has a group that will split up the duties of making travel arrangements and such business. The players are Duffy Fellowes, Larry Mavety, Bill Latchford, Pat Asselstine, Gordie Vaughn, Former manager- and sponsor Ken Soden will act in an advisory capacity.

Getting down to the ball club itself, Forster feels that he has a well-balanced club that should take a back seat to none in the Lakeshore League. Other league entries by the way are Peterborough, Kingston, Oshawa, Port Hope and Ajax.

Forster has a four-man pitching staff at the present time, with at least one other player who can do some mean knuckling if necessary. Heading the list is Duffy Fellowes, with Billy Latchford, backed up by Stan "Lefty" Reid and Gordie Vaughn.

Pat Asselstine, who will do most of his playing at shortstop can also pitch if the need arises. Pat's bat is also a major asset to the club.

The strapping young redhead, Pete Weston is tagged for first base and with regular play should prove a great asset there. Forster himself can do a job top in case of emergency.

Jackie Elliott moves from the keystone sack to second base and his infield play near the end of last season was any indication, he will make himself right at home there. Glen Clarke, who played with the Kenmors back in junior years, returns from the South Hastings League to handle the third base job.

Larry Mavety, the hustling catcher, will be back on the receiving line while newcomer Court Brayley, who will prove some outfield, has shown fine promise as a catcher. Other infielders available are Ron Hull, who has been smashing the cover off the ball in training and Wayne Gilroy, another new face.

Ricky Locke, 'the speed demon and another fast man with a bat, Duffy Follwell, will start in the outfield, along with either Brayley, Barry Dugold or Larry Soule.

The team will miss the big bats of Gary Goyer and Moe Hunter but with hard work and desire, the team should be right in the midst of the pennant race from start to finish.

Efforts are being made at the present time to line up a short opening ceremonies prior to Monday's opener here.

See you at the ball park at two o'clock Monday.

High Jump Mark Set By Student

ANCASTER, Ont. (CP) — Paul Beatt of Ancaster High School set a Canadian juvenile record Saturday at the track at the southern Ontario Secondary School Association track and field championships here.

Beatt, 16, cleared six feet, one inch, through nine consecutive successful jumps on his way to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada record. He missed all three tries with the bar an inch higher.

Beatt's intermediate mark tied a barrage of 27 SOSSA records set Friday through day, 17 of them in boys' competition.

Among other record setters was Eileen Bennett of Port Erie, who established marks in the senior girl's shot put and discus. She put the shot 35 feet one inch to set the record in the new event, and heaved the discus 96 feet two inches to cut the old mark of 92 feet 1½ inches.

Alex Wasylenko of Eastdale High School, Welland, and Pete Bridges of Burlington Central ran the intermediate 100-yard dash in a record 10.1 seconds. Wasylenko won by splitting the tape first.

Nelson High School of Burlington won the over-all championship, first two finishers in each boy's event become eligible to enter here next Saturday for the all-Ontario high school meet.

Mr. Nicholson Doing Well Thank You

BALTIMORE (AP) — Strong-boy Dave Nicholson, once a confused youngster with Baltimore Orioles, has found peace of mind with Chicago White Sox.

The 23-year-old free-swinging batter in the American League batted a $115,000 bonus when he was signed out of a St. Louis high school.

In his last season with Baltimore, big Nick had a .173 average, 16 home runs at bat, with nine homers and 15 runs batted in. He struck out 76 times, or more than once every 2¼ times at bat.

The strikeouts are continuing at about the same pace this season—but there's a big difference. Playing regularly for the White Sox, Nicholson has raised his average to .283, leads the American League with 28 RBI and is tied for the home-run leadership with eight.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP) — So Long's Prince, a nine-year-old gelding driven by 18-year-old Rheo Filion, came from off the pace to take the featured eighth race Friday night at Mohawk Raceway.

Rallying from the top of the stretch, So Long's Prince roared past Mighty Dudley to win by two lengths. So Long's Prince returned $4.70, timed in 2:06.4.

Brick, owned by Max Webster of Brantford, outlasted his comeback by easily winning the first race, as the favorite, and combined with David Hal B., in the second, for a $12.40 daily double.

British Change Ring Rules

LONDON (AP)—British boxing rules have changed their rules Friday and made it impossible for a fighter to be saved from a knockout by the bell—except in the final round.

The British Boxing Board of Control ruled that when a boxer is taking a count the round must be extended to allow the referee to finish counting.

If the boxer gets to his feet while the referee is counting, the round will automatically end.

Only the final round will last the appointed time, whether a man is taking a count or not.

Snell Runs Mile In 4:00.3

Jim Beatty Beats Halberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Beatty of Los Angeles ran a blazing final lap to defeat Murray Halberg of New Zealand in the 3000-metre run in the Coliseum Relays Friday night after Peter Snell of New Zealand won the mile co-feature.

The 29-year-old Beatty swept past the 1960 Olympic champion in the final 100 yards to win by a comfortable margin in 13 minutes 57.4 seconds. Halberg was timed in 13:59.2.

Snell had to settle for a relays and Coliseum record. His time broke both, 14:10.5, set by Barry Magee of New Zealand last year.

The world record is 13:55.0, held by Vladimir Kuts of Russia.

In the mile, Snell won with a final burst of speed in 4:00.3—which he admitted was disappointing.

Snell holds the world record at 3:54.4.

District Softball League

How They Will Stack Up!

The softball season here will get its official opening at the CNRA Park Monday evening when the Belleville and District League swings into action there at 6:45.

Trenton RCAF Flyers and Trudeau Motors will provide first-game action, following a short opening ceremony. Four draw prizes have also been secured and all in all it should be a gala opener.

The league reminds its fans that all Belleville home games, for Joyce Real Estate, Bobcats and Trudeau Motors, will be played at the CNRA this year, instead of the Fairgrounds. RCAF will play home games in Trenton on Wednesday nights, under the lights, while Belleville home nights are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Clifford "Sonny" Belch has been returned as league commissioner and will handle the job in his usual efficient manner.

Following is a short run down on each of the teams' expected rosters.

Trudeau Motors, the loop's only new entry, has come up with a combination of Ed. Mc-V., Commercial and "new face" players which pleases coach Harold Reid and manager Ron Fralick.

The prize catch for the club came when Billy Campbell was persuaded to come here from Cobourg. Rolly is a top pitcher, batter and outfielder. Don Ellis, ex-Joyce pitcher, and Bob Ethier, last year with Rollins, fill out the mound staff. Big Chuck Rowbotham and John McKibbon will do the catching. Outfielders Gary Duggan, another ex-Rollins star, will play first base, while "Shaker" Baker and Bob Hall will see action at second and in the outfield. Jack "Deacon" Whiting, who will help coach, and newcomer Al Reid, who also plays outfield, will hold down third base. Another new face, Steve Poremba, and Billy McGuire are battling for the shortstop job.

The starting outfield is expected to include speedster Rick Locke to centre field, and other sluggers Paul Zakos and Les Hall.

RCAF Flyers are expected to field much the same club as last year, with a couple of key changes. Joe Samuel was taken over the coaching reins and Ed Slegl the managerial duties. Charlie Druke also returns to complete the three-man "brain staff".

Pitching-wise the Flyers have Mike Ratushniak and Howie Cole back and have added big Bob Butterfield to form what could be the toughest staff in the loop.

Doug Alexander, shortstop, is said to have quit softball, but returning are first baseman Rocky Druke, batting champ, Billy Mitts, third baseman Yvon Blanchard, catchers Ron Ryan and Will Kennedy, hom-er-king Donny Cole and outfielder "Lem" Mowatt.

They have added Butterfield and a utility man in LeRoy Wannamaker, plus a few others.

The defending champion Joyce Real Estate squad returns with a number of lineup changes, under the management of Bill Shaw and coached by Claude Carr, aided by Harry Morgan.

Veteran "perfect-gamer" Pat Marsolo heads a four-man pitching staff. The Holway boys, Don and Sonny, plus young Ron Marsolo, one of Pat's ballplaying sons are the other pitchers.

Chuck Kingston is solid at first base, while Pat Asselstine takes over second, Ralph Plane is at third, backed by Ron Davis, and Pete Weston will play shortstop.

The present outfield includes Stu Meldrum and Ted Batchelor as well as newcomers Jim Harwood and Bob Wannamaker. Bert Faulkner will be out with the club shortly, along with several other veterans.

Bill Old, manager and coach of the Bobcats, spoke enthusiastically of this year's edition of his club. Added some new, young faces and with most of our veterans still with us, we should have a real contending squad this year," he said. Locus is back to give Old a hand with the coaching chore.

Joe Bowerman returns at first base, although "Wiener" Brown may see some action, there as well as at second and in the outfield. Floyd Crawford will be at second, backed by ex-junior Bill McCammon, while Don Gardner, another ex-junior, holds down the hot corner, and Al Hall will play shortstop.

The starting outfield has returned Jack Hughes and Carl Clapp plus newcomer Jack Calhoun, putting the emphasis on speed, claims Old.

New System Of Pensions In Near Future

OTTAWA (CP) — A comprehensive system of contributory pensions supplementing existing old age pensions is complex but will become operative as soon as possible, the throne speech at the opening of the new parliamentary session said Thursday.

The speech said that the new federal government is committed to establishing the new system of pensions, but it did not give any pension plan details.

"The new pensions will be coordinated with the existing provisions for old age security, for the purpose of enabling all Canadians to retire in security and with dignity," the speech added.

At present, $65 monthly pensions are paid from the federal treasury to everyone at age 70. To those in the 65-to-69 age group, old age assistance of up to $65 a month is paid on a 50-50 sharing basis by provincial and federal treasuries, and the provinces can pay more if they wish.

During the 1963 election campaign, the Liberals said a contributory pension plan supplementing existing pensions would have top priority.

Prime Minister Pearson, in a March 15 speech at Barrie, said the supplement would involve no added drain on the revenues of the federal government. Contributions would be made by employees during their working years.

DRAW SUPPLEMENT

Persons already on pension would draw a $10 monthly supplement, for a total of $75 a month immediately. Married couples, both drawing pensions, would be limited to $140 a month.

Through the system of contributions during the working years, an individual could draw $180 a month on retirement at age 65, or $250 a month if he worked to age 70, for himself and his wife.

There will be discussions with the provinces, particularly with Ontario to avoid conflict with its new portable pensions plan, but the federal plan is "a very different one and is bound to be portable by its national nature," the source said.

Twins' Allison Hits 3 Homers in Row

Bowsfield Stops Red Sox With 3-Hitter

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Another superb pitching job by Ted Bowsfield and a heroic hitting performance by Bob Allison have scrambled the standings at the opposite ends of the American League race.

Bowsfield, Vernon, B.C., native who no-hit Minnesota for eight innings last September before settling for a two-hit victory, turned in a masterful three-hitter Friday night as the Kansas City Athletics blanked Boston 3-0. The setback halted the Red Sox' winning string at five games and dumped them out of first place—six percentage points back of Chicago White Sox, whose game at Baltimore was knocked out by rain.

Allison blasted three home runs in consecutive times at bat but the faltering Minnesota Twins struggled out of the cellar with an 11-4 romp over Cleveland. The Twins' lead dropped four straight, seven of their last eight and 10 of 12 before erupting against the Indians, but they now hold ninth place by a half game over Washington.

KNOCKS 'EM FOUR

Joe Pepitone of the New York Yankees also had a big night as Los Angeles also put on a display of muscle with two home-run spikes as the Yankees beat the Angels 4-3. Pepitone's pair of two-run shots supported the four-hit pitching of Jim Bouton.

The Detroit - at - Washington tilt - night doubleheader was called because of rain before the second inning of the opening game, after Al Kaline had hit a slam homer by the Senators' Larry Osborne and a solo homer by the Tigers' Al Kaline.

Bowsfield, throwing a frustrating assortment of breaking stuff, limited the Red Sox to one hit—a third - inning single by Chuck Schilling — until he turned back his toughest man of the evening in the eighth. Dick Williams opened it with a pinch double and Schilling walked, but the Kansas City' lefty got the next three men in routine style.

Roman Mejias' single with two away in the ninth was Boston's third and final hit, and Bowsfield had his third victory against four losses.

The A's had only one payoff inning against Dave Morehead, the Red Sox' 19-year-old rookie sensation who had won his first three. George Walsuk tagged the teen-aged eight-hander for a two-run double in the third after a walk to Jerry Lumpe and a single by Norm Siebern.

HAS SIX HITS

Allison produced six runs batted in with his homers and showed admirable impartiality in hitting them off three Cleveland pitchers—Jim Grant in the fifth, Jerry Walker in the seventh and Ron Nischwitz in the eighth. The big outfielder now has nine homers, 30 runs batted in and tops the league with 39 RBI. Harmon Killebrew and Zollo Versalles also hit homers for the Twins.

Versalles connected with two on in the fifth against loser Gary Bell, and Allison hit a three-run shot in the same inning for a 6-3 Minnesota win. Backed by the powerful 14-hit barrage, Jim Perry, dealt off by the Indians this season by the Twins, won his first in three decisions with his new club. He went out in the seventh with an ailing side and Ray Moore finished up.

Pepitone and Clete Boyer accounted for four of the Yankees' five hits and all scored. Baltimore held its fifth straight victory. Pepitone homered following Boyer' singles in the second and seventh innings. Both blasts were off southpaw Mel Nelson in his first big league start.

Wagner, the league's top batter at .358 and Detroit's runs leader with 19, slugged his long-range drives against Bouton with the bases empty in the first inning after a walk to Jim Fregosi in the eighth.

Will Try Again With Jet Boat

ALPENA, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit industrialist owner of Miss Stars and Stripes 88 said Friday he would go ahead with his try for a world record speed on water if builder-driver Les Staudacher, injured seriously in a crackup of the hydroplane Thursday, is willing.

But Staudacher's wife, Lois, said she feels the crash "will encourage him to give up driving these fast boats."

"I hope he gives it up," Mrs. Staudacher said at the Alpena hospital, where the 31-year-old hydroplane pilot was recovering.

Staudacher suffered injuries when the rudder assembly on Miss Stars and Stripes 88 came loose and the craft piled up on the wooded shore of nearby Devil's Lake.

Staudacher, of Kawkawlin, Mich., suffered two broken legs, a broken hip, a broken left arm, a dislocated right shoulder and a broken hand bone. Doctors reported his condition was slightly improved.

The crackup of Miss Stars and Stripes 88 came in a test run. Staudacher told his crew chief, Donald Morin, that the $110,000 hydroplane had surpassed the world speed record of 200.335 miles an hour set by Donald Campbell of England.

Morin said Staudacher told him that the 8,000-pound craft up to 280 m.p.h., 20 miles over the record, just before the crash.

Cooper Gives Horse Players Big Hunch

NEW YORK (AP)—Are you a hunch player with the horses?

Then you have to forget Candy Spots, Never Bend and Chateaugay in today's Preakness at Pimlico.

The hunch horse is Sky Wonder.

While the world still thinking about Gordon Cooper's 22-orbit through space, you can bet onetothree with 5-to-2 bookmakers are going to get a heavy play at race tracks.

Just call Atomic Jet in the second at Pimlico and Hold for Joy in the second at Churchill Downs. Or you might like Copper Sky in the fourth at Arcet or Ar Horison in the second at Beulah.

Hasty Orbit is running in the fourth at Arcet and Smart Flyer in the fifth at Greenwood in Toronto. Blue Light in the sixth and Fellow the Sun in the eighth also are running at Greenwood.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — The Queen's Plate line on Dorothy Maple, the colt from the Barn of J. Louis Levesque of Montreal which had been great stuff among spring backing, was always a rude jolt at Greenwood Friday.

In a field of five good threeyear-olds, Royal Maple did no better than third behind Jean Smythe's Warriors Day and Viva La Zara, owned by George Frostad of Vineland, Ont., and proprietor of the Bo - Teek Farms.

Hill Backs Out of "500" Race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—World road racing champion Graham Hill backed out of the Indianapolis 500-mile race on the eve of qualifications Friday night.

The Londoner, who had won twice in practice runs earlier this month, blamed two days of showery weather for hampering his attempts to prepare for the qualifications.

Hill also said commitments to race in the Monaco Grand Prix would prevent his returning for the second weekend of qualifications.

Hill had hesitated three days before returning to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Wednesday after a trip to drive in Silverstone, England, road race last weekend.

Wife of Suspense Writer Is an Excellent Producer

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood (AP) — The man's world of television production is enhanced by English-born Joan Harrison, who has proven that a producer can be blonde, lovely and gentle-spoken and still create good shows.

Miss Harrison has been producer of the Alfred Hitchcock program since it started eight years ago. When the show became an hour this season, she shared producing duties with Norman Lloyd.

She manages to perform her duties without any loss of her femininity. If anything, she considers her sex an asset.

"You'd be surprised how chivalrous men are," she explained. "I find the men I work with try even harder than they might otherwise, in order to please me.

"Yes, I sometimes had differences of opinion with a director. But I never discuss them on the sets that is my own particular realm. I always ask him to drop in at my office, and we talk about it there.

MUST CARRY OUT

"I think it's important for a producer to make certain that his conception of the story is carried out. After all, he is the one who has selected the story, had it written, arranged the casing and sets. The director must give his interpretation of scenes, but the producer must make certain that everything contributes to the original value he saw in the story."

A graduate of St. Hughes' College at Oxford, Miss Harrison studied a year at the Sorbonne. When she applied for a job as secretary to Hitchcock he was impressed by her knowledge of his work. She got the job, advanced to production assistant and script writer and accompanied the director to Hollywood in 1939.

She produced some films of her own (Strange Affair of Uncle Harry, Miss the Pink Horse), then rejoined Hitch when he embarked into television.

In private life Miss Harrison is the wife of suspense writer Eric Ambler.

Your Car

Give Oil Fair Chance To Do Job

By EUGENE B. HILNOR

The efficiency—the very life of your engine, greatly depends on what kind of job is being done by the oil that lubricates, cleans, cushions vital parts. Engine oil is constantly bombarded by fine solids and water which are normal by-products of combustion. If oil is running hot enough, it helps to carry off much of these contaminants. But if—as in the usual case of commuting, short-run driving—oil is never really heated up sufficiently, sludge and corrosion readily accumulate. And this tends to occur unless the oil contains anti-rust, detergents and other special additives the oil might possess.

To give engine oil a fair chance to do its job, don't restrict the car to "few-mile" trips only. A good long run, at frequent intervals, will keep both the oil and the engine a lot healthier.

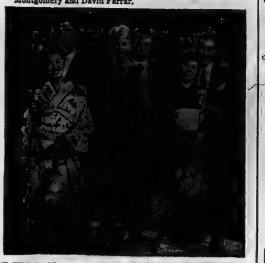
At first, they felt a pinch, but according to 1962 sales, the most popular imports are still making gains.

From C. L: "You auto writers and the plug makers always talk about a good hot spark. Why don't tell us something more about it?"

A hot spark helps performance—especially acceleration. But importantly, it aids the engine by burning gases both faster and more completely.

J. P. M. writes: "These ads claiming economy stress low purchase price and operating costs. Anticipated life of the car should be considered too, shouldn't it?"



Yes, indeed—but how does one gauge this? Accessibility of parts is often overlooked. This can greatly affect time and labor costs when it comes to maintenance and repairs.

G. V. asks: "Our new car has sticking but a red light for the cooling system. Should the light indicate when the engine is too cold, as well as when it is overheating.

Unfortunately, it only glows when temperatures are too high. You never really know how cool the engine may be running.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Ingrid Thulin tells Glenn Ford that despite her love for him she cannot desert her husband in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Four Horsemen of The Apocalypse." Based on the famous novel by Vicente Blasco-Ibanez, the big picture has an all-star cast, including Charles Boyer, Lee J. Cobb, Paul Lukas, Yvette Mimieux, Karl Boehm and Paul Henreid. The Julian Blaustein production was filmed in CinemaScope and color largely on locations in Paris and the French countryside under the direction of Academy Award-winner Vincente Minnelli. The feature opens tonight at the Belleville Drive-in Theatre. 2nd feature attraction also in color, "Watusi", stars George Montgomery and David Farrar.

AT THE BELLE — Monday—An All-Star cast is assembled in Hal Wallis' bol detory of the Orient Today, "A Girl Named Tamiko", including Laurence Harvey, France Nuyen, Martha Hyer, Gary Merrill, Miyoshi Umeki and Michael Wilding. Filmed in Big Screen Technicolor, the romantic drama, opens Monday at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

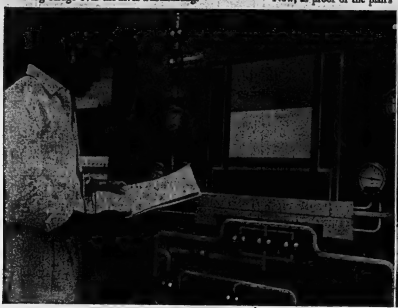
World-Wide Plan Wages War on Want

Canada's Multi-Million Friendship Investment



High on the credit side of international friendship is the Colombo Plan — a spontaneous, 23-country working project of practical co-operation. Today, a dozen years after its inception at a meeting of Commonwealth ministers in Ceylon, the plan has doubled its original membership to include such countries as Indonesia, Japan, the Philippines, Korea and Bhutan. Canada, a foundee member of the Colombo Plan, has so far played its part to the tune of $423,000,000. Over the years, this money has provided technical guidance, materials, and specialized services designed to carry out the plan's main object—helping countries of south-east Asia help themselves to greater economic stability. Hydro-electric installations, bridges, nuclear reactors, health units, technical training, air surveys, agricultural programs—all these and more have been gifts from the people of Canada to more needy countries. Now, as proof of the plan's effectiveness, some of the more vigorous nations on the receiving end of the plan are themselves giving help to their neighbours, are passing on the knowledge they have learned from others. Canada can be proud of its generous part in this aspect of international co-operation, can look forward to sharing in its future benefits.

The Golden Years

Couple Discovered Farm Life Not for Them in Retirement

By THOMAS COLLINS

It is respectfully suggested that all of you who are approaching retirement should study the following story, and then run — don't walk — from the first farm somebody tries to sell you.

"My husband and I bought the old homestead of my husband's family," according to the wife. This was 15 years ago. It was 90 acres of God's beautiful landscape.

"I loved every minute we could spend there. But retirement hadn't come yet, and we could do little with it.

"Finally, the great day came. We were free, and we had hundreds of things planned that we wanted to do with the place. We were going to have a cow for milk and butter, and cottage cheese (the cottage cheese my grandmother used to make was fortified with all the cream it would hold, and was out of this world.) We also were going to have buttermilk that we churned at home, the kind that is flecked with the gold of the butter on top.

"We were going to have a pig and chickens to use the surplus milk from the cow, besides providing us our own smoked hams, eggs fresh from the hen house, and roosters to put in the freezer. Along with the surplus from our garden.

"And the wild berries that were growing everywhere, which we could pick without [illegible]body.

"COUPLE OF STEERS"

"There was plenty of pasture on the farm, too. And a barn. We were going to have a couple of steers, one to put in the freezer, and one to sell. And a hive or so of bees.

"My husband's mouth watered for the pumpkin pies I was going to make for him, all gooey with honey like his Mother used to make.

"My husband loved to hunt. He was going to have a good rabbit dog. The surplus from his hunting trips would go into the freezer, too. I was going to have an old-fashioned bake day once a week (especially yeast bread). The surplus was going into the freezer . . ."

So what happened to this dream of a charming, intelligent couple in retirement?

"Well," continues the wife, "we did have a garden. But the fight we had to produce anything was hardly worth the effort. I canned some tomatoes and gave some to the married children. Then when I went to visit them I noticed my tomatoes shoved to the back of the shelves. There were no instructions on the side of the jars so they didn't know how to use them.

"So I won't be doing that again.

"We are still trying to use our home-grown potatoes, all wrinkled with sprouts a foot long. I've nagged all I'm going to about getting them sprouted.

"One or two days of baking finished that. We found we liked the breads and pies from the bakery better.

ONE MESS OF RABBIT

"My husband went hunting at the start of the season and brought home some rabbits. One mess of rabbit on the table finished that deal.

"We now get our milk from a nearby farmer for 50 cents a gallon. We go after it and furnish the jug. He says it costs 48 cents a day keep a cow, in addition to the work.

"We get fresh eggs from another farmer, and when he culls his flock in the fall we get chickens cheap for the freezer. We bought a quarter of beef for the freezer, but found it included too much of the kind of meat we didn't like and not enough of what we wanted.

"We had an old apple orchard with half-dead trees. So we decided to buy a power saw and cut down the trees to burn in our old-fashioned fireplace grate. I was delighted with the idea, but a couple of days with that saw by a 65-year-old man who hadn't done hard labor in 40 years and he was laid up for a month. That was enough of that.

"Retired people can buy their food cheaper than they can raise it, without all the bother. Anyway, we are retired; let's leave it that way.

"By the way, my husband never did find a homing dog to his liking . . . after I told him he would have to look after it all by himself . . ."

REVOLT CRUSHED BY TURKISH GOVT.

Will Not Invite Arrangements To Stay In Power -- Pearson

P.M. and Diefenbaker Clash in Heated Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons got Monday what the voters missed last month: A face-to-face debate between Lester Bowles Pearson and John George Diefenbaker over economic policy and Canadian-American relations.

It was dandy but unresolved. As well — attended House and packed galleries soaked up 3½ hours of it, sizing up Mr. Diefenbaker, back in his parliamentary role of a rotting opposition critic and Prime Minister Pearson as the practised pundit.

Left in the balance was Mr. Diefenbaker's non - confidence motion, two days old, to be a roll-call vote Thursday night, and Prime Minister Pearson's blunt statement that his minority government will not invite "special arrangements" to stay in office.

The Conservative motion:

". . . While recognizing that Canada's economic growth during the year will exceed that of any country in the Western world, this House regrets that many of the pledges made by the prime minister and his colleagues have not been incorporated in the government's declaration of intention as outlined in the speech from the throne, and further regrets that the policies announced fail to provide full opportunity for the people of Canada to continue the social advance and large economic growth of the past year."

URGES ACTION

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson, who urged the House to cease being a "political arena" and get down to legislative business, said Mr. Diefenbaker made a bash of the motion.

New-Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said the House rose at a non-confidence motion of his own today, praised the Liberal government for its dispatch of business and said the opposition parties have a responsibility to refrain from all forms of frivolous obstruction."

Normally, the throne speech debate lasts about a week. But State Secretary J. W. Pickersgill, government House leader, said he wants it ended at 10 p.m. EDT Monday night. He predicted a couple of days can be snipped off by limiting those with "something to say."

The assembly's chief protagonists had lots to say.

Mr. Diefenbaker described the throne speech as "a declaration as the "shifty days," and said the Liberal victory was a national disappointment.

"It is full of platitudes spaced out among economic generalities."

TERRORIST DAMAGE — A bomb exploded under the engine of the car on the left in a Montreal dating back to April 1 and believed to be the work of the Front de Libertion Quebecois, an underground separatist organization which will use violence against all federal institutions and "colonial symbols" in Quebec. Suspect Arson As 8 Montreal Homes Burned

MONTREAL (CP) — Fire destroyed the homes of eight families in east-end Montreal today. Police said they are almost certain the fire was set by the same pyromaniac believed to have started 16 fires in the same section of the crowded east end within the last two weeks. The fire hit a series of tenement houses.

Today's two-alarm fire raged out of control for more than an hour and forced 15 families to leave their homes. Many others joined them in the street, some bringing furniture and treasured possessions with them.

Bomb Victim Is Improved

MONTREAL (CP) — Hospital officials said today terrorist bomb victim Sgt.-Maj. Walter (Rocky) Leja "shows some slight improvement. But they said his chances of surviving remain 50-50.

Leja, a 45-year-old army engineer, suffered critical injuries Friday when dynamite planted in a mail box exploded as he tried to dismantle it. He underwent a five-hour operation—his left arm was amputated at the elbow and surgery was performed on his chest and face.

Hospital officials said Leja, though still unconscious, is moving his body more and is reacting to pain. They said he had rested well during the night and both blood pressure and pulse were "good."

Pearson Calls Diefenbaker Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—As Prime Minister Diefenbaker rudely said, it was bound to happen.

He referred to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker as "the prime minister" during a Commons debate Monday.

Justice Minister Lionel Chevrier made the same slip earlier in the day.

Conservative members cheered and banged their desks both times.

"I was bound to make that mistake, and I am glad I made it at once," Mr. Pearson said with a smile.

HAMILTON BOYS GO ON RAMPAGE, BURN BUILDING

Police Use Force To Disperse Crowd

HAMILTON (CP) — Rampaging youths burned a vacant two-storey house to the ground early today after police used force to disperse a mob of 800 firecracker-throwing teen-agers and adults.

Gasoline fires flared in the streets of the city's main northern business section as youths and policemen clashed in scattered skirmishes.

Five men ranging in ages from 17 to 26 were charged with creating a disturbance and obstructing police, and were held in custody overnight. Two policemen were treated in hospital for minor injuries.

Police said trouble started early Monday night when firemen were called to James Street North to extinguish burning tires set alight by teenagers. Around 10 p.m. they extinguished a fire in the ground floor of the house.

The situation got out of hand minutes later when several policemen tried to quieten a crowd of jeering adults and teen-agers who had lit two gasoline fires at a nearby intersection.

POLICE ATTACKED

About 100 youths surrounded three policemen, punching and kicking them as they tried to put a youth into a cruiser. A radio station reporter ran to a cruiser and called for reinforcements over the two-way radio. He was later escorted to safety after someone in the crowd tried to assault him.

Police and youths clashed again in isolated incidents after reinforcements arrived, but the crowd dispersed around midnight as firemen stood by with hoses and a police dog arrived on the scene.

An hour later, the house burst into flames. Firemen fought the blaze but the house was destroyed in 90 minutes.

Police said detectives saw two youths carrying a gasoline can of gasoline during the fracas, but the youths dropped the can and fled.

Canada's Survival as Nation Depends on Solving Problem Of Biculturalism -- Pearson

OTTAWA (CP) — A sober warning that Canada's survival depends on solving the problem of biculturalism has been voiced by Prime Minister Pearson.

"I cannot imagine anything at this time more serious to the progress, indeed, to the survival of our country as a confederation than a successful solution to this problem," Mr. Pearson said Monday night in the Commons throne speech debate.

To French Canada has issued this reminder:

"You cannot have a bicultural country without having a country. So Quebec, to be Quebec, must be Quebec in Canada."

Mr. Pearson's reiteration of his views on biculturalism clashed with those of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who had urged him to scrap a proposed royal commission on this subject and instead call a federal-provincial conference.

Mr. Diefenbaker said such a conference could take "the first major step" toward greater unity and equality by "repatriating our constitution" as his government had tried to do.

"You cannot bring about a discussion among various provinces of our national symbols by means of a royal commission. You can do it only through a meeting between the federal government and the provinces so as to secure in a common unity the acceptance of princi-

Quebec Bombings Must Stop Order of Premier Lesage

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec's top military, civil and police authorities meet today to map a campaign to wipe out terrorist bombings in Quebec province.

A meeting of 15 municipal and law - enforcement leaders was called by Premier Jean Lesage, who said Monday "it must stop."

"They (the terrorists) are doing enormous harm to Quebec as well as to French Canada."

The premier also announced that the provincial government is posting a $50,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone responsible for terrorism since April 1.

His actions followed a weekend of increased activity by the bomb - planters. The biggest blast since the start of the terrorist campaign demolished several cars and broke three dozen windows in the vicinity of the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers' armory on Monday. In Quebec City, a stick of dynamite was found in each of 18 different mail boxes.

Friday, a 1954 DC-3 bombs were planted in shalboxes—41 of them in suburban West mount, a mainly English-speaking area—and the explosion of one bomb critically injured army engineer Walter Rolland Leja, a 45-year-old sergeant-major.

He was trying to dismantle it when it exploded, shredding his left arm and leg.

Leja, his arm amputated in a five-hour operation, was still in critical condition and uncon-

France Agrees With NATO Decision on Nuclear Force

OTTAWA (CP)—French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville says the NATO ministerial meeting here this week will discuss "nuclear problems" but that "not many great decisions have to be taken now."

"What is important is the situation that exists, and this situation is very difficult to change," he said in a brief statement on arrival here Monday night for the Wednesday-to-Friday NATO conference.

Mr. Couve de Murville thus implied that what has been common NATO gossip for weeks: That France will go along with a NATO decision to create an inter-allied nuclear force of existing air and sea units as long as this decision is not dressed up as something new.

France does not want it to appear that a NATO nuclear force would be an alternative for her own "force de frappe" now being built up.

Lord Home, British foreign secretary, seemed to take note of France's objections when he said that what the alliance does is important, not what kind of name it gives to the inter-allied nuclear arm.

The nuclear force would comprise three American Polaris missile submarines, British bomber command and tactical air units from several countries, including Canada.

Prime Minister Pearson indicated in the Commons that Canada supports creation of such a force.

JUSTICE NORRIS NOT EXPECTED TO PULL PUNCHES

Will Likely Blast Seafarers Union

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Allan MacEachen shortly will receive the report of Mr. Justice T. G. Norris on his searching, seven-month investigation of labor ectrife and shipping disruptions on the Great Lakes.

Indications are tough-minded Judge Norris will express his findings without sparing the sensitivities of government, the shipowners, organized labor, the police and the public.

All these interests are deeply embroiled in the turbulent struggle that has been fought with guns, fists, propaganda and political pressure for the last 13 years along the Canadian and American shorelines.

The fight goes back to 1949 when the Communist - dominated Canadian Seamen's Union was outlawed and replaced by Hal C. Banks and his Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

Its repercussions have been felt at highest level—the recent Hyannis Port meeting where Prime Minister Pearson and President Kennedy declared that ships and their cargoes must be allowed free movement in the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes that they between the United States and Canada.

WOULD END STRIFE

Mr. Justice Norris is known to have the ability to get people to feel the usefulness of the international waterway must not be impaired by industrial strife.

At the basis of his one-man inquiry last August, the Vancouver jurist made it clear he planned to judge the dispute in terms of "ethics" and the rule of law, for the rights of individuals and for the public interest.

Based on this three-fold yardstick and on the evidence tendered at the public hearings, the judge is expected to find that:

1. SIU President Banks was extravagant and abused his powers as head of the union claiming 15,000 Canadian members.

2. The rights and welfare of individual sailors have been flagrantly ignored by union leaders and by some shipowners.

3. The SIU's vacation pay

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

MONDAY, May 20, 1963

The Commons launched the eighth day of throne speech debate with the Progressive Conservatives presenting a motion of non-confidence.

Opposition Leader nieferbaker charged the new government was moving to put control of Canada's economy into the hands of the bureaucrats.

Prime Minister Pearson defended his minority government's program and said it will "not indulge in any political manoeuvres in order to gain its office."

A letter to the provinces proposing co-operation in a royal commission inquiry into biculturalism was tabled in the Commons by the government.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said this is one time for another election and that the Commons must get down to business.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas pledged qualified support of the minority liberal government but said he will be presenting a non-confidence motion.

Seven Killed, 23 Wounded, Leader Held

Cadets Defy Ultimatum To Return to Barracks

ISTANBUL (AP) — Loyal Turkish troops today crushed a former army colonel's revolt and attempt in 15 months to seize power.

The revolt, backed by cadets of the War College, lasted less than 12 hours.

Ankara radio announced that the rebel leader, Talat Aydemir, had been captured with other dismissed army officers who had supported him.

Seven persons were reported killed and 23 were wounded during fighting in the capital. Most of them fell when government troops attacked cadets who defied an ultimatum to return to their barracks and surrender.

Gen. Cevdet Sunay, chief of staff of the Turkish armed forces, said in a broadcast shortly after the abortive treacherous attempt by a small group to seize power has been completely crushed.

Aydemir, 50, was ousted from the military and jailed after masterminding a short-lived rebellion in February, 1962. Parliament pardoned him and his accomplices.

Government troops arrested four colonels who tried to seize radio stations in Istanbul. Otherwise the metropolis was quiet.

The rebellion was centred in Ankara and apparently was supported by an unknown number of cadets at the War College, a traditional centre of unrest.

COUP FOILED

A voice of Radio Ankara announced the coup at 12:40 a.m. Ankara time. The insurgents proclaimed Aydemir "chief of the revolutionary committee" and ordered a curfew in Turkey's nine main cities—Istanbul, Ankara and Izmir. Within an hour, Radio Ankara said the coup had been thwarted and the plotters were being rounded up.

A third Radio Ankara announcement claimed army units controlled the capital "on behalf of the revolutionary committee of Talat Aydemir." The Radio Ankara went dead. Normal communications between Istanbul and Ankara were restored.

After a period of silence, Radio Ankara went back on the air with an ultimatum from Gen. Sunay.

"I order some misled cadets and officers to surrender and retire to their barracks," he said. "Unless this is done air force planes and all other armed forces units will attack."

President Cemal Gursel in another broadcast said that a handful of army rebels had occupied Radio Ankara briefly but had been arrested.

Ask Court Void Birmingham Order Suspending Demonstrating Pupils

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Negro leaders say they will go to federal court in efforts to void a Birmingham school board order expelling or suspending more than 1,000 Negro pupils who demonstrated against segregation.

The school board's action Monday was not unexpected, and Negro leaders said they had planned to fight the move only by legal means.

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., after meeting with Negro leaders, said: "We will not call for a mass walkout from the jails or the schools, nor will we call for a renewal of demonstrations at this point.

"We will not seek to correct an unwise act by moving hastily into another unwise act."

The decision by Negro leaders saved a shaky biracial agreement that had been threatened by the school board's handling of the dispute.

In a letter to school principals, Supt. Theo Wright ordered immediate expulsion of pupil participants over 16 and suspension of those under 16. It affects 1,081 pupils arrested in protest marches during the last two weeks.

A school board spokesman said the action was in keeping with the board's policy of truancy.

Rev. King called the board's action "a tragic move, immoral . . . a dastardly act."

Other developments in the U.S. racial picture:

Montreal-born broadway actress Madeleine Sherwood was released under $300 bond Monday night. She was among 11 persons jailed in Gadsden, Ala., Sunday after holding a memorial service for slain integration worker Rev. B. Moore, a Baltimore postman.

More than 900 Negroes were arrested in a new wave of racial demonstrations in two North Carolina cities. The arrests occurred in Greensboro and Durham when large groups of Negroes marched and Negroes converged on the business districts of each city Monday.

Labor Dispute Reaches Court In United States

CHICAGO (AP) — A showdown has been arranged for today in a "guessing game" that has piled up an estimated $121-million bill in four weeks—whether the Seafarers International Union will grab on a Canadian vessel that has been idle in Chicago one month.

The attempt results from a union lawyer's charge that the Continental Grain Company of Chicago has made no effort to load the freighter Howard Shaw, owned by Upper Lakes Shipping Limited of Toronto.

The company contended in court Monday that the SIU advised it that it would not load grain on the vessel which has recognized a Canadian Seamen's union as bargaining agent for its employees.

The labor dispute has been the subject of high-level negotiations between the United States and Canada and reached the Federal Court Monday at the direction of the National Labor Relations Board.

The board sought a court order restraining the SIU and the International Longshoremen's association from refusing to load cargo on freighters owned by the Canadian firm.

The unions countered with a motion to block the board action by contending the U.S. District Court has jurisdiction in a case involving foreign vessels.

Judge James B. Parsons continued the case until May 27 after suggesting that the company make an effort to load the vessel.

Rumor Pope Has Setback

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Reports circulated in Rome today that Pope John had suffered a setback in his illness during the night.

Sources at the Vatican said there is "information of a new relapse. They said the 81-year-old Pontiff's regular Wednesday audience probably will still scheduled for Wednesday.

Pope John war stricken with pneumonia in mid-December last November. The nature of the ailment was not disclosed.

North Front St. Bridge Ready For Floor Beams

The new four-lane bridge over the CNR double tracks on North Front Street is rapidly taking shape, with work on concrete piers weeks ahead of schedule.

The concrete sub-structure of the new bridge has now been completed and is in the process of curing.

Work of placing the prestressed concrete beams for the floor of the bridge is expected to commence next week, according to an official of Looby Construction, general contractors for the new structure.

The concrete floor beams are being supplied by Wilson Concrete of Belleville.

Completion of the bridge is expected for about the middle of August.

More than a dozen residences, both north and south from the bridge area, had to be razed or moved to make way for the new bridge and its approaches.

The last of the houses (the one immediately to the north of the Grant funeral home) is now being torn down to make way for the bridge approaches.

The new bridge structure will provide a four-lane traffic artery with maximum visibility where formerly a narrow obsolete structure was creating an unnecessary bottleneck as traffic from 401 highway north of the city mounted.

Thousands See Fireworks Show

TRENTON — In spite of the cold weather and a threat of rain, thousands lined the streets of Trenton last night to see the Victoria Day parade. The band concert in Bayshore Park drew hundreds of listeners and the 45-minute fireworks' display, put on by the fire department, saw thousands of spectators line up vantage points on both sides of the river. The display was enjoyed by cottagers along the south shore of the bay, as well.

Elsewhere in Trenton, in spite of police vigilance, loud bangs were the order of the day on the streets. Two youngsters had the wind taken out of their sails while they were throwing firecrackers onto the roof of a household along the new government dock, from the bridge. An alert constable grabbed the cracker and threw them to a place of safety . . . the river.

THE SOUND OF MACHINE GUNS (simulated by firecrackers) during the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's annual inspection, in Belleville Sunday, was too much for six-and-a-half-year-old Henry David MacDonald, of Benjamin Street. He enjoyed the show, but shut out the noise by putting his fingers in his ears. In the picture, he's framed by two "bazookas" — anti-tank rocket launchers.

PTE. R. M. LAMBERT, a 16-year-old Port Hope High School student, won the Lt.-Col. A. B. Duffy Trophy this year, for the best recruit in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Brig. J. S. Ross, commanding officer of the East Central Ontario Area, presented the trophy at the annual inspection of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, in Belleville Sunday.

Port Hope Student Is Best Recruit in Hasty Pees Regt., Inspection Held in City

Pte. R. M. Lambert, a 16-year-old grade 11 student at Port Hope High School was the best recruit in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment last year. Brig . J. S. Ross, army commander of the East Central Ontario Area, presented him with the Lt.-Col. A. B. Duffy Trophy, at the annual inspection of the regiment Sunday. Pte. Lambert enlisted during November of last year.

Col. Duffy and Lt.-Col. G. M. MacGregor, both former commanding officers of the regiment, and about 200 spectators watched the presentation and the inspection, on the Loblaw's parking lot, Pinnacle St. Lt.-Col. J. B. Black, present commanding officer, offered the regiment for inspection.

WINDS HAMPER DRILL

Cold weather and high winds hampered the regiment's drill during the display, a point recognized by Brig. Ross during his address to the regiment. The wind hampered Brig. Ross' address, too, by roaring in the microphone. It limited his remarks to brief compliments of the regiment's turnout, and recognition of the regimental history.

The inspection opened with general salute by the regiment, and a march past the reviewing stand. Each unit advanced, in review order, to watch the presentation of the trophy to Pte. Lambert, then retired and broke ranks to make way for the demonstrations.

PORT HOPE WINS

"C Company," of Port Hope, winner of the annual regimental drill competition, demonstrated precision drill directed by Capt. K. Rose and W.O. J. A. Merrill. Corps training, with automatic weapons and rocket launchers was demonstrated by the Support Company, of Belleville, under Maj. A. Cunningham and Sgt. S. Scott. A national-survival rescue operation was demonstrated by HQ Company, of Belleville, commanded by Maj. C. Bristol and Cpl. C. J. Calfe, and a signals demonstration was presented by combined units of "A Company," of Trenton and "C Company," of Picton. Captain J. A. Smith, regimental signals officer, commanded the signals demonstration, assisted by Sgt. D. Campbell.

The Hasty Pees band, commanded by Drum Major Glenn Crawford, provided music for the occasion, and for the first time, the regimental march was played during an inspection of the regiment.

Two hundred and sixty five officers and men turned out for the day, including support personnel and army cooks, in the armories.

Forged Cheque Brings Term Of Six Months

A forged $60 cheque sent a Belleville man to jail for six months today.

Raymond Cranston, 35, who pleaded guilty to the charge three weeks ago, today aired Magistrate T. Y. Wills for time to return the money.

"If I had to the end of the month I could make restitution," he claimed.

The magistrate said if restitution were forthcoming it might affect the sentence. However, he pointed out to Cranston he could not give him a suspended sentence since he had a record. Nor had he any authority to release Cranston on bail.

"You might as well sentence me now then," Cranston told him.

Imposing the jail term the magistrate called the act a "straight case of forgery."

Monsignor Sullivan Speaks To Bridge St. AOTS Club

At the May supper meeting in Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday evening, Monsignor Sullivan, of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, delivered a timely and interesting address on certain aspects in the background and development of the Christian church.

From the time of the "chosen disciple" the church progressed slowly, but consistently over many centuries, with no dissensions amongst the leaders to mar its existence. But some 400 years ago, breaches in understanding had appeared in matters concerning the Scriptures and church practice, and there seemed to be good reasons for the introduction of certain reforms. Such breaches at times became serious issues, championed by zealots, who did not hesitate to part company from the original church body. Opposing groups often assumed extreme positions, so that bigots were to be found on both sides of the fence.

MORE MUTUALITY

Monsignor Sullivan recalled that over the past 100 years many opportunities have been taken by all Christian church workers to advocate more of a mutually compromising spirit towards each other, and to adopt a new approach on any controversial question, in the interests of a worthy Christian group-roots civilization. Recently, Pope John XXIII issued an encyclical urging all world authorities to strive more earnestly for the attainment of "Peace on Earth."

The ideas of his Holiness were applauded universally and for once brought favorable comments from both Washington and Russia. It was expressed that relations between God and man were not in need of revision, but relations between man and man were not good — the reason for many wars down through the ages. Something like a Bill of Rights for every person was mentioned by the speaker as an important part of Pope John's message, suggesting the right to have a home and private property; life and security; education; training; work; freedom of speech in politics and religion; and finally the right to be respected.

RIGHTS LEAD TO DUTIES

He reminded his audience that Rights led to Duties which should be observed to the best of one's ability. Certainly, we have no right to subjugate others nor to erect Berlin walls; nor to cause peoples to live in a state of perpetual fear. He believed that the Pope was not opposed to armed protection for the common good and that he had favored the formation of the United Nations in 1945.

Monsignor Sullivan was all for more and better education, not only along technical lines, but in other subjects as the humanities and in religious knowledge.

In closing, he assured all present that he was pleased to come out and speak to the Men's Club and acknowledged most cordially the warm welcome he had received.

After the meeting, a vote was conducted through the new portion of the church by the Rev. Harry Davis and commented favorably upon the up-to-date facilities that had been acquired in designing and completing the recent building project that was finished last November and was dedicated on December 2nd.

A goodly number of guests enjoyed the talk by Rt. Rev. Father Sullivan and the fellowship of the regular monthly gathering.

Introduced by Taylor Franklin, Monsignor Sullivan was born and brought up in Kingston; attended St. Augustine Seminary at Toronto; was ordained in June 1938, and started his work in Kingston Cathedral as curator and later was raised to the position of rector. He had been prominent in community service work in the city of Kingston, and had been honored by Pope Pius 12th in his appointment as a Domestic Prelate.

In 1960 Monsignor Sullivan had come to Belleville as senior priest at St. Michael's and is believed throughout his entire parish.

Bryson Leslie expressed the appreciation of the members for the inspiring words of Monsignor Sullivan, and thanked him sincerely for his detailed comments on the papal letters, all set out so clearly in the short time at his disposal.

The meeting was chaired by vice-president Bryce Philip, with Rex Chaplin acting as sgt.-at-arms. A lively sing-song was enjoyed under the baton of Vic White, with Jimmy White at the piano.

A devotional period was conducted by Ted Muliken on the subject of "Faith". The speaker emphasized the importance of faith to a Christian and urged each one to acquire it, by reference to the Scriptures, study of literature on the subject and reflection upon many living examples of those who possess it in good measure.

The ladies were duly thanked by Bob Cruickshank and the Quin-Mo-Lac paint-up project was announced and highly recommended by Don Leslie to be carried out on June 8th.

Billy Graham's Motion Picture Coming Here

Evangelist Billy Graham addresses the generation growing up in the shadow of the atomic cloud in his newest feature motion picture. "Touch of Brass" which premieres in Calvary Temple next Friday evening.

Graham's producing organization, World Wide Pictures, took its sound-color cameras to the homes and factories and places of amusement of Manchester, England, where the story of a working man's family actually took place. The dramatic cast was drawn from the locale itself, resulting in a ring of gallantly rarely seen on the motion picture screen. The film was directed by Ross Hunt and runs the emotional gamut impending something for every age group.

Scheduled with the dramatic feature is a musical featurette "To God the Glory" which features the talent and artistry of the Billy Graham platform team: Cliff Barrows, song leader George Beverly Shea, international known bass baritone soloist; Tedd Smith and Don Hustad at the piano and organ; and the voices of the Christians aires Choir.

Lion Kills Zoo Worker In New York

BINGHANTON, N.Y. (AP) A lion killed and partly devoured an attendant today in a cage at Rose Park Zoo. Police shot the lion.

Two lions were in the cage with the attendant, Guy E. Carey, 43, but zoo officials absolved the timid female lion, Tina, and blamed the unruly male, Timba. Tina merely cowered when police arrived while Timba clung to the body.

Police said all the doors in the four - part cage were closed, which seemed unusual. Normally, both lions would have been put in one section, and barred in while the attendant cleaned the rest of the cage. Carey, however, was in the section with both lions.

The hose he had been using was still running in another section.

Police turned the hose on the lions to try to force them away from the body. The female lion went into another section but Timba resisted and the police shot him in the head 12 times.

A Step Along the Way

Despite all the headlines, U.S. Astronaut Gordon Cooper did not actually cross any new frontiers in his 22 orbits around the earth. As long ago as Aug. 6, 1961, Cosmonaut Gherman Titov had proved that man could survive extended periods of weightlessness, when he circled the globe 17 times.

Nevertheless, if he crossed no frontier Cooper may eventually have an unusual distinction. He may be the last of the lone astronauts or cosmonauts.

Dr. Brainerd Holmes, director of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, believes that Cooper's flight may have provided all the information needed to justify proceeding with the Gemini program, in which spacecraft carrying two astronauts will be used. The Gemini project will involve manoeuvring spacecraft in proximity to each other—something already accomplished after a fashion by the Russians but with "single-seater" craft. A Gemini astronaut may also have the distinction of being the first man to step out of a spacecraft in orbit. This honor, though, may go to a Russian. We may be sure that the Soviet Union has not abandoned its efforts to reach the moon first and we might reasonably expect that the next Russian space experiment will be the Reds' equivalent to the U.S. Gemini project.

Gemini and its Russian counterpart, however, are in their turn only steps towards the really history-making event. That will be when a man actually lands on the moon.

This will rank with the first atomic explosion as a history-making feat of first proportions. Whether future generations will rank Major Yuri Gagarin's first orbital flight with these two achievements is problematic. But the man who lands on the moon will loom in tomorrow's history-books at least as large as Columbus.

This event may occur in this decade. The U.S. expects to be able to put a man on the moon by 1968 and the increasing confidence with which it has been staging its later space experiments gives us no cause to regard this claim with scepticism. As for the Russians, they are following their customary procedure of keeping their plans secret, but their boast in their past record would warrant us in minimizing their chances of maintaining their lead in the space race at least long enough to be the first in the moon-race.

Educational Revolution

Does the average Canadian realize the tremendous changes which are in the making in this country?

That question comes to mind on reading some statistics contained in a report from the Ontario Department of Education.

In June of 1956 112,000 students wrote Grade 13 papers. It is estimated that in 1968 the number writing will have increased to 72,930.

When the number of students completing their education up to the university level quadruples in a dozen years, we are witnessing something more than impressive growth. This trend cannot help but have important influences on every phase of our community life.

In case any person questions the accuracy of estimates of the number of students in future years, it is worth noting that in 1962 the number writing Grade 13 examinations was 33,414, or almost double the number in 1956. What is predicted for the next six years is, therefore, merely a duplication of what has already happened.

There is one slight difference, however. Many of those who wrote the Grade 13 examinations are private-study candidates, taking only one or two subjects at a time, the report notes. Most of these, we suspect, are adults who are trying to remedy the regret of leaving school too early. Their number would appear to have been on the increase in recent years, for while the number of candidates almost doubled during the past six years the number of papers marked rose only about 90 per cent. The Department apparently anticipates that trend will be less marked in the future. During the next half-dozen years the number of candidates is expected to increase by 118 per cent and the number of papers marked by 115 per cent.

American Press Pictures Pearson as Kennedy's Puppet

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

Postscript to Hyannis Port — Believe it or not, but there are some Americans who seem to think Parliament Hill's East Block has become some sort of an annex to the White House, and that Prime Minister Pearson is a kind of colonial pro-consul of President Kennedy.

This brand of thinking has even got into print across the border, in the editorial pages of the large and powerful Scripps-Howard chain newspaper.

Now, unless you happened to have been in Hyannis Port when the Prime Minister and the President conferred, you probably would laugh off such stuff as "nonsense."

But, if you were in Hyannis Port — and to cover the conference The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau flew down with the Pearson press corps — you no longer are laughing.

For somehow — not all, mind you, but a surprising number — of American newspaper, radio and television political correspondents saw the Prime Minister as flying down to Cape Cod to get his "orders" from the President.

This, on the basis that Prime Minister Pearson's visit to the new Government actually, in fact, were "creations" of the Kennedy administration.

STATECRAFT, THEY CALL IT:

Ridiculous, you say?

Then consider this . . .

. . . that in the Washington Daily News, the Scripps Howard paper in the American Capital, Scripps columnist Richard Starnes has written that it wasn't Prime Minister Pearson who won the Canadian election after all—it was the U.S. State Department.

To quote from the Starnes text:

"Adroit statecraft, by the American State Department, brought down the curtain on crypto anti-Yankee government of John Diefenbaker."

Starnes then proceeded to the theory that the "statecraft" State Department, with cool, considered calculation, had laid a carefully-set booby trap for John Diefenbaker in its now-famous press release blasting Canadian defence policy for nuclear foot-dragging.

The reason Starnes cited State Department knew Canadians would reject "anti-Americanism," he declared, guided the former Conservative Government with the press release.

"Mr. Diefenbaker took the bait nicely . . . and Canadians turned their backs on him just as the State Department knew they would," wrote Starnes.

"The American intervention was coldly calculated. It was precisely what it did—and it was a brilliant success."

Now how do you like this?

And columnist Starnes is by no means the only American political writer who subscribes to that startling theory.

"THAT'S MONEY!"

At Hyannis Port, among the Kennedy press corps, there were any number of correspondents who believed that Ottawa did not mind a bit saying so.

And ask them, why, if the Prime Minister thought so smart and powerful it could break and make governments in Canada, it did not do something about Castro's Cuba, they answer, seriously, something like this:

"Why not a little more time and we will."

So, while all agreed, most glowingly, that Prime Minister Pearson was simply "a wonderful little guy," as several of them put it, their relief the certain feeling even attitude, that he was down there getting a "little of his own back," "how things are going to be up there in Canada from now on."

Nonsense?

Of course.

But consider this . . .

It was, as both the Prime Minister and the President said, a conference to establish "a new atmosphere of understanding and co-operation in Canadian-American relations."

At least, in the warm glow of a Cape Cod fireside, two old friends were making that friendship internationally official.

But down in the bar of the Yachtsman Hotel, where the State Department had bivouacked the American correspondents, and External Affairs has reserved rooms for the Canadians, only .US. dollars were legal tender.

Canadian dollars?

"That's money!" as the bartender put it.

Upstairs in the hotel's front office, things were some better —they were taking Canadian money at a 10 per cent discount.

Hard for Man's Mind to Accept New Theories

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In my recent piece on left-handed thinking," which dealt with our resistance to changes of thought, I mentioned the hard time given to new ideas in science, from Harvey on the circulation of the blood to Freud on the role of the unconscious.

We might expect that Freud would be bitterly opposed, because he, after all, dragged into the light the repressed sexual conflicts of people, and outraged the social conventions as well as the medical convictions of his age.

But why should people — and the medical profession as much as anyone — have objected to William Harvey's discovery of the circulation of the blood? His investigations did not embarrass "morality," nor did his theory have any theological or philosophical consequences, as Darwin's did a few centuries later.

Nevertheless, Harvey could hardly find the courage to publish his results, even after many years of dissecting no fewer than 80 species of animals, including reptiles, crustaceans and insects. When he finally published, he dedicated the book to King Charles, hoping it would receive a more sympathetic hearing - - and in the dedication compared the King and the realm to the heart and body.

It seems almost incredible, but Harvey confided in a letter to a colleague that his theory on the quantity and the source of blood:

". . . is of so novel and unheard - of character that I not only fear injury to myself from the envy of a few, but sometimes lest I have mankind at large for my enemies - - so much do habit and custom, that become as another nature and doctrine once received, and hath struck deep root, and respect for antiquity, influence all men; still the die is cast, and my trust is in my love of truth, and the candour that inheres in cultivated minds."

As Prof. W. I. B. Beveridge remarks: "His fears were well founded: he was subject not only to derision and abuse and his practice suffered greatly, but after a struggle of 20 years did the circulation of the blood become generally established as a fact, highly recommended, by the way, Beveridge's book, "The Art of Scientific Investigation," now available in a Vintage paperback for $1.25).

The human race, it seems, cannot be reminded too often and too forcibly that our thought processes tend to grow mechanical and habit-forming; that anyone who refuses to challenge these processes becomes abused, ridiculed, feared and finally hated. It is worth suffering a thousand crack-pots rather than close our ears to one true genius who calls into question our fondest beliefs.

Pigeon Pother

Windsor Star -

That thing of shreds and patches previously called a scarecrow has had a long history, but is less familiar than it used to be. Did its decline follow a suspicion that predatory birds had become too smart for it? Probably yes, as these evolutionary times bird cunning doesn't appear to have stood still, either.

Yet in its insensate way the scarecrow has evolved, too. From Arkansas comes word that a county judge plans to surround his courthouse with plastic owls to scare away pigeons. May the best man, or pigeon, win.

However, relatives and friends, of whom he has many, showered him with messages of congratulations and best wishes. Last 'Selkirk' On Display

Montreal Star

Standing inert in Windsor Station today, a wonder for small boys and a thing of lasting nostalgia for some of their elders, is perhaps the most functionally beautiful piece of machinery ever built by man.

Canadian Pacific's 4-8-4 No. 5935 is the last, were still coming out of Montreal Locomotive Works in the late 1940s, when the diesel had already numbered their days. The biggest and most powerful natives in the Commonwealth, but the cleanness of their design gave them a quality of beauty and grace.

They were christened "the Selkirks" after the mountains in which they were built to serve, and for the days of steamping up Field Hill under a canopy of steam was the epitome of power. Except for No. 5935, which is to become a museum piece, and one of her sisters which has been set up on a playground in Calgary, they have gone to the boneyard now. Something proudly and distinctively Canadian has gone with them.

To Your Good Health

Adults Can Also Be Affected by Impetigo

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes impetigo?

I know of two cases, not in the same family. One is a six-year-old child, and the other is an elderly person.

Both have sores over the body and face which at first look like burns. Then dark scabs form, and when they come off they leave ugly scars. — M. P.

You've described the disease very vividly.

Impetigo affects children more frequently than adults, but older people do have it too. It's a skin infection that can be caused by either of the common coccus germs; streptococcus or staphylococcus.

First a patch of blisters appears. Then they usually fill with pus, form a crust and keep oozing.

Since this is a problem of germs it is possible for the disease to spread to other parts of the body.

Medication to subdue the infection is necessary. In addition, the patient must be sure not to spread the germs. This means thorough washing of the hands, preferably with special soaps, as well as washing of the bedlinens, towels and other articles he uses. Boil bedlinens, towels, etc. Wash dishes in hot water and clean, because the germs can lurk there.

With proper care, the disease can be ended in reasonably short time — but preventing the spread to new parts of the body is just as important as getting the old places healed. Some cases of impetigo, called bullous type, can be very serious and even fatal.

dear Dr. Molner: A year ago, I had surgery on lymph nodes in the groin and a test of malignancy. Cancer was not involved. I have been told the enlargement may be from an infection which we have not been able to track down. What is your opinion? — Mrs. L. D.

There are lymph glands in the groin, armpits, neck, chest and elsewhere in the body.

Past or present infection is the usual cause of enlargement, although there are others, including cancer. Your test showed it a positive lack. Now you, or your mind should be at ease on that point.

After the operation has been subdued a swollen lymph gland (node) may or may not return to former size. Some enlargement may remain permanently.

If further swelling occurs, consult your doctor.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 14 and have a birthmark on my right shoulder. Can it be taken off? — E. G.

Yes. A dermatologist (skin specialist) can remove many of them. Depending on the type and size, some must be handled by a plastic surgeon.

"Don't quit Because Of Arthritis" is the title of my leaflet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write to Dr. Molner care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 136 Dundee Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope and 15 cents in coin to cover the cost of handling.

Wayzgoose Old Holiday

Hamilton Spectator

No sooner had that long and fairly recent printers' strike in New York ended than some smart writer writes about something that happened "during the late and lamentable wayzgoose . . .

Wayzgoose?

Yes, that's right — "wayzgoose."

And of course it turned out to be one of those rare and special events that comes but once — except printers — happen upon only be sheerest accident. It is defined in both English and American dictionaries. The Oxford one records that originally (about 1700) a wayzgoose was an entertainment given by a master printer to his workmen in August, marking the beginning of the season of working in candlelight.

Later, a wayzgoose came to mean an annual festivity held in the summer by employees of a printing establishment, "consisting (says the Oxford) of a dinner and usually an excursion into the country . . ." So the men and women employed in the Hamilton Spectator's modern English publishing house might set out on a wayzgoose; the Lapp might talk a poultry dance, "Do you wayzgoose?" And although the farmer might reply in a fright, "Not me, chicks," there's still a chance of confusion. Which is just what we want to avoid in our writing. So we expect a wayzgoose of our very own to hatch in just a few weeks.

Similarities

It is reported that Communist China is worried because its people and its problems are getting out of hand. It's interesting to know that their system has at least something in common with ours.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARE

Hardly a month goes by that somebody doesn't publicly bewail the absence of Canadian culture. It usually a little hard to figure out which culture they have in mind. The sociological definition of culture as "the sum total of the ways of living built up by a group of human beings whose traits are transmitted from one generation to another." Obviously we are too busy gathering waves of newcomers from diverse parts of the world to have much time for either building up or transmitting.

Another definition is a refinement of the former, resulting from education and training. The trouble there is that while one group of Canadians is busy cultivating a "refained" Oxford or Harvard accent and manners, in black leather jackets, is equally busy cultivating a back alley or beer parlor.

Assuming that the cries for culture want us to support a British, French or United States culture, considering the cultural state of those communities at the present time, it begins to look as if the critics are saying: "why don't we Canadians become cultured, like me?" And that reduces the matter to just plain confusion.

Richard A. Bird Awarded Dupont Scholarship

Word was received in this city last week that Richard A. Bird, B.Sc., who graduated in Honors Chemistry at Queen's University in 1962, has been awarded one of five Dupont Scholarships for the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Bird has spent the last year proceeding toward his Master of Science Degree and following four months' work at the Queen's Laboratory will enter the College of Education, Toronto, in September.

13-Year-Old Badly Injured By Firecrackers

Firecrackers last night put a 13-year-old boy in Belleville General Hospital. Gary Deakin, of 19 B Pringle Drive, was playing with other children last night when four strings of 20 firecrackers each went off in his pants pocket. He suffered severe burns to his left leg.

Full details of the accident are not clear, but Gary's mother, Mrs. Douglas Deakin, saw the whole thing. She said Gary had been playing with between 15 and 20 other children, lighting firecrackers and throwing them, when the ones in his pocket, somehow, were lighted.

Mrs. Deakin was inside the house, doing some washing at the time, and she watched the children through the window. "I was against them playing like that from the beginning," she said, "but you know how children are — they don't want to be left out of anything."

PANTS BADLY BURNED

Gary doesn't know just what happened. He said one firecracker had exploded by his ankle — and his ankle is burned — but his mother reports that he was holding a "sparkler" at the time. Sparks from the "sparkler" may have fallen in his pocket.

Gary, a boy scout, tried to roll on the ground when the firecrackers began to explode. Normally, in the case of a clothing fire, this would be a good practice. Not with firecrackers though — as Gary rolled, the firecrackers kept exploding and the explosions were concentrated on his leg. His pants were badly burned, and some of the burns on his leg may require skin grafts to heal them. For the present, there is a danger of infection, his mother has been told, from pieces of firecracker driven into his leg.

Two Brothers Killed West Of Bancroft

The Quinte district added two highway fatalities to the grim national toll over the Victoria Day holiday.

Killed Saturday night when two cars sideswiped on Highway 28, seven miles west of Bancroft, were Buddy Hannah, 18 and his 18-year-old brother David, both of Toronto.

The two boys were visiting grandparents in Bancroft for the weekend.

Occupants of the other car, Marston Armstrong, 17, and Gary Thompson, 16, also of Toronto, received minor injuries.

The volume of highway traffic over the holiday was one of the heaviest on record. However, with the exception of the Bancroft fatality there were no other serious accidents in the Quinte district during the three-day holiday.

Sunday, on the western outskirts of Belleville, Mrs. Carol Scarlett, 28, Agincourt, was treated for minor injuries after a three-car rear-end collision.

The car driven by Mrs. Scarlett's husband, Boyd, struck the rear of an automobile driven by Frederick LaPalm, 343½ Front Street, ramming it into the trunk of a third vehicle, driven by Ronald Warkentin, R.R. 3, Belleville.

The Warkentin and LaPalm cars had slowed as a vehicle at the head of the traffic line turned off the road.

Damage was estimated at $700.

There were few incidents on water in the Belleville area during the holiday. In a small cove south of the city's filtration plant two 15-year-old boys, William Roberts, 270 William Street, and Roger Scriven, 72 Burton Street, received a dunking when a small eight-foot boat capsized Sunday afternoon.

HAS CENTRAL CONTROL

In Tokyo, the world's largest city, all traffic is controlled from a single central headquarters.

17 Groups Represented At Convention

An East Hill High School was the focal point of a religious convention as 854 persons gathered at Meirs Secondary on Farley Avenue for a three-day Bible conference sponsored by Jehovah's Witnesses.

Representing the Watchtower Society, Canadian Branch, Mr. Laurier Saumur was in charge of the convention and the main speaker. In his feature talk "Who Will Win the Struggle for World Supremacy?", Mr. Saumur declared, "Before either East or West can gain world control, God's Kingdom is going to take the matter out of human hands and remove forever all warring factions to usher in earthwide peace".

This talk was the highlight of the semi-annual convention at which seventeen congregations were represented, including Fort Hope, Peterborough and Bancroft.

Application of Bible principles regarding human relationships was highlighted in the Saturday evening program under the title of 'Gifts in Men'. Aiding youths to guard against wrong associations, visiting and encouraging the infirm, building faith among those spiritually weak and keeping peace and unity in the family circle and community were all dealt with by demonstration of true-to-life situations enacted on the platform.

Richmond Hill Man Loses $800 From Suitcase

A Richmond Hill man yesterday claimed loss of $800 from a suitcase he said was inadvertantly left in roadside park near Glen Miller.

William Gibson, driving through the Belleville area yesterday, reported the loss to Richmond Hill police when he arrived home.

He said he had taken the suitcase from his car in a park on Highway 33 north of Highway 401. Later, he drove off, forgetting the case. Inside, was a wallet with eight $100 bills.

Ontario Provincial Police from Belleville later checked the area and found the suitcase. The wallet was missing.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MORE ON BRAZIL

Sao Paulo, Brazil: If you plan a tour through Brazil on your vacation, remember that it's all South of the Equator and be prepared to dress accordingly.

In the large cities of South Brazil, the average temperature this time of year is about 72 degrees. Fashions are similar to those worn in America, so the tourist can feel safe in packing just what he'd ordinarily wear a simple sports dress New York City.

It's fairly warm during the day, but gets quite chilly at night.

During the day, for shopping or sightseeing, a woman would wear a simple ports dress or separates, but never shorts — not even long ones. In Brazil, shorts are worn only at beach resorts. Capris are a great favorite here, but are worn only on very casual occasions — to a swimming or track meet or for relaxing at a beach or country club. They're never seen on the streets of a city like Sao Paulo — at least not in midtown.

The figure also has a lot to do with who wears Capris. Teenagers and young women with slim legs and hips are the chief exponents of this fashion. I've never seen a Brazilian woman who tends to be hippy wearing skin-tight slacks, so, if your hips have spread, leave all types of pants at home and pack only skirts and dresses.

NO HATS

For lunch, tea or informal dinners — at a Brazilian home or in a restaurant — dress is about the same as in America except that hats are very rarely worn. Brazilian women usually leave their heads uncovered, and accessorize with handsome jewelry, gloves and handbag.

In years past, a black dress was practically a uniform for dining out, or in a Brazilian home, but this custom has gone by the boards. Any color may be worn, and Brazilian women seem to favor such fashions as the overblouse, A-line and blouson which are the height of style in the United States.

For shopping or sight-seeing, a man would wear slacks and a sports shirt, but a tie and jacket are a matter of personal choice. They're worn, however at lunch and dinner in most restaurants, although there are some very informal family - style restaurants, that have no strong feelings on the matter. However, I'd recommend a tie and jacket to feel comfortable and correct.

Tomorrow: pointers on how to tip in Brazil.

Nurses' Graduating Class Congratulated and Awarded Pins, Prizes at Exercises

BY GLADYS WARD

"We are sharing with your parents and friends the joy and pride they are experiencing tonight for your accomplishment. The entire hospital family is proud and happy for your fine contribution to the hospital and to the patient," Miss D. H. Smith, Director of Nursing told the graduating class of the Belleville General Hospital at their graduation exercises on Monday evening at the Collegiate auditorium.

Looking crisp and efficient, the girls made a charming picture, each carrying a sheaf of red roses tied with red satin ribbons, as they entered the auditorium and took their places on the platform to the strains of the processional music played on the organ by Mr. D. Davenport.

The Invocation was pronounced by Rev. D. MacAvoy. With Mrs. D. Reilly directing, the school choir sang from the hymn-ary the congregation of "I'll Walk With God."

Chairman of the Board of Governors, Mr. Vanover, presided, noting in his comments that this was the largest class ever to graduate from the hospital with 44 candidates. "This is a most important day," said Mr. Vanover. "After much work we reached the conclusion of your arduous efforts. I want to express the hearty congratulations of the Board. Our prayers go with you for a long, successful and happy life."

Alderman Jack Ireland brought greetings from the city, congratulating the Board of Governors and all connected with the operation of the school of nursing for their accomplishments. The Alderman could foresee many problems ahead but assured the Board of the complete support of City Council. To the graduates Mr. Ireland said he could appreciate and understand the problems of nursing and what they had achieved. He wished them success and happiness.

CONVEY CONGRATULATIONS

Representing the Medical Staff Association, the president, Dr. L. R. Croak conveyed their congratulations for the graduates' achievements as a result of hard work, determination, study and other factors. The staff said thank you for the services performed for the members, and wished them well in any field of endeavor this occasion opened for them.

Mrs. F. Beeby, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, added the good wishes of that organization, saying that they had had more opportunity than most to see the girls come along in their training. "There are few jobs left for the personal, understanding services nurses can do. Don't let it become just another job. Keep a fresh outlook and enthusiasm," Mrs. Beeby advised the graduates.

Speaking to the class, Miss D. H. Smith told the girls how much she had enjoyed working with them. It had been a rich and rewarding experience.

"You are inheriting nursing at a time of momentous change and disruption," said Miss Smith. "It is a monumental task, with the present demands made upon us to plan for the future, and to preserve what is good from our inheritance. These things must be considered, inventory, time and being a valuable member of a profession.

"We cannot afford to succumb to boredom. We must retain a sense of wonder about each new event. However monotony can be useful. Nature constantly delights us with her conventional seasons. It can give us a blessed invigorating feeling to live in one place and know that our roots grow deep and wide. Our own hospital can engender the same feeling. But let us approach each event with a sense of something new.

ACTIONS MUST BE TIMED

"We are most conscious of time being a commodity. We can have time serve us instead of having it become our master. Our actions must be appropriately timed. A person can be secure and serene and await the time when the setting will be ready for each event.

"We require a strong positive leadership in our profession, and society. We have an obligation to be heard from, and to allow others the same privilege. We must stand up and be counted and be ready to show our colors. We need to have opinions and have sound ideas, and we must express them. But this must be done with courtesy, an attractive quality. No permanent gains were ever made with using hostility as a weapon. Your responsibilities are heavy, but we know you are capable of handling them."

Professor Isabel M. Laird, of Queen's University, gave the principal address of the evening. This was the second time Miss Laird has spoken in Belleville in a similar occasion.

"Many of you will be the first members of your family to join a professional group, and that makes you different in some ways. You graduates are going into a new kind of life.

"Our lives are like spirals. We start with trust. This is taught in the whole human growth and relationship, and starts when we are babies and trust our mothers. Then we learn a kind of selfness. The shock of discovering self is not enough, we must have initiative. You will find a place to express trust, self and initiativeness, but you must also find duty and accomplishment.

"A whole new set of lessons must be learned in adolescence. We discover a sense of identity as we grow older and are promoted. It is now a question of Who Am I? and Why Am I? With this comes a higher intimacy with those within the profession. Later we become mothers and grandmothers, and finish the seven stages to reach a sense of integration. This integration belongs of the individual as well as to the profession. There is a double spiral of personal and professional life. - You cannot withdraw from a profession. You may resign but you are still under the influence of your profession.

REMEMBER OTHER QUALITIES

"Prizes are normally given for things that we can measure, yet a girl may head her class in generosity or compassion and love. Let us remember the other qualities for which there are no awards given."

Warden of Hastings County C. G. Long introduced the speaker and also offered best wishes on behalf of County Council's Appreciation to Professor Laird was expressed by Mr. Vanover.

A vocal solo, "Climb Every Mountain," was given by Dr. H. F. Williamson.

Miss Marion Woods gave the valedictory address, recalling the days of their early training when they were told that determination was required. It was not always easy, but it was worthwhile.

"We have been counting the days to this moment," said Miss Woods. "We have had a good time as a class. During our three years we have become close to each other, and to our fellowman, and it has helped to make us more mature professional women."

Miss Woods expressed thanks to Miss Smith for her inspiring words, to the Medical staff for their guidance and assistance. The housemothers who had made them feel at home and deserved thanks. A special thanks went to the mothers and fathers for their encouragement and prayers. They hoped to live up to their parents' expectations and to try to practise faithfully, to keep the whole world well.

Gold medallist was Gloria Townson of Belleville presented by Mr. W. F. O. Deachsel; the silver medal was won by Diane Dale of Trenton, presented by Dr. L. R. Croak. Dr. Croak also gave awards for medical-surgery to Donna Bonnell, Deseronto; and Marion Woods of Tweed; Obstetrical nursing award was won by Margo Thom of Kingston; and the paediatric nursing award was given to Jean Caldwell of Frankford. Miss S. Collier presented the Head nurse award to Carol Weaver of Trenton.

PRESENT DIPLOMAS

Miss D. H. Smith, Mrs. M. Hookings and Miss M. Kilpatrick made a presentation of the diplomas to each of the 34 graduates. Relatives and friends were busy with cameras and lights to capture this on film, making an indoor display of popping bulbs that almost rivalled the Victoria Day celebration outdoors.

After the graduation exercises, a reception was held at Education Hall for the graduates and their relatives, the Board of Governors and other guests.

Welland Will Have Entry In Air Race

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — The All Women's International Air Race, a 1,470-mile jaunt from here to Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Fla., starting May 28, will have at least a Canadian entry—Mrs. Dorothy Rungeling, as executive member of the Welland Flying Club.

Twenty - seven teams, each with pilot and co-pilot, are representing 14 states as well as Canada will take part in the race. Flying experience ranges from a co-pilot with 40 hours to a veteran with more than 14,000 hours.

Planes entered range from one with a handicap of 110 miles an hour to one at 170 m.p.h. Each plane is handicapped at the speed the particular model should do at 75 per cent power. The pilot who betters her handicap by the most is declared the winner. Prizes and trophies amount to $2,500. Time clocks will be used on designated airports along the route and these will be punched on landing and take-off, only time in the air counting.

Mrs. Rungeling has taken part in the race three times before, placing second in 1955, fourth in 1956. She has been flying since 1946 and in 1951 obtained an airline transport rating, at that time the only woman in Canada to have done so. On three occasions the starting point for the race has been Welland and once it was the finishing point.

The Flowers That Bloom

by Mary Moore

Everything turned out just right.

Gerny and Joe phoned Wednesday to say they would arrive Sunday. The white lyacinths were in full bloom but I had planned some red tulips behind them with the fond hope they would bloom together. Sunday morning when I looked out there they were with their sleek and shiny red petals opening up behind the white hyacinths ready to say "Welcome" to Gerny the flower lover.

I add to that Joe's command to have Pete at my house for dinner when they arrived and the fact that it was Pete and Marg's second wedding anniversary. Add to that a request from a reader for a daffodil cake. So Mary got busy.

You will remember that I gave you the recipe here for Daffodil Cake in the early Fall of last year, but because it was very popular with our readers, and because by guests enjoyed the way I frosted it I am yielding to their request and repeating it. It is an easy cake to make too.

PARTY DAFFODIL CAKE

1¼ cups sifted cake flour; 1¼ cups sifted sugar; 1¼ cups egg whites (about 9 large - room temperature); ¾ teaspoon salt; 1½ teaspoons cream of tartar; ½ teaspoon vanilla 4 egg yolks; 1 teaspoon grated orange rind; 2 tablespoons orange juice or fresh frozen orange juice concentrate; 2 tablespoons sugar.

Add ½ cup of the sugar to the sifted flour and sift together three times; combine egg whites, salt, cream of tartar, and vanilla in large bowl. Beat with electric mixer, fork, or at high speed of electric mixer until the whites are stiff enough to hold up in soft peaks, but are still moist and glossy Add the remaining sugar by 4 additions by sprinkling 4 tablespoons at a time over egg whites and beating until very stiff. When beating by hand, beat 25 strokes after each addition of sugar. If beating with electric beater remove from beater now. Sift about ¼ of the flour mixture over the egg white; fold in with 15 fold over strokes, turning bowl often. In this same way, fold in the remaining flour mixture in. 3 more additions. After addition, use 10 to 20 extra strokes. Without washing beater, in another bowl beat yolks, rind, juice, and 2 tablespoons of sugar until thick and light. Now fold into it ⅓ of the white cake batter with 15 strokes. Turn white and yellow batters into ungreased 10" tube pan, alternating white and yellow mixtures for a marbled effect. Finish entire top with white batter. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 35 to 45 minutes. Invert pan for 1 hour to cool, then loosen from sides and centre tube with knife and gently pull out cake.

LEMON FROSTING

One-quarter cup butter or margarine, 2¼ cups sifted icing sugar, 4 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons milk or cream (approx.) and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind (optional). Mix all together until of soft spreading consistency. Cover sides of cake only. Now hold cake firmly between both palms and roll it like a wheel in finely chopped blanched or toasted almonds or cashews to completely coat sides. Place on serving cake plate. Frost top. If desired, reserve about ¾ cup of frosting and tint it bright yellow. Force this through icing tube, writing "Happy Birthday" or "Happy Anniversary" on top. Ten minutes before dinner was served, I slipped out to the garden and picked seven of my most precious daffodils - (perfumed with shallow orange fringed cups) and made a border of them around the base of the cake. It was a thing of beauty and I hope will be remembered all their lives.

Note: Later on yellow roses, nasturtiums, marigolds and mums are equally effective as cake decorations.

ties which indicate that the planners and the bureaucrats know best," he said. The throne speech could also be noted for its lack of policy.

"The speech from the throne indicates that today a new kind of philosophic and theoretical planning has become the essential program of the Liberal party, the theme being that the government knows best."

Mr. Diefenbaker said that if one or two of Mr. Pearson's ministers had their way, this planning would put control in the hands of a few individuals who—unless prevented by legislation—would turn the federal government into a "bureaucratic autocracy."

Replying later, Mr. Pearson said the Conservative leader gives no indication of understanding that Canada has a 20th-century economy, in a scientific age.

Mr. Pearson said that if the economy is to move ahead to take care of the work force, industry must have freedom and also should have "co-operative assistance" from government even when that means government intervention.

Said Mr. Diefenbaker: "We left the Canadian House in good economic order."

GAINS SMALLER

Mr. Pearson retorted that in six years of Conservative administration the gross national product advanced 18 per cent, whereas in the previous six years — under Liberal government—the rise was 36 per cent. Unemployment had averaged 413,000 as against 177,000 under the Liberals in the same six-year comparison.

"The basic truth about our economy today is that we must run very fast in production or else we will slip behind in employment," Mr. Pearson said. The economic policy of the Liberal government was aimed for this expansion.

However, he said that if the expansion is to be big enough so people can be put to work, the GNP increase may have to go "beyond that which we have had even in our good days; and it will certainly require a much greater increase in expansion than we have had on the average in the last six years."

SLAPS PRESIDENT

The spat over Canada-U.S. relations began when Mr. Diefenbaker, leading off the debate, took a verbal slap at President Kennedy's New Frontier and said the cornerstone of the Progressive Conservative party has been the maintenance of "a free and independent Canada."

"I have no apologies to offer now or in the years ahead for that stand which will be proven right," he said, obviously referring to the pre-election tangle his government had with Washington over defence policy.

At another point, Mr. Diefenbaker said that in 1961 the U.S. "pressed — some interpreted it as pushed"—Canada to join the Organization of American States. Mr. Pearson had spoken of the desirability of this in the past. What did he intend to do now about OAS?

The prime minister replied that Mr. Kennedy exerted no "pressure" on this or any other matter at their recent Hyannis Port meeting. Mr. Pearson suggested Canada will hold off joining OAS until the organization clarifies its own membership qualifications in view of a proliferation of new states, especially in the Caribbean.

SHARKS KILL 22

ples without which they cannot be brought into effect."

The divergence of views followed tabling by Mr. Pearson of a letter to the premiers containing proposed terms of reference for the royal commission on bicuituralism.

The Pearson proposal includes asking the provinces to consult with the proposed commission on ways to enable Canadians to become bilingual. It assured them the terms of reference are simply proposals, not binding on the provinces and, if accepted, wouldn't commit the provinces to any recommendations made after the study.

The basic aim of the study would be to find how to develop Confederation on the basis of equal partnership between French and English "taking into account the contribution made by the other ethnic groups."

In addition, the commission would inquire into:

1. Bilingual practice in federal agencies, including crown corporations, in dealings with the public and make recommendations to ensure bilingual and bicultural federal administration.

2. The role—and ways of improving it—of public and private cultural organizations, including mass communications media, in promoting bilingualism, better cultural relations and more widespread appreciation of Canada's bicultural character.

Marcel Chaput Attacks Lesage At Meeting

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Chaput, leader of the separatist Quebec Republican Party, described Premier Lesage as a "collaborationist" at a public meeting Monday night.

Instead of helping French Canada free itself from foreign domination, Mr. Chaput said, the premier "preferred to play the role of collaborationist, going to assure England of the eternal submission of his compatriots."

"While Mr. Lesage was bowing and scraping before Elizabeth II, Mr. (Attorney-General) Georges - Emile Lapalme accused me of making a criminal statement and tried to hold me responsible for the explosion of bombs in Quebec."

The separatist leader was referring to a statement by Mr. Lapalme in the legislature last Thursday.

He appealed to terrorists to stop the wave of bombings which have caused the death of one Montreal man and critically injured another. Democratic means were the only path to independence for Quebec province.

Quebec

scious today.

The bombings, which took the life of an elderly watchman April 20, are blamed on Le Front de Liberation Quebecois, a group seeking Quebec's independence from Canada by violence.

CRANKS BUSY

Complicating police work was the Victoria Day holiday weekend, 15 to 20 crank calls a day reporting bomb scares, and such things as the distribution of the dynamite sticks in Quebec City.

It was not known if the Quebec action was really carried out by the FLQ—each stick bore a small tag marked FLQ, but none had fuses or detonators and police said they thought the sticks were planted as a prank.

The armory blast on north-central St. Gregoire Street Monday reduced one car to wreckage, severely damaged three others, and pitched chunks of wreckage more than 50 yards. No one was hurt.

Premier Lesage, in calling the meeting, said he had the impression during his recent European trip that foreign countries were worried about the bombings.

He feared foreign investment in Quebec would be affected.

Ann Landers

Boss Dresses Coolly Doesn't Wear Undershirt

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — If a woman arrives at her job in an office without an undershirt she is considered a cheap trollop. Yet a great many men, who are otherwise impeccably dressed, come to work without undershirts. Isn't this exactly the same thing?

My boss is a man in his 40's. He is handsome, a smart dresser and has excellent taste—in all areas except this one. The first thing he does when he comes to the office is shed his suit coat. There he sits, greeting important people from all over the world, both men and women — with no undershirt. To make matters worse, he wears expensive white silk shirts that you can see right through.

I've mentioned this to a few colleagues and they look at me as if I have lost my marbles. What is your opinion? — POOR BUT REFINED.

* * *

DEAR P. BUT R. — Most men's shirts are made of oxford cloth or cotton. These fabrics are not transparents, so from an esthetic point of view an undershirt is not essential.

Silk shirts, however, call for an undershirt. And if your boss does not know it let's hope he reads this and takes the hint.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Many organizations are interested in the blind, and other handicapped groups, but few people are interested in the deaf. Perhaps it is because deaf people do not use crutches or have dogs to lead them. They look like everyone else.

I was saddened by a recent column in which a reader wrote, "Many states have no laws to protect the public against crippled, half-blind, senile, and deaf drivers." Obviously, the writer has no understanding of deaf drivers.

You may be interested to know that the U.S. government spent many thousands of dollars in February 1962, to gather outstanding authorities in the field of education, social welfare and religion for the purpose of examining the status of deaf drivers. Safety experts as well as representatives of insurance companies were invited.

It was established that the accident rate for deaf drivers is lower than the accident rate for drivers with hearing. Deaf drivers are more careful because they realize they must be especially alert. They must see what they cannot hear.

I hope you will print this and set the record straight. — REV. T.F.C. — INTERNATIONAL CATHOLIC DEAF ASSOCIATION.

DEAR FATHER — Thank you for writing. I am delighted to set the record straight.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Ours was a "must marriage." But my husband and I are deeply in love and it has made no difference in our feelings for each other. We had planned to be married in May, but when I learned I was pregnant we changed the date to February. The baby was born seven and a half months after we were married.

Our daughter is now three weeks old. What will I tell her when she is old enough to ask questions? I would hate for her to feel she was not wanted or that we had to hurry and marry because she was on the way.

Please tell me how to handle this question when it comes up. It has been on my mind for several months. — WORRIED AND UPSET.

* * *

DEAR W. AND U. — Everyday I get at least one letter from someone who asks this question. I will tell you what I have told others. By the time your daughter is old enough to talk the calendar will be forgotten. That is unless you bring it up, which I hope you will not.

Celebrate your wedding anniversary any time you want to. It's strictly your own business.

Victoria Day

Northern Ontario had an unexpected snowstorm.

Skies were cloudy over most of Ontario. Weather in the Maritimes was fine but Manitoba suffered through 50-mile-an-hour winds and snow.

In most major cities, 21-gun salutes commemorated the birthdays of Queen Victoria and Queen Elizabeth, official reason for the observance.

Saint John, N.B. observed the 180th anniversary of the founding of the city by the United Empire Loyalists.

At Toronto's Greenwood race track the third largest crowd in history set a wagering record for the 30-year-old course. The crowd of 34,213 bet $1,607,176 on eight races.

In Ottawa, thousands gathered for the annual tulip festival.

Justice

scheme is being illegally operated in violation of a specific order of former Labor Minister Michael Starr—with the acquiescence of some Canadian shipowners.

4. The SIU's welfare plan is actuarially unsound and in danger of going bankrupt, with benefit payments used as a device to maintain control of union members.

MEMBERS TERRORIZED

5. Members of the SIU have been terrorized, intimidated and brainwashed into submitting to the will of their leaders.

6. Some shipowners have abdicated their responsibilities to their employees and abandoned certain managerial rights to the union, largely through fear of union-inspired tie-ups of their ships.

7. There has been a lack of co-operation among police enforcement agencies at municipal, provincial and federal levels, resulting in a lack of protection for ordinary citizens.

To remedy these problems, Mr. Justice Norris is expected to recommend direct government involvement in industrial affairs in the shipping industry.

There is speculation that he will propose a three-member trusteeship to administer and supervise the affairs of the SIU, with labor, government and the shipowners each appointing a representative.

Coupled with this would be a specific plan to place under federal supervision the rotary hiring hall system through which sailors get jobs through the SIU. The judge may also advocate stricter federal controls over the minimum size of a ship's crew and over the contractual relationship between a master of a ship and the individual members of his crew.

Veterans' Affairs Minister Descendant of Louis Riel

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—An air force veteran who was a prisoner of war and later worked for the veterans affairs department has become Canada's minister of veterans affairs.

Roger Teillet, 50, is a man who likes to get things done, and his flair for politics comes by inheritance through the mainstreams of history in Canada and France.

A grand-nephew of Louis Riel, Mr. Teillet says he finds his new post "a bit awesome" after less than a year as a member of Parliament.

But he has a background of six years in the Manitoba legislature and as a member of a Manitoba separate school board, and he was "pretty well brought up on political discussions." His professional experience is as an insurance agent and public relations director.

He was born in the Greater Winnipeg area — in St. Vital, across the street from the old Riel home which members of his family still own.

ARE HARDY GROUP

The first French-Canadian cabinet minister from Manitoba, Mr. Teillet is MP for St. Boniface, a predominantly French-speaking area across the Red River from Winnipeg.

"The survival of the French-Canadians in Western Canada has demonstrated the hardiness of the group," he said in an interview.

"They are pretty well drowned-out there; they are a relatively small percentage of the population. The fact they have maintained their culture through the years speaks very highly for the group.

"I think there is a desire and a determination to retain the French culture in Western Canada, but to say I was appointed because I was a French-Canadian, I think, would be wrong. I am quite certain the consideration was the representation of Manitoba."

How did he get into politics? The stocky, square-shouldered minister said politics has been his pastime since the war, during which he spent three years in a war prisoner camp in Germany where he had a chance to study political economy.

LINK WITH RIEL

His maternal grandfather was a brother of Louis Riel, the prairie rebel by patriot — depending on the point of view — who was hanged Nov. 16, 1885, for defying Ottawa's authority in the Red River area.

"Louis himself, of course, I never had an opportunity to know, but I remember my grandfather quite well, and I knew the whole Riel family. The old home on River Road in St. Vital—my mother's home—will be 100 years old next year, and I have an aunt still living there.

"We were very much a political family. My father came from Vende, on the west coast of France, to St. Vital in 1904 as a young man.

"Back in the days of the French revolution, they were royalists to the core there around Vende. It's rather odd because I suspect my father was quite a bit of a rebel himself. That's probably why he fitted in so well with the clan when he arrived in Manitoba.

"My father took a very active interest in the history of Western Canada and the story of Louis Riel, and a very active interest in the politics of the province. I think we were pretty well brought up on political discussions."

WAS SHOT DOWN

Mr. Teillet joined the air force on his 27th birthday, Aug. 21, 1939, and like some other Canadians was attached to the Royal Air Force bomber command, as a member of the Pathfinder Group. He was shot down over Europe on the night of Aug. 23-24, 1942.

In the prison camp there were opportunities to study through the University of Zurich, the London School of Economics, the Royal Society of Arts, and the Canadian Legion.

"I never did get my final examinations, though," said the craggy-faced minister, drawing deep on a cigar.

When he was released he returned to Manitoba and took the first job he could get, in the Veterans Land Act administration of the department he now heads, "to give me a chance to orient myself." He stayed with VLA for 10 or 11 months, "and then I realized that was not the kind of thing I felt suited to."

He returned to his pre-war business of selling insurance, set up his own agency, sold it and established a public relations agency. In 1953 he entered the Manitoba legislature, sitting first on the government side for five years and then on the opposition benches for one year.

ACTIVE MEMBER

In the legislature, as in the Commons here, Mr. Teillet took a keen interest in committee work. He was instrumental in having the metis and Indian problem studied by a royal commission.

In Ottawa, he has been more than usually faithful in his Commons attendance.

"In order to really know the course of business in the House, it's essential to follow the House pretty closely."

When he first entered the Commons last year Mr. Teillet was the only Liberal elected among Manitoba's 14 members. In this year's election he was one of two Liberals elected from the province.

"It was difficult enough last year just being the one in the party in the opposition, when everything from all over Manitoba had to go across my desk, and it did keep me quite busy. I'm not complaining about that; I rather enjoyed it."

He hopes to bring his wife Jeanne and two sons Philippe and Richard to live in Ottawa as soon as the school year ends.

Workers' Wives Protest Moving Of Silver Plant

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) A group of employees' wives made a last-ditch bid Friday to prevent International Silver Company from transferring its plant next month to Perth, in eastern Ontario.

Forty-nine of the wives bypassed local officials and wrote to President R. J. Munson of the International Silver Company in Meriden, Conn., asking him to send a representative to "see this serious situation as it really is."

The company plans to close its Niagara Falls plant June 15, taking only key personnel from the plant's 180 employees to the new location.

HIGH SCHOOL—and focus of local controversy in Deseronto where divided opinion centres on claims that school should close and pupils sent to Napanee.

Deseronto School Board, which has split 4-3 against the shutdown meets Wednesday night with town council to discuss the issue.

Question to Keep Deseronto High School Open Will Be Discussed at Closed Meet

DESERONTO (Staff — Local councillors will go into study session with school trustees here Wednesday night on issues that threaten to eliminate this town's centre of senior school study.

The meeting, described as "a closed session" will discuss charges that is no longer feasible to operate Deseronto High School. Instead, it is claimed, it would be more profitable—for both pupils and taxpayers —to send the school's 170 pupils to Napanee District Secondary School, six miles east of here.

The controversy — if representative opinion on the Deseronto School Board is a fair indication — may almost have divided parents of secondary school-age children.

The school board has been marginally divided on demands for closing the school, having registered a 4-3 vote in favor of keeping it open. Proponents of the closedown claim their children can take advantage of a wider curriculum at Napanee, where commercial and technical courses are offered. This town's high school has only a strictly academic curriculum.

There is also another claim in favor of the move — money.

100 PRESENT

At a recent public meeting of the board — more than 100 parents were present — R. W. Frosts, newly-appointed assistant superintendent of secondary school education said it cost $36,000 yearly to operate Deseronto High School. Cost of joining Napanee school district would be an annual $20,000.

Besides, the school building itself, it has six classrooms, has been labelled "dilapidated" and in need of repairs. (A legend over its doorways sets its establishment as 1889.) Mr. Frosts also said he did not think the present facilities large enough to accommodate an estimated 57 pupils moving up from public school next fall.

However, not all secondary school pupils in the town are attending the school.

School board chairman John R. Neal said last night that about 30 Deseronto students currently are going to Bellville and Napanee for education.

This number, added to the natural increase expected next term could "make a big difference" in the school's future if added to its registration, he said.

He did not elaborate further, save to add this would be among issues discussed at tomorrow night's meeting.

Cooper Tells How He Guided Space Capsule by Manual Control Into Pacific Ocean

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Astronaut Gordon Cooper said he tried at first to be indifferent to a green light that flashed on in his Faith 7 capsule, signalling trouble with his re-entry guidance system during his 22-orbit mission.

"I saw the light and go on and thought maybe at first I'd just ignore it," the astronaut told a press conference Sunday. But he decided not to be too optimistic since the green light indicated—erroneously as it turned out—that he might be coming out of orbit prematurely.

"I was afraid it wouldn't go away," he said.

The light was the first sign of trouble with his automatic pilot. But he succeeded in guiding the capsule by manual control into the Pacific Thursday, about five miles from the aircraft carrier Kearsarge.

He pinned down the source of "fireflies" that previous astronauts had seen around their spacecraft in orbit.

They come from hydrogen peroxide jets that control the spacecraft's position, apparently small leftovers of discharged water frozen in space.

SEES GAIN

Asked if he thought his flight completed "Project Mercury," Cooper replied that it was his personal opinion that great gain would result from another extended Mercury flight.

But Dr. Robert C. Seamans, associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said it is unlikely another Mercury manned mission will be conducted.

In his Oklahoma drawl, the 36-year-old Cooper told, orbit by orbit, how he performed his various experiments, made photographs of celestial phenomena and also, much as any other sightseer, presented, with a spectacular view, took snapshots of the magnificent Himalayas.

He saw the heart of Red China. He nearly saw his own home, hidden by trees, in Houston, Tex.

VERY CLEAR

In India, he said, "I noted that I saw individual roads and rivers . . . and then I saw some little villages, individual villages, and I noted that where the houses were scattered out I could see individual houses.

"I saw also at about this point some trucks on a road and not too long after that a train with smoke coming out of it, going down a track . . .

"In another area I saw a boat going down a river creating a wake behind it."

He had no difficulty sleeping in space, save one. He awoke once to find his arms in weightlessness hanging in the cockpit in front of him.

"It is rather distracting" he said, especially with critical work ahead in front of him. Thereafter he tucked his hands in straps so they wouldn't wave about when he slept.

UNVEIL HISTORIC PLAQUE — The Hon. W. M. Nickle, MPP for Kingston and the Islands, pulls the cord to officially unveil a provincial government plaque commemorating the founding of Queen's University in 1841, during a noon ceremony on the campus, Saturday. The ceremony, attended by representatives of the City of Kingston, the Ontario Archaeological and Historic Sites Board, and the University, took place immediately following a Saturday morning convocation for applied science graduates. The plaque, situated to the south of Grant Hall, traces the early beginnings of Queen's to its emergence as one of Canada's leading universities.

Informed Sources Say RCAF Tried to Force Hand of Diefenbaker on Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Informed sources say the Royal Canadian Air Force "forced" its air division in Europe with CF-104 nuclear carrier planes in an attempt to force former prime minister Diefenbaker's hand on the nuclear warheads issue.

The RCAF had earlier confirmed that it shipped the first CF-104 from its RCAF bombers to Europe before they were fully combat-ready and that the planes required some modifications on arrival at Zwelbruecken, West Germany.

A British team has carried out the modifications at the West German base. The only official RCAF explanation for the modifications, however, was that the technical changes are made more cheaply in Europe as in Canada.

Competent sources now say the reason behind early shipment of the CF-104s to Europe was that the government wanted planes on their European bases supposedly as a point up for the Conservative government's lack of decision on acceptance of nuclear warheads for the bomber.

A reporter who visited Zwelbruecken in late February found many of the delivered CF-104s pulled apart on hangar floors awaiting modifications and was told that the planes would not be combat-ready until summer.

FLAGS AT HALF-MAST

Mr. Diefenbaker said Jan. 25 that the Anglo-American pact of 1958 had placed in doubt the bombing role of the air division and that Canada would take no decision on the matter at the NATO council meeting here May 22-24. His government fell Feb. 5.

Prime Minister Pearson has said that his government will fight its election campaign pledge to accept nuclear warheads for the CF-104, Bomarc anti-aircraft missile and the 40-ton jet interceptor.

The CF-104 will carry a nuclear bomb of up to 60 kilotons, three times more powerful than the 1945 Hiroshima bomb.

NATO informants say the air division will be the fourth big, fully-equipped force in Europe until completion of the West German nuclear arm in late 1964.

They also say the CF-104 has been stripped down to get maximum range but that it still would not be able to carry a nuclear bomb to Russia.

Sudbury Man New President Of Jaycees

KITCHENER (CP) — Ernest Checkeris, 36, a lumber merchant from Sudbury, was elected president of the Ontario Junior Chamber of Commerce during the organization's annual convention here Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Checkeris, a former president of the Jaycees' Sudbury unit, is Canadian chairman for education and youth activities.

More than 400 delegates approved the Ville Jaycees as an alternate to the langthier designation.

The delegates also approved suggestions that Canada Day programs be sponsored throughout Ontario, that a boy-Canadian program be implemented, and that driver education be promoted in the province's secondary schools.

The Hamilton unit was judged the province's outstanding group and Chatham was selected second.

Donald Suchla of Fort William was endorsed as candidate for national Jaycee president in elections to be held in Halifax in June.

At a dinner Sunday, a speaking trophy, donated by the St. Catharines unit, was awarded to Norman Zaitz of Brantford. Crawford Reid of Brantford received an award for outstanding district president.

Mr. Reid was elected a vice-president and John Bannikoff of Chatham, elected secretary-treasurer.

ELECTION FORECAST

LONDON (Reuters)—The independent right-wing Daily Express says Prime Minister Macmillan plans a cabinet shuffle during the next few weeks and a general election in October.

"Too many complacent businessmen still not realizing how competitive Canadian products are or what advantage they have in export markets."

Macaulay Says Producers Scared About Selling Abroad

LONDON (CP) — Economics Minister Robert Macaulay of Ontario said Monday that manufacturers in his province have a "built-in, carefully nurtured inferiority complex."

Speaking at a reception for Ontario's third trade mission to Britain this year, Macaulay said most producers remained dubious about selling abroad even after winning some export orders.

The economics minister plans to inspect provincial offices in Milan, Italy, and Dusseldorf, West Germany, and tour British atomic energy stations during his two-month visit.

He said there is a possibility a large Italian chemical company may open a plant in Ontario in the near future. The company is looking for a site somewhere in North America and is "interested" in Sarnia or Brockville.

PRODUCED MILLIONS

The current 13-member mission is the 12th in a series launched last fall. Such missions have produced some $25,000,000 worth of orders in the last six months.

Macaulay said one of the best prospects of the crusade is the possibility of selling Canadian manufacturing ideas and know how to British firms under licence with capital supplied from Canada. More than 2,000 British distributors and manufacturers were seeking information along these lines.

"But we are not getting enough serious enquiries from Ontario businessmen to match these British enquiries," he said.

The picture was familiar:

Speaker Gives All Rulings in French, English

OTTAWA (CP) — Harold Winch, New Democratic Party member for Vancouver East, objected in the Commons Monday to a practice by Speaker Alan Macnaughton of repeating his remarks and rulings in French and English.

Mr. Winch asked Prime Minister Pearson whether he would consider discussing the matter with the Speaker in view of Mr. Pearson's desire to "speed up the operations of this House," and since every word spoken in the Commons is translated simultaneously.

Mr. Pearson said he would be glad to consult with the Speaker any time he wished.

The Speaker, who cannot answer questions from the floor of the House, did not comment but he had the final word.

As soon as the prime minister sat down, he intoned, "Orders of the day; ordres du jour."

WINS SAXONY ELECTION

HANNOVER, West Germany (AP) — Social Democrats and Christian Democrats turned out the big winners in elections Sunday for a new parliament of Lower Saxony, West Germany's second largest state. Final returns gave the Social Democrats 1,598,978 votes—44.9 per cent of the valid votes. The Christian Democrats received 37.7 per cent, a total of 1,351,401 votes.

FRANCE NEEDS SOOTHING

The no-name agreement, said to have been reached after months of negotiating among London, Washington and Paris, may help to mollify French objections that could further jeopardize President de Gaulle's insistence on an independent French deterrent.

Basically, what may emerge from the three-day NATO ministerial meeting starting Wednesday is a multi-lateral, multi-national, compromise agreement, to set up a bomber-and-submarine force with a NATO command and targeting system. The wider American proposal for a Polaris missile-carrying surface fleet manned by crews of five nationalities may be shelved temporarily.

Other informants that may come up at Ottawa include the British proposal for a new "forward strategy," involving a defence line based on the Iron Curtain drought; West German objections to proposed British sales of steel tubes to Communist countries; the size of the stockpile needed under plans for resisting an enemy land attack without using major nuclear weapons.

NATO's New Nuclear Baby May Not Have a Name

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NATO's new nuclear baby may come into the world without the benefit of a christening ceremony.

The 15 not-so-fond parents, assembling in Ottawa for their annual spring get-together, appear to have decided that their wayward child can do without a name.

At least no one can blame them for not having tried. As soon as the inevitability of a new nuclear force for NATO became apparent, the planners canvassed every conceivable adjective in the atomic Thesaurus.

They tried inter-allied, multi-national, multilateral, integrated, co-ordinated, mixed-manned or even mix-master, supranational and so on.

But none of the names satisfied all the founding fathers. And the suggestion now is that the Ottawa meeting should merely signify that the force is being created and let it go at that.

Sir David Ormsby Gore U.K. Ambassador to U.S., Intimate Friend of Kennedy

Their friendship and companionship is rare and near-unprecedented in Washington.

The leap man, at 44 a year younger than the president, has a high forehead, long arrey-black hair, and a sharp nose. He is Sir David Ormsby Gore, a friend of John F. Kennedy from younger, more carefree days.

He is a politician. He is the heir of a nobleman. And he is the British ambassador to the United States.

Traditionally a British ambassador should be a career diplomat, advanced in years, prime and proper in his dealings with the chief of state.

No one doubts that the British government counted up all the pluses and minuses of its candidate for ambassador to the Kennedy administration. The minus of Ormsby Gore's youth and inexperience was easily blotted out by the plus of his friendship with Kennedy.

HAS PRESIDENT'S EAR

No other ambassador has the ear and friendship of Kennedy that Ormsby Gore does. History has to hunt back to the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt to find a relationship remotely similar.

When he became president, Kennedy had no use for the then British ambassador, rushed a letter to his boyhood friend, British diplomat Cecil Spring Rice.

"Dear Springy," Roosevelt wrote, ". . . . I'm in a hell of a fix and you would come over." The young foreign office quickly dispatched Rice to Washington, though not as ambassador.

The unusual closeness today between the British ambassador and the U.S. president has brought Drew Pearson's Washington Daily Express, said Ormsby Gore is too friendly with Kennedy to represent adequately the best interests of the British government.

Ormsby Gore denies his friendship with the president has hurt him as a poor ambassador for British. He says it may have made him a better one.

FRIENDSHIP HELPS

"That of course is not for me to say," he replied when asked about the matter in a recent interview. "But I believe Lord Home (the British foreign secretary) would say that the friendship has helped."

"My diplomatic contacts have been mostly with the state department. The official times I have met the president have been comparatively few, although I do bring up an official matter from time to time on social occasions.

"But we have no difficulty at all in differentiating my role as representative and as friend. I simply say 'the ambassador has asked me to say' and the business flows immediately that I am taking up official business. This is no problem at all."

Ormsby Gore's closeness with Kennedy evidently generates no discernable friction at the White House or the British Embassy. Embassy aides may tell you the closeness certainly hasn't hurt them. And White House aides call Ormsby Gore "our kind of ambassador."

Ormsby Gore first met Kennedy at the London house of the Kennedys in 1938 when the president's father, Joseph P. Kennedy, was U.S. ambassador to Britain. Ormsby Gore was 20 and a student at Oxford then, and Kennedy was 21 and a student at the London School of Economics.

SISTER WED COUSIN

Actually Ormsby Gore was closer to Kennedy's brother, Joseph Jr., and their sister, Kathleen, who married Lord Hartington, a cousin of Ormsby Gore. Ormsby Gore himself married Kathleen's best friend, Sylvia Lloyd Thomas, two years later.

"We were all contemporaries," Ormsby Gore recalls, "and met at the same dances and house parties."

These early friendships and relationships were wrenched by cruel deaths. Both Lord Hartington and Joseph Jr. were killed in the Second World War. Kathleen died in an airplane crash after the war.

But John Kennedy and Ormsby Gore never lost touch.

"They find each other companenial, both socially and intellectually," says a British reporter who knows them both. "They are both politicians. The president likes to know what is going on in politics. Ormsby Gore can give him this information, unlike other ambassadors who are not politicians. Ormsby Gore is old aristocracy and Kennedy likes old aristocracy."

GREW WITH POLITICS

Politics engulfed Ormsby Gore as he grew up. His father, Lord Harlech, served in Parliament for 28 years.

After education at Oxford, service with the armed forces during the Second World War, training in shorthand at a business school, a stint at managing 400 acres of the family estate in Shropshire, Ormsby Gore was elected in 1950 as a Conservative party member of the House of Commons for Oswestry.

Once in Parliament, Ormsby Gore quickly rose to the post of parliamentary private secretary in the foreign ministry and, by 1961, when he gave up his seat to take the post of ambassador, he was serving as British minister of state for foreign affairs, equivalent to the No. 3 post in the foreign ministry.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Moira Secondary School's powerful team of track and field athletes wore the COSSA laurel wreath at Trenton but—no pun intended—they didn't take it in a romp or gallop. A hard-driving Lindsay Collegiate team, pushed by last year's champions, Trenton High School, drove the winner to the wire but missed by a four point margin.

Belleville Collegiate Institute finished in fifth place with 36 points, but the school came up with an individual star who stole the limire from the top boy athletes from the 38 participating schools.

Only a small bevy of schoolmates cheered while the crowd of athletes stood in what seemed to me a rather shocked silence as 17-year-old Sheryl Drysdale mounted the winner's pedestal four consecutive times to receive the ribboned honors of a four-time champion.

The pretty BCI senior student broke three records and assisted in another. She won the 60 yards (7.7), 100 yards (12.1), the standing broad jump (seven feet six inches) and led her relay team to victory in the 440 relay (56.5.)

No announcement of Sheryl's performance was announced because her records had not been tabulated up to that time.

As she went "up" for the fourth time, a husky Lindsay Collegiate athlete standing near me, muttered, "Holy mackerel, did she win everything!"

While Sheryl won more "firsts" than any athlete, boy or girl, at the meet, a team-mate, Miss Heather Orr also came up with a highly creditable performance. Heather took two seconds and a first, and with the Misses Carol Grey and Judy Ingram helped her school win the record relay race. BCI should be proud of them.

BASEBALL

It was more football than baseball weather but the Kenmore and Oshawa came up with an eye-opening Kenhelen League debut yesterday with an eleven-inning thriller that was anybody's battle until Duffy Fellwell poled a towering smash to deep left field that overcame a 3-3 Oshawa lead and gave the Kenmore a 4-3 victory.

It was a 25-bit affair with nine of the clouts coming in the eleventh inning when both teams went all out to snatch the victory. Good Kenmor defensive work held the Oshawans to four hits (two doubles) to one run in the frame. Larry Mavety's opening triple started the Kenmors' hit spree. They followed with two singles, good for the tying run, then with one out Ricky Locke loaded the sacks and Duffy's game-winning blast followed.

It was good baseball for an opening tilt and the Oshawa third sacker Whitely caught my eye. This lad is a natural glove man who can throw strikes anywhere and his three singles smashes didn't hurt the cause any.

The clubs were evenly matched and errors were negligible. The brand of baseball exhibited and Oshawa and Belleville proved yesterday neither will be a pushover for the other. Looks like baseball fans are in for an excellent season.

SOFTBALL

The Belleville District Softball League came up with its introductory offer at the CNRA Park last night and the fans, despite the anything-but-spring weather liked what they saw. It wasn't, perhaps softball at its peak, but it gave evidence that some topflight pastiming is in the making.

The RCAF under new management went home with the victory leaving Trudeaus on the short end of an 8-6 score. The Motormen did not start their newly-acquired hurler Roly Campbell, the former Cobourg "iron man" but they sent him in later to try and pull the win out of the fire. He will likely go against Gerry Joyce's crew tonight in the second title of the season.

Speaking of softball, optimistic stories came out of Kingston and Cobourg over the "formation of the new Central Ontario Softball League." I fail to see where some there or four teams will agree to play home-and-home games in a catch-as-catch-can "schedule" can come under the leading of "league" in an "organizational sense.

Peterborough, Oshawa and Belleville did not enter this "loop" despite stories to the contrary. True, the foundation of a COSL has been laid but until a full executive is made, definite entries assured and a proper schedule drawn, I fail to see where any other action can be anything but that of an exhibitional nature.

Ever Hear of a "DIURETIC"?

Maybe not. But you should know what a "diuretic" is. There may be times when you should use one. Too likely understand how important the kidneys are in maintaining good health. Also that if the kidneys fail to function properly excess acids and waste material remain in the system. This may result in unpleasant urinary irritation and bladder discomfort, often followed by backache, tired feeling and disturbed rest.

This is when the diuretic service of Doan's Kidney Pills may be helpful. Doan's act as a diuretic stimulant to help restore normal kidney action, and so relieve the symptoms of conditions causing backache and tired feeling. When you are bothered by backache and tired feeling due to kidney action you can depend on Doan's Kidney Pills as many happy users have done during the 70 years. Look for Doan's at any drug counter.

CAHA Boosts Minor Hockey Age Limit

By KEN CLARK

BRANDON (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Monday gave a two-month boost to the maximum age limit for amateur players from junior down to peewee. It goes into effect in the 1964-65 season.

Under the new setup, the junior category will be open to players under 20 on the May 31 preceding the start of the season in which they will play. The existing date which will remain in effect next season is July 31.

The CAHA executive approved the change 11 to 9 at the 46th annual meeting which opened Monday.

The move is designed to give some players another year of eligibility.

Juveniles in the new system will be eligible to play if they are under 18 on May 31 in the same manner. The cutoff date received a corresponding change in all the lower categories down to peewee or its equivalent.

APPROVE PROPOSAL

The CAHA approved a proposal to ease the restriction on a player taking a centre-ice pass from behind his own blueline.

Under the proposal a player may take the pass after crossing the centre line as long as the puck precedes him across. The existing rule says the receiving player must touch the puck before it goes over centre or it is offside.

The British Columbia branch proposal now must be approved by the joint professional amateur committee.

The CAHA also adopted the professional-style penalty shot. The pro-style penalty shot, in which the player taking the shot picked up the puck at the blue line in front of the goal tender and went in from there.

A proposed icing rule is at odds with the professional rule which says that icing is called when a player touches the puck after it crosses the goal line. The CAHA wants the icing call made as soon as the puck passes the goal line, before a player touches it.

This system is already used by all amateur clubs except the juniors and some juveniles. Pro-sponsored juvenile clubs can use the professional rule anyway.

All CAHA also gave member branches the power to make compulsory the use of helmets by players in junior and lower categories and face masks for minor league goal tenders.

Secretary - Manager Gordon Jerkes of Melville, Sask., reported a $2,837 surplus on 1962 operations, the first time the CAHA has ended a year in the black for five years.

Total player registration in the 1962-63 season rose to 165,672, more than 22,000 higher than the previous season.

May Be End Of Senior OHA

Windsor, Chatham Join I.H.L.

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP)—Windsor and Chatham were granted franchises in the International Hockey League Monday.

The two Ontario cities were approved for membership by the IHL Board of Governors. The board announced that Minneapolis was withdrawing and that St. Paul is considering a transfer to the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

The governors gave St. Paul franchise owners until 10 a.m. today to decide whether to remain in the IHL. Minneapolis pulled out because of financial troubles, the board said.

The addition of Windsor and Chatham assures the league of at least seven teams next season. Others are Des Moines, Iowa, a newcomer; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Omaha, Neb.; and Muskegon and Port Huron, Mich.

HAD FRANCHISE

Windsor has held a franchise in the IHL for several years but never exercised it before. Chatham belonged to the league for a number of years ago.

Representatives of the two teams said Monday they were not sure of their status concerning release from the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series but were prepared to go to court to obtain it.

The acceptance of the two teams leaves the future of the OHA loop in doubt. Kitchener-Waterloo announced earlier it was dropping out and Galt and Woodstock are unknown quantities.

Sarnia has indicated a desire to return to the league but so far no definite action has been taken.

Defeat Trudeaus 8-6

Trenton Flyers Grab Opener

By GARRY ALEXENDER
Staff Sportswriter

RCAF Flyers welcomed Trudeau Motors into the Belleville and District Softball League by outlasting the newcomers 8-6 as the loop opened the 1963 season at the CNRA Park last night.

Despite the chilly, damp weather, a fair crowd took in the opener but did not see the best of ball in a rather loosely played affair.

Trudeaus take on the defending champion Joyce Real Estate Club at the same park tonight at 6:45. Bobcats visit Trenton Wednesday night and play host to Joyces on Thursday.

The Flyers put Trudeaus on the spot right from the first pitch, jumping into a 4-0 lead in the opening stanza. Trudeau battled back and finally moved in front 6-5 at the end of four frames but were blanked from there out.

RCAF tied it 6-6 in the fifth on Cole's triple and Wannamaker's single after two were out. Drake drove in the winning run in the sixth, singling Butterfield home, again after two were out for a 7-6 score. Mitts' banged a bad-bounce double over first and went all the way on a bad throw to the infield to wrap it up in the top of the ninth.

Big Bob Butterfield, back in a Flyer sweater after a year with Joyces, scattered six hits over the route to pick up the victory. He struck out seven, walked seven and hit two batters but bore down to leave 13 Trudeau runners stranded.

Roly Campbell was the loser, coming on in relief of Bobby Ethier with one out in the first inning. He gave up seven of the Flyer nine hits, fanned four and passed seven.

Ethier got in trouble early when the Flyers nicked him for hits by Girard and Cole. A couple of wild pitches and as many errors helped send him to the showers and two more runs scored on passed balls.

Duggan singled sharply to drive home a pair for the losers in the bottom of the first and finally put his team in front when he doubled home two more in the fourth but that was the last damage to Butterfield.

Donny Cole, with a triple and single, and Leroy Wannamaker, with a double and single, topped the RCAF hitters. Bill Mitts and Will Kennedy had a double each while singles went to Gil Girard, Roger Drake, who drove in a pair and Butterfield.

Gary Duggan paced Trudeaus with his double, single and four rbi. Paul Zakos collected a double, Rick Locke, Chuck Rowbotham and "Fug" Kellar a single apiece.

Trudeaus:	Locke cf, Perumbe as, Zakos rf, Duggan 1b, Baker 2b, Rowbotham c, Kellar 3b, Hall lf, Ethier p, Campbell p, Whiting (p.h 8th) McKibbon c.

Moira S.S. Wins COSSA Track Meet

BCI Girl Athlete Stars

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

A pretty Belleville Collegiate Institute girl athlete stole the individual championship glory from the boys at the CSOSSA Track and Field Meet at Trenton on Saturday.

Sheryl Drysdale, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Drysdale, Victoria Avenue, broke three COSSA senior girls' records and assisted in another. She won the 60 yards (7.7), 100 yards (12.1), the standing broad jump (7' 6"), and anchored the school relay team to a new 440 records of 56.5.

Miss Drysdale was the only athlete, boy or girl, to win more than two firsts at the meet. Unaware of her sensational achievement she stepped shyly from the winner's pedestal with four "first" ribbons while a small coterie of BCI students cheered.

Moira Secondary School won the COSSA championship with 58½points from a field of 38 schools from the Quinte, Lakeshore and Kawartha Districts. Moira, breaking four records, took eight firsts, four seconds and five thirds.

The winners nosed out Lindsay Collegiate (56 points), and Trenton High School (51), last year's champions, in a down-to-the-wire battle. BCI finished fifth with 36 points; Quinte S.S. with nine points and the OSD eight.

BREAK 22 RECORDS

Twenty-two new records were set at the meet, twelve of them by the senior and junior girls divisions. It was a joint points meet.

Peterborough's Kenner CI (40½); BCIVS (36); and Port Hope CI (31) were the only other top schools. Quinte S.S. scored nine points and the OSD eight.

Heal of Kenner was the unofficial senior boy's champion with two firsts and a second. Newton of Trinity set a 10.1 record in the 100 with Port Hope's Pregnell breaking marks in the shot put (52.4) and discus (138.4½). Moira's McMartin set a hurdle record of 17.1, with schoolmate Steele second.

SHERYL DRYSDALE

Moira's Stan Woodcock won the mile and basked temporarily in the limelight of a sensational performance. Three times clocked him in 4:20.9 but this later was adjusted to 4:30.9. Woodcock finished third in the 880. Vaughan of BCIVS was third in the hop, step and jump. Trinity won the 440 relay and Trenton High School the mile.

St. Peters' O'Connor took the 220 in 24.1: Anderson's Bedard won the 440 in 54.4 and Trenton's MacDonald the 880 in 2:24.4. Lindsay's Reeser won the two miles in 10:23.

Crowter of Kenner, Richard Eves of Quinte and Moira's Ron Faulkner were tops in the intermediate boys division. Crowter won the 100 and 220. Faulkner took the 440 and lost the 100 by a whisker. Eves won the pole vault, was second in the hurdles behind Moira's Rod Glen who broke the record with 15.4 and third in the discus.

Glen Phelps and Deckie of Moira finished third in the 220, 440 and 880, with Bailey third in hurdles.

Trinity's Anderson looked the best in the junior boys' division taking the 100 in a record 10.9 and winning the 220 in 24.7. Moira's Bob Watson set a new hurdle mark of 17.3 with schoolmate Young third. David Beresford of Moira won the pole vault.

Edgar of Oshawa won the 440 in 56.5 and Port Hope's Allison took the 880 in 2:18.5. Kenner's Harris set a discus record of 101.6.

QUINTE GIRLS TOPS

Besides Miss Drysdale, Heather Orr of BCIVS also stood out in the senior girls meet. Miss Orr finished second in the 60 and 100 and won the 220 in 28.4. She teamed with Miss Drysdale, Judy Ingram and Carol Grey to set a 440 relay record of 56.5 Miss Ingram finished second in the 220.

Win OSD's Miss Morgan set a record in the shotput with a toss of 27 feet 5½ inches.

Six of the meet's records went by the boards in the junior girls' section. Miss Dunning of Moira won the standing broad jump with a new mark of seven feet 3½ inches. Sayers of Adam Scott won a record 80 yards in 7.05 and was second in the 100.

Adam Scott's Bell set a record 220 mark of 29.6 and another in the javelin throw with a toss of 95 feet 6½ inches. BCIVS Davidson was third in the discus throw, Lindsay's relay team broke the 440 mark in 57.5. Miss Leevis, BCI, was third in the running broad jump with Miss Lewis of the same school third in the 220.

The COSSA Quinte District girls easily out distanced those from Lakeshore and Kawartha. They won seven firsts, six of them new records, four seconds and three thirds in 20 events. Of this number BCIVS won five first (four records) three seconds and three thirds.

The meet was excellently convened by Bob Burleigh, physical education teacher at Trenton High School. The track was surprisingly fast after the heavy rains of the morning and previous night.

Winners and runners-up of all track events and the winners in field events with runners-up if they better the standards, and the winning relay teams only, will take part in the OFSAA meet scheduled for Ancaster, Ont., next Saturday.

Win Eleven-Innings Thriller

Kenmors Slip By Oshawa 4-3

Duffy Follwell's towering left - field smash with three mates aboard gave the Kenmors' an eleventh-innings 4-3 victory over Oshawa in a Lakeshore League opening thriller here yesterday.

Oshawa cut a Kenmor 2-0 lead by a run in the fourth and tied it in the seventh off three hits and a passed ball. The teams went scoreless until the eleventh when the visitors got to the Kenmors second relief pitcher Gordie Vaughan for four clouts.

Good defensive work laid the Oshawans to a single run and a 3-2 lead. The Kenmors came to bat and Larry Mavety started a five-bit parade with a mighty triple. Bradley singled in the tying run.

Glen Clarke singled and Vaughn grounded out. Ricky Locke came up with the fourth hit of the innings and the sacks were loaded.

Follwell poled that mighty clout over the head of the Oshawa left-fielder and that was that. It would have been at least a triple at any other time.

Coach Sid Forster used three of his hurlers with Latchford the starter going to the seventh with two out. He gave up nine hits for two runs. Stan Reid was taken out after two scoreless one-hit innings and Gordy Vaughn took over. He won the game but gave up the four eleventh innings hits.

Oshawa's Stone gave up five hits for two runs and Fletcher finished yielding the other seven Kenmor clouts.

It was a close-up-and-tuck battle all the way and both clubs came up with some fine baseball. The Kenmors were good in the defensive clutches.

Whiteley, Oshawa third-sacker, looked like the star of the game with a standout defensive performance and three singles at the plate. Dowe and Reid hit a double and single for the losers with McConkey coming up with two singles.

Ricky Locke hit a double and single for the Kenmors with Follwell coming up with a single and that game-winning clout. Mavety hit a triple, Asselstine a double. Larry Soden hit a pair of singles with Weston, Bradley and Reid clouting one-baggers.

The Kenmors bobbled three times with Oshawa committing two errors. Oshawa came up with a sparkling double-play in the eighth to cut off a potential Kenmor rally.

Incidentally the Oshawa-Kenmors game scheduled for Saturday at Oshawa was rained out. And Ajax trimmed Kingston 10-1 in their opener on Sunday.

OSHAWA — McLean, Dowe, Reid, Whiteley, Mickias, Ryan, Howell, McConkery, Jones, Wood, Fletcher, Godrich, Hall.

KENMORS — Locke, Follwell, Soden, Elliott, Asselstine, Weston, Mavety, Bradley, Clarke, Latchford Reid, Vaughn.

The score:

Hydroplane Races Are Postponed

A forty-miles-an-hour breeze put a gusty quietus on the Hydroplane Racing Club's opening race program Sunday.

The races will be run next Sunday, club president Doug Storey said today.

The wind whipped the water into foam-capped waves, too big a hazard for boats of this type.

An on-the-spot check with the RCAF weather station revealed "windy all day," and the races were postponed.

MUST DEFEND

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Canadian middleweight champion Blair Richardson must defend his title against Ron Brothers of Saint John, N.B., within six months, Sam Erman, president of the Canadian Boxing Federation said here Sunday. Brothers has been seeking a title bout for nearly a year.

Boston Drops To Fourth

White Sox, Orioles Share Lead

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Milt Pappas and Dick Drott pitch in two different leagues, but both are students of the same school.

Pappas, 24 - year - old Baltimore Oriole right-hander who earned his Paul Richards diploma a few years back, and Drott, a 25-year-old Houston Colts right-hander who graduated from the Paul Richards school only recently, came up with outstanding pitching performances Monday night.

Pappas limited Detroit Tigers to five hits, pitching Baltimore into a tie for the American League lead by blanking Tigers 6-0. Drott checked Pittsburgh Pirates on the same amount of hits as Houston defeated Pirates 3-0 in the only National League game scheduled.

In the other American League games, Chicago White Sox moved up into the top spot with Orioles by edging Washington Senators 5-4, Minnesota Twins dropped Boston Red Sox from first to fourth by downing Red Sox 8-5 and Cleveland Indians whipped Los Angeles Angels 7-3. New York and Kansas City were idle.

WINS FOURTH

Pappas, a Richards protege when the master manipulator of pitchers was manager at Baltimore, recorded his second shutout of the season and his fourth complete game in bringing his record to 4-0. He struck out seven and lowered his earned run average to an amazing 1.17.

Orioles, meanwhile, backed him with four homers that provided all the runs for their sixth victory in the last seven games. Jack Brandt and Boog Powell each hit two-run homers. Jim Gentile and Jerry Adair connected for solo shots.

Drott, a Richards reclamation project now that he's Colts general manager, surprised teacher even more, pitching his first complete game in 33 starts over four years—since June 14, 1959. And it followed by only three days the no-hitter pitched by Don Nottebart, still another Richards' pupil at Houston.

Lifted from Chicago Cubs in the 1961 expansion draft, Drott has been trying to regain the form that made him a 15-game winner for Cubs in 1957 and one of the league's most promising prospects. Under the Richards' method, he was brought along slowly and now has won two of his last three starts and brought his earned run average down to 1.80.

GET FOUR HITS

Colts managed only four hits off Pittsburgh starter Don Cardwell in the seven innings he worked, but put together two for the only run they needed when Bob Aspromonte singled and Johnny Temple tripled in the fifth inning.

An unearned run came across in the seventh when Bob Lillis singled, stole second, continued to third on catcher Smoky Burgess' bad throw and scored on a sacrifice fly by John Bateman.

White Sox scored the decisive runs in the sixth inning on a single by Floyd Robinson, Joe Cunningham's double and sacrifice flies by Dave Nicholson and Charlie Maxwell, but needed Jim Brosnan's 2 1-3 innings of tight relief pitching to subdue Senators. Brosnan now has allowed only one earned run in 11 1-3 innings since he was acquired from Cincinnati two weeks ago.

A three-run homer by Earl Battey that capped a four-run first inning uprising and solo shots by Bob Allison and Harmon Killebrew powered Twins and dropped Red Sox all the way down to fourth place.

Consecutive third inning homers by Willie Kirkland and Tito Francona gave Indians a lead they never relinquished. Despite the addition of four unearned runs Cleveland had to hold on as Leon Wagner drove in five runs for Los Angeles with two homers. They were the 12th and 13th.

Hull, Ottawa Official Reinstated

BRANDON, Man. (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has ordered the reinstatement of Michael Larkin as president of the Hull Ottawa and Junior Hockey League.

Larkin was relieved of his duties recently by the Ottawa District Hockey Association after a controversy developed over his handling of a league playoff between Pembroke and Smiths Falls. He awarded one of the games to Pembroke on the ground that Smiths Falls had an ineligible player, Howie Smolkin.

Later, the association reversed Larkin's decision and gave the game to Smiths Falls.

Larkin appealed to the CAHA and the executive Sunday reinstated him. The CAHA found that Smolkin was not properly registered and was therefore ineligible.

But Larkin was wrong in giving the game to Pembroke and the Ottawa association was wrong in giving the game to Smiths Falls, the CAHA said. It should have been declared null and void and replayed, the CAHA said.

At the same time the Ottawa association was right in taking over the balance of the playoffs under the constitution but wrong in relieving Larkin.

BALL KILLS BOY
